"Thanks George."

This is a phrase heard many time throughout the day at Olympic Citgo on South Main Street in the Village. To locals, no last name is required, as they have come to know gas station owner George Roukounakis on a first-name basis over the last three decades.

"It would be exactly 35 years this September," he said, adding, "It's been a very, very good 35 years. If I could do it all over, I'd do the same thing."

But after all his years in town, Roukounakis has decided to "semi-retire" from his post. He said he feels it is time for a change and while he's not sure exactly what his future might hold, he feels it is time to pass the reins on to someone else. "I'm going to take some time off and I'm not even sure I'm

TOWN ELECTION

Carlson, Dormitzer pull papers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Nomination papers for the 2007 Annual Town Election became available Wednesday, and some candidates didn't waste any time pulling papers.

Roughly one hour after Town Hall opened Jan. 3, Paul Carlson had made his way to the Town Clerk's office to take step one in his campaign for the Board of Selectmen. There are two three-year seats open on the Board of Selectmen, currently held by Chairman Ralph Dormitzer and Vice Chairman Rob Spofford. Spofford announced in December he will not seek reelection, but Dormitzer pulled papers shortly after Carlson.

A 33-year resident of the town, Carlson, now retired, said he is at a point where he has the time as well as financial, business and managerial experience to enable him to work hard as a member of the board to improve the quality of life enjoyed in the town.

"I love this town, it's a great place to live and now, I'm not traveling as much on business and I'd like to contribute," he said.

Carlson earned an MBA at Columbia University, which was followed by a 30-year career in mutual fund management. He held senior positions with major Boston firms. Ten years ago, he began working as a resident adviser on financial market development in many former Soviet bloc countries. Assignments included developing training programs for local professionals and advising officials on writing legislation reforming pension systems and regulating mutual funds. "From1996 to late 2005 I spent a lot of time in Romania, Bulgaria and the Ukraine helping develop their financial markets," he said. Carlson said he hopes to be given the

Overview at Selectmen's meeting Monday

Cohasset is about to embark upon a new initiative that will have its residents coming together over a common interest. Through a program called "One Book One Cohasset," fostered by the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the collective reading of one book will spark a host of discussions and activities aimed at bringing the community closer together.

Library Director Jackie Rafferty, who came on board in Cohasset in 2003, said beginning a One Book program in Cohasset has been on her "to do" list for some time. This year, she decided the time was right and asked the Friends of the Library if it would be interested in helping begin the program and now, the library is readying itself for the big launch Feb. 5.

"It is a very popular program that was first launched in Seattle and spread to Chicago and New York," she said. Today, programs span the country. "The concept is, the entire community reads the same book to see what will happen," and the theory is, a common dialogue will open up and residents will begin participating in activities planned in conjunction with the book.

Representatives from the library will come before the Board of Selectmen Monday, Jan. 8 to give a brief overview of the program. Rafferty said she has spoken with Town Manager Bill Griffin, Linda Elworthy of the Council on Elder Affairs, and the schools, and everyone is very excited about getting things started.

The library has chosen a book for the community to read, which will soon be unveiled. At the kickoff festivities, the first people to arrive will receive a free copy of the book as well as bookmarks, a calendar of events, balloons and refreshments.

The One Book program was initiated by the Washington Center for the Book in 1998. Local towns including Norwell, Dartmouth, Canton and Stoughton have all had success with the One Book concept.

Rafferty said the One Book program will support the library's mission of Father with inebriated son seeks help

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At about 12:06 a.m., Thursday (Dec. 28), a Scituate father was transporting his 17-year-old son to the hospital for evaluation because he had been drinking heavily that night, police said. But the teen became so unruly, the father who was also accompanied by his 20-year-old son, diverted to the Cohasset Police Station to ask for assistance.

The officers came out of roll call to the parking lot where the 17-year-old got out of control and struck his father with an open hand in the presence of the police officers, Sgt. William Quigley said. At that point, the teen was arrested for assault and battery. The teen was evaluated by Cohasset paramedics and was held overnight at the station. He was transported to court in the morning and arraigned on the A&B charge, police said.

Smashed windows

Smashed car windows are becoming a regular occurrence in Cohasset and in neighboring Hingham, police said. Over the past week, there were two more Cohasset incidents that turned up in the police log.

At about 10:15 a.m., on Christmas Day, a motorist driving by noticed that the front passenger-side window in a black 1999 Volvo was smashed. The car was parked on Elm Street in the Cove across from the Cohasset Harbor Inn. The car was registered to a Scituate resident and the incident is under investigation, police said.

The next incident was reported at 8 a.m., Tuesday (Dec. 26) by a caller from the Whitney Woods parking lot who said when she came back from her walk, she noticed the car – a 1997 Dodge Caravan – that was parked next to hers had its driver's side window smashed out.

When the officers arrived, the owner of the Caravan exited the trails from her walk and subsequently reported that her purse with credit cards, cash and her driver's license were missing, police said.

Sgt. William Quigley said there are signs posted at Whitney Woods warning visitors to hide their valuables out of plain view in the trunk. Police say the B&E to the Caravan occurred sometime between 7:15 and 8 a.m. The victim, who was from New York, was spending the holidays with her parents in Cohasset.

Sgt. Quigley said Hingham has had similar car break-ins at Wompatuck State Park and Turkey Hill.

Shoplifting

A 21-year-old Cohasset woman is facing a shoplifting charge for allegedly stealing a pint of Dr. McGillicuddy Cherry Schnapps from the Village Wine & Liquors Thursday night (Dec. 28). The store reported the incident the next morning. The bottle of schnapps sells for $9.99.

Chimney fire

The fire department responded to a 9-1-1 call last month about a chimney fire "out of control."

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said as it turned out, the problem was with the fireplace in that the fire was burning quite high. The problem was not with the chimney itself.

He said there was no extension; firefighters, who used gloves and buckets, removed the fire from the house. Firefighters do not usually use water to extinguish a fire in a fireplace because of the amount of steam that can result and the potential for cracking the tile or brick, Silvia said.

Silvia said as a general rule, residents should have their chimneys inspected and/or cleaned once a year. He said most chimney fires are caused by creosote buildup inside the flue or chimney, and can move out into the adjoining wall space.

Creosote is a black, tarry substance. It is a very flammable byproduct of combustion that can build up within the smoke pipe and chimney and then ignite.

Backpack

A man reaching for something in his son's backpack in the backseat was stopped at about 4:30 p.m., on Friday (Dec. 29) after a cell phone caller reported the man was "driving all over the road" and appeared to be intoxicated, police said. Police put out a BOLO (Be On The Lookout) and the car was stopped on North Main Street. After talking to the operator, police determined he was not drunk. The man explained he had been looking for something in his son's backpack that may have caused him to drive erratically for a short time.

Traffic violations

At 9:10 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 27), an officer on radar patrol on Hull Street observed a black Chevy Trailblazer speeding. The officer stopped the vehicle and subsequently determined through a computer check that the registration was revoked due to failure to pay insurance premiums.

The operator, a 34-year-old Brockton man, will be summonsed to court on the charges of operating an uninsured motor vehicle with its registration suspended and speeding.

Drive-off

Police were able to track down a motorist who drove off without paying for $28 worth of gas from Leo's Exxon on Sunday afternoon (Dec. 31). The officers were able to work with a partial plate number. They called the woman, a Scituate resident, who said she did not realize she had not paid and would make restitution.

Revoked registration

At about 4:45 p.m., Friday (Dec. 29), an officer observed a car with revoked registration near Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road. (Police receive weekly updates about vehicles with revoked registration and watch out for them).

The officer stopped the vehicle and identified the driver – a 36-year-old Cohasset woman, who was not the registered owner, but who was driving on a suspended license. The owner of the 1993 Mercury is a 34-year-old Revere man. The woman is being summonsed for operating on a suspended license; and the man is being summonsed on allowing an unlicensed driver to operate this car and for operating an uninsured/unregistered motor vehicle.

Hit & run

A Scituate woman's car was damaged while she was at Feng Shui at Cohasset Plaza on Friday (Dec. 29). The incident was reported at 3:14 p.m., after the woman exited the restaurant and discovered damage to the driver's side of her 2001 VW. She had parked next to a large silver truck and found silver paint on her car; it appears the truck may have sideswiped her car, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Cup of wine

At just past 12 p.m., Tuesday (Dec. 26), a Hingham resident shopping at Cohasset Plaza saw a man exit the liquor store at the plaza, get into a vehicle, open a bottle of wine, pour himself some wine into a paper cup, and drive off.

The witness called police on her cell phone and was able to provide a description of the driver, the vehicle (Chevy SUV), and the plate number.

A few minutes later an officer on patrol on North Main Street observed the vehicle. He stopped the car and found the open container of wine. But at this point the man who was reported as being the operator was now in the passenger seat and his son was operating the car on a learner's permit.

Police cited the father with driving with an open container of alcohol (a $500 civil violation); police explained that when someone has a learner's permit he or she is actually operating on the license of the passenger with the valid license.

Pedestrian struck

A 13-year-old Cohasset girl was apparently grazed by a 2000 Chrysler registered to a Hull resident while she was walking her dog along Forest Avenue at 4:45 p.m. Friday (Dec. 29). She was walking against traffic (toward the water) and the Chrysler was traveling toward Route 3A. The girl was transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries. The operator was not cited in the incident; it appeared the girl may have stepped off the shoulder into the travel lane and the car could not avoid her, police said.

Crocker faces arraignment

Charged with stealing yacht club money

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"The Cohasset Police Department worked with the State Police and the Norfolk County DA's Office in this investigation and will assist the DA's office in the prosecution of Mr. Davenport Crocker."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Davenport B. "Dave" Crocker, Sr., is due to be arraigned Jan. 18 in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham on charges of stealing money from the Cohasset Yacht Club from 2001 to 2005. Crocker, who is from an old, respected Cohasset family, served as the club's accountant for many years.

Yacht club officials discovered the alleged theft of about $427,000 in late 2005 and subsequently sent a letter out to the 245 members of the 111-year-old facility. The letter, which caused an uproar among club membership, explained the yacht club agreed not to prosecute Crocker if he would repay the money.

However, when the news broke last January, Cohasset police launched a criminal investigation and indicated the yacht club would cooperate fully.

"The Cohasset Police Department worked with the State Police and the Norfolk County DA's Office in this investigation and will assist the DA's office in the prosecution of Mr. Davenport Crocker," Police Chief James Hussey said this week.

On Dec. 7 a Grand Jury indicted Crocker, 70, on one count of larceny over $250 by scheme on diverse dates during that time period. "By scheme" usually means the crime took place over a period of time.

Crocker did not return a message left on his answering machine at his Hingham office; his attorney could not be reached by press time.

According to the yacht club letter sent last year, Crocker repaid $200,000 and agreed to pay an additional $260,000 within 18 months. Commodore F. Wisner Murray stated in the letter sent to the membership that the $260,000 was secured by a second mortgage on Crocker's condominium in Florida.

Reached by telephone Tuesday, Murray declined to comment.

In another case, Crocker has repaid the $42,100 he stole from the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club where he served as the club's treasurer; a theft that also came to light in 2005. He was arraigned on the larceny charge on April 14, 2006. The case was continued without a finding for six months following a May 18, 2006 hearing at which the District Attorney's Office reported that Crocker had repaid the Rotary Club in full. On Nov. 17, 2006, the case was dismissed with the condition that Crocker pay court fees that included a $90 victim witness fee and $21 monthly probation fee.

Firefighter graduates from academy

To graduate, students must demonstrate proficiency in life safety, search and rescue, ladder operations, water supply, pump operation and fire attack.

Chief Robert Silvia has announced Firefighter/Paramedic Robert R. Martin II has graduated from the Massachusetts Firefighting Academy Recruit Training Program.

Martin is a member of the 174th class of the Massachusetts Firefighting Academy's 60-day Recruit Firefighting Program. The Massachusetts Firefighting Academy, a division of the Department of Fire Services, offers this program tuition free. The 70 graduates, including two women and 68 men, represent 42 fire departments.

Today's firefighters do far more than fight fires, Silvia said. They are the first ones called to respond to chemical and environmental emergencies ranging from the suspected presence of carbon monoxide to a gas leak. They may be called to rescue a child who has fallen through the ice or who has locked himself in a bathroom. They rescue people from stalled elevators and those who are trapped in vehicle accidents. They test and maintain their equipment, ranging from self-contained breathing apparatus to hydrants to hoses, power tools and apparatus.

At the Massachusetts Firefighting Academy they learn all these skills and more from certified fire instructors who are also experienced firefighters. Students learn all the basic skills they need to respond to fires and to contain and control them, Silvia said. They are also given training in public fire education, hazardous material incident mitigation, flammable liquids, stress management, water rescue procedures, confined space rescue techniques and rappelling. The intensive 12-week program for municipal firefighters involves classroom instruction, physical fitness training, firefighter skills training and live firefighting practice.

Students receive classroom training in all basic firefighter skills. They practice first under non-fire conditions and then during controlled fire conditions. To graduate, students must demonstrate proficiency in life safety, search and rescue, ladder operations, water supply, pump operation and fire attack. Fire attack operations range from mailbox fires to multiple-floor or multiple-room structural fires. Upon successful completion of the Recruit Program all students have met national standards of National Fire Prevention Association 1001 and are certified to the level of Firefighter I and II, and Hazardous Materials Fire Responder Operational Level by the Massachusetts Fire Training Council.

SNOW?

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone enjoyed their New Year's celebration and for those who needed a bit of recovery time, that you were able to get it. January is off to a great start weather-wise but it feels a bit weird to have it be as mild as it has been. Who knows, maybe a bit of snow will come our way in February. If you have any photos, stories or event information, send them in to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm at my aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com email address. Have a good week and enjoy reading the column.

The sale of these cookies also generates revenue for the troops and our local council to support quality Girl Scout programs. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Beth Marsden-Gilman at 781-383-1811. Thank you for supporting the girl scouts. Your purchase helps girls develop self-confidence, business skills and teamwork!

PAJAMA GAME

It's not just part of a song from the fast-paced Broadway favorite, it's the experience that actors will have if they try out and win roles in the Cohasset Dramatic Clubs spring production. Auditions for the CDCs production, The Pajama Game will be held at Cohasset Town Hall on Sun., Jan. 7 at 6 p.m., and Mon., Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. Callbacks will be Tues., Jan. 9. The show which tells the tale of a workplace romance in the midst of a battle of the sexes and a battle between labor and management features four male leads and three female leads, ranging in stage age from mid-20s to 40. There is also an ensemble of about 20 actors, age range, mid-teens and up. Minimum stage age for this production is 14. At the auditions, actors will be asked to sing 16 bars of a favorite song of their own choosing. Readings will be from the script and there will be a light movement component to the auditions. The CDC welcomes both returning actors anxious for a new role, and new players, hoping for a new and exciting experience. Directed by Mark Bono, The Pajama Game will run the last three weekends in March (including April 1). For more information, contact Mark Bono at 617-827-0887.

LACROSSE BOOSTERS

Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (781-383-9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event and the boosters will be sure to run out of tickets before the 20th, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and we need the support of the entire community! The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls.

This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to our younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Our recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

Historic 1811 house getting some 'smaller' renovations

Zoning prevents bigger plans from happening

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Developer Wayne Sawchuk has some changes in store for the Samuel Bates House in the Village. While construction is about to commence, the plans do not fully encompass the renovations he would ultimately like to see take place at the site.

For more than 1-1/2 years, Sawchuk has been trying to expand the building, also known as the "1811 building," which houses businesses located at 35 to 39 South Main St., including Bia Bistro. His plans would increase the building's size by roughly 6,000 square feet, adding retail space on the first floor and apartments on the second floor.

However, zoning regulations have impeded the process, as a lot size of 40,000 square feet is currently required in the Village for any expansion and his lot does not meet that requirement. Articles on the Special Town Meeting Warrant in December that would have changed Village zoning and allow development on smaller lots were defeated.

Revised versions of the articles are slated to come before the town again at the Annual Town Meeting this spring. While Sawchuk hasn't given up hope that they may pass and he might one day be allowed to build the apartments he has been planning, for now he said he can no longer put off renovating the building.

Any changes made will be within the confines of the current footprint. "We can make it nicer, but we can't change the layout," said Sawchuk, adding it is a shame expansion is prohibited because even a small amount of change to the footprint would have allowed for a much better layout for the two apartments that exist in the building. He said he would have liked to have been able to change the layout of the kitchen in one of the apartments to make it more functional and also expand a bathroom, and neither can be done.

But Sawchuk said even with the expansion restrictions, the apartments will be improved to the full extent they can be. "We can sand down the hardwood floors and restore a lot of things," he said, noting he will bring in new countertops and appliances and completely upgrade everything that exists. However, he said his preference would have been to do the extensive renovation he had planned and provide the town with brand new apartments.

On the outside, Sawchuk said he plans to replace a deck and the back stairway. There are also roof repairs that need to be made. A new foundation will be poured for a new entrance to the Sports Closet to make it handicap accessible. New windows will be installed and numerous maintenance items will be addressed.

Sawchuk also has plans to add granite and fencing similar to what the historical society has in front of the Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum on Elm Street. Behind the fencing will be a new patio for Bia Bistro that will elevate diners so they are not at the same level as the sidewalk. He said although this has been a particularly mild winter, he would prefer to wait for all the outside work to begin until the spring.

While renovations are being completed on the Sports Closet side of the building, the business will be closed. Sawchuk said he anticipates the shop would be able to reopen by the end of March. Bia Bistro will be open during construction.

Sawchuk said he will continue to seek permits to expand his building and bring housing units to the village, but if nothing comes to fruition by the spring, he may opt to take another route. If building housing is not an option, he said he has the right to expand his building for the purposes of providing retail and office space, and he would take that route.

Village zoning back in the spotlight

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Planning Board "village discussion" with the Economic Development Committee on Wednesday night may have been a sign of things to come.

Opinions differed and emotions ran high when talking about the downtown area which is seen as the heart of Cohasset.

A multi-board meeting — chaired by Al Moore of the Planning Board — that was scheduled to also include Selectmen, Zoning Board of Appeals, and the Sewer Commission as well as the Planning Board and EDC was slated for 6 p.m. yesterday (Thursday) after the Mariner went to press.

While EDC Chairman Peter Brown tried to remain civil on Wednesday night and assure the Planning Board that his committee is not trying to do an end-run around the Planning Board's authority – Peter Pratt of the Planning Board did not believe him.

Pratt set off a few sparks during the lengthy discussion and at one point, got into a heated verbal exchange with resident, village property owner and local businessman Wayne Sawchuk.

The crux of the issue appears to be the current state of Village viability and whether there is enough urgency to propel zoning changes that would make it easier to add apartments to the village.

The issue is important because the viability of the Village is seen by many town officials and residents as a critical part of what makes Cohasset a small town with character, and a desirable place to live.

Pratt – who seemed to have backing from board members Moore and Robert Sturdy – wants to allow time for the development of the village "build-out plan" that got the go ahead at the fall special Town Meeting when voters allocated funds for consulting services. The Request for Proposals for the village consultant is front and center on the agenda, Pratt said.

Pratt is concerned, as is Moore, about "unintended consequences" of moving too quickly and said there was not enough time between now and this spring's annual Town Meeting to fully vet the downtown zoning changes that might be needed.

However, Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey stressed it is critical that village efforts not stall and continue to move forward.

From Wednesday's discussion, it looks as though at the very least the annual Town Meeting will be asked to establish a separate "Downtown Business District" that could set the stage for future zoning bylaw changes. Currently the downtown district is packaged with business districts on the waterfront in the harbor, in North Cohasset and even in Beechwood in terms of the zoning bylaw. While the downtown district would be separate – there would be no immediate change in the zoning in terms of usage and dimensions, the Planning Board said.

But the so-called "40,000-square-foot" requirement is seen as critical. Essentially as it stands now, the current zoning bylaw prohibits adding multi-family dwellings in the downtown business district on lots of less than that size. No lot in the village currently meets that criteria.

Officials have speculated that the 40,000-square-foot requirement was adopted as far back as 1978 to prevent Cohasset Village from becoming more residential with less business. But today, more residents living downtown is seen as an economic driver that would keep the village vital by brining in more foot traffic and shoppers.

The EDC, whose charge is to look at ways of increasing the tax revenue in town, sees multi-family dwellings above existing stores as a plus. "If it is possible we would like to see some adjustment to see that 40,000-square-foot (bylaw) be amended," Brown told the Planning Board. "It is important to get things moving in the district."

Pratt stressed the 40,000-square-foot requirement is an issue that the consultant would need to look at. He said there is a two-step process: in the spring coming up with the change in the dedication of the downtown district which would in itself involve a public policy debate while simultaneously signaling that in the fall Special Town Meeting various substantial, zoning changes could come forward.

"The most important part of doing this is building public consensus of how we move ahead," Pratt said.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy talked at some length about the fact the train station was on Route 3A and how the new Transit Oriented District could hurt the Village.

But Ivimey stressed it was time "to look at the next 25 years, not the last 25." "We see problems coming for the downtown and we need to solve them now," he said.

Ivimey said the issue is how to balance all the competing interests such as parking, commercial and retail, and housing without suffering form a "paralysis of analysis." "We have to move forward – this can't just be talked about and talked about," he said.

Moore, the Planning Board chairman, said he has heard a lot about "solving the problem" but has heard "precious little about defining the problem."

He said the downtown area has evolved over 300 years with no plan at all and maybe that "had something to do with its character."

"If we make changes we have to be careful not to strip the character to make it pretty," he said.

going to like it," he said, adding he may come to find he does not enjoy waking up in the morning without anyplace to go. "It might be weird."

Roukounakis' business just may be one of the longest running in Cohasset Village, and he said for that reason, he has many wonderful memories. He said some of his fondest have been when filming crews have come to town. He said during the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick," his garage was shut down and Jack Nicholson used to park his trailer behind the station. "He would cut through and one day I told him the Celtics beat the Lakers. He gave me a bad look and said something pretty bad to me," he recalled with a laugh.

He also said his dog, Athena, made her film debut in the movie, when she was trained to jump up on Susan Sarandon as she left the meat market downtown.

During the filming of "House Sitter" with Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin, he remembered a day when Martin was riding around downtown on a bicycle. Roukounakis said Martin would pull up at the station on his bike and make the bell go off and then look around and smile.

But those memories are in the past and the future of the station lies in the hands of new owner Tom McBrien, owner of McBrien's gas station on Gannett Road in North Scituate, next to Jamie's Pub. McBrien was working alongside Roukounakis in the Citgo station as of Tuesday this week.

"It's the first of the month, so he's (Roukounakis) helping me with the inspections," said McBrien, adding the major draw for him to purchase the station was the fact that it has an inspection machine. "There are only 1600 inspection machines issued by the state," he said, and purchasing Olympic Citgo allowed him to purchase the machine as well.

McBrien said he is very happy to be starting up a new business in a great location. "We're going to call it Cohasset Village Car Care by McBrien's and we're going to do repairs and have a full service station," he said. That will include oil changes, tune-ups, brakes, towing and inspections. He said the work done in Cohasset would complement the work done at his North Scituate shop, McBriens Diagnostic Repair.

McBrien said he intends on extending his hours a little later than Roukounakis had been operating. To begin, he will open at 7 a.m. and stay open until 8 p.m., but hasn't ruled out staying open a little later during the summer months. The extended hours will only apply to the gas station and not the repair shop, which will operate from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. year round.

With the new owner will come a new façade, and this week, a new coat of paint was already being applied to the outside of the building. McBrien said he also wants to get new lights for the station and in general, spruce things up. "We're also going to get rid of the saw horses and chains," that denote boundaries on the property, he said. The ultimate goal is to make the station business-friendly.

Over the past week of working together, McBrien said he has been amazed at the number of people Roukounakis knows by name. "Everybody loves him," he said, adding watching him interact with the customers, he is very attentive to everyone who comes in.

Roukounakis said with more time on his hands, he is looking forward to seeing more of his two grandchildren. However, he said he doesn't plan on going far, and is sure to be seen around town. He said above all, he would like to thank the people who have supported him from the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Hull, and hopes they will be as supportive to McBrien as they were to him. "He's a good man and I wish him the best," he said.

Total % change	10.7	N/A	6 percent	14.4 percent

The school budget process will not be a mystery to the town in 2007. Members of the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee have made it a point to come to School Committee meetings this year and be a part of the process every step of the way.

At Wednesday's School Committee meeting, Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Rob Spofford were in attendance, as were Advisory Committee members Sam Wakeman and Tucker Glavin.

"We're happy to have you here," said School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy. "This is a big jumping off point."

The School Committee has not yet formally voted on a budget figure to present to the town. However, in its proposed budget, a figure of $13,687,626 has been floated for a level services budget. That number is a 5.5 percent increase over last year's town appropriated budget of $12,979,811. Last year's budget figure includes the $12,714,714 voted on in the spring, as well as $200,000 in Chapter 70 funding and roughly $65,097 in free cash, which was reimbursement to the schools for a security system at the Osgood School, which were both voted on at the Special Town Meeting in December.

The school department has also floated a supplemental budget figure of $14,406,011. That figure would add $718,385 in services, including additional teachers at all three schools, various classroom supplies and some professional development. The supplemental requests would be a 5.2 percent increase on top of the 5.5 percent increase in the level services budget, for a total 10.7 percent increase over fiscal 2007.

Wednesday's meeting saw Student Services Director Linda Gill, Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan and Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley presenting proposed budgets. All three presented a level services request as well as supplemental requests. After hearing the testimony, School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said in his opinion, many of the items in the "supplemental" category are not, and should be included in the operating budget. Member Steve Fusco agreed and said during the Osgood presentation that the additional grade one teacher being sought should be included in the operating budget. Sheehan had explained the benefit of having smaller class sizes at the lower elementary level grades and Fusco said in his opinion the request "Doesn't sound very supplemental to me." Slanetz agreed and said when it comes time to formally vote on a number to move ahead with, "Maybe we should be asking for the $14.4 million."

The level services Student Services budget proposed by Gill includes a 16.4 percent increase over fiscal 2007. Last year's budget was $1,316,396 and the proposed fiscal 2008 figure is $1,532,127. Many of the requests brought forward are for state mandated services, which are not funded by the state. A figure of $124,983 is included in the budget for the remaining circuit breaker funds from fiscal 2007, and a placeholder amount of $75,000 is also included for anticipated fiscal 2008 circuit breaker funds.

At the Osgood School it is projected there will be a decrease in enrollment by roughly 28 students. However, the current kindergarten class is large at 115 students, and when those students move up to grade one, the five teachers at that grade level would lead to larger class sizes. The school department would like to move one grade two teacher down to grade one, which would reduce class size to roughly 23 students per class. In addition, one of the supplemental budget requests is for an additional grade one teacher, which combined with the teacher who would move would bring class size down to roughly 20 students per class.

Sheehan proposed adding a .5 daytime custodian position to the level services budget, as it was a position that existed and was cut last year. "We're restoring a position we had," she said, which is vital not only for cleaning the building, but for safety and security reasons. The position would be shared with the Deer Hill School. In her supplemental budget, Sheehan proposed bringing in a .5 evening custodian that would also be shared with Deer Hill and would provide the same services during the evening hours. The Osgood School fiscal 2008 budget totaled $2,288,619, an increase of 1.9 percent over last year. The supplemental requests totaled $94,684, which would be a 4.1 percent increase over the level services budget and a 5 percent increase over last year's appropriation.

At the Deer Hill School the current grade two class will make for a large grade three next year and Gauley has therefore requested an additional grade three teacher in his supplemental request. That teacher would bring class size down to roughly 19 students per class in grade three. He also included a supplemental request for a grade four teacher, which would also bring down class size to 19 students.

In his level services budget, one of Gauley's major expenses was bringing on a .5 school psychologist, which is a shared cost with the Osgood School and was paid for in full out of the Osgood budget in the past, meaning it is really only an accounting shift rather than a new cost incurred. Gauley's level services budget proposes increasing the Deer Hill budget by 9.2 percent, from $2,294,767 in fiscal 2007 to $2,505,396 in fiscal 2008. The supplemental requests total $129,327, or an increase of 5.2 percent over the level services request and an overall increase of 14.4 over last year's budget figure.

After the presentation, Selectman Chairman Dormitzer said going forward, he would like to see some way of linking the achievement of students to the money being spent. "What I'm looking for is, how do I assess whether spending more on something will make us, within the next five years, one of the top 10 schools in the state," he said.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said he thought Dormitzer had a good idea and he would like a breakdown of that as well. He also noted there are many areas that should be clearly spelled out in the budget, including where money is spent from the PSO or the Foundation Reserve account, which clearly benefit the students but may not be easily found in the budget to show the true cost of running the district. He noted some of the supplies and materials paid for this year by Foundation Reserve money will have to come out of the budget next year, and there needs to be an accounting for that money somehow so the request doesn't come as a shock next year.

The School Committee will meet again Wednesday, Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. in the Community Meeting Room at the High School near the superintendent's office. All are welcome to attend.

Grand, energy-efficient Gammons Rd. home gets OK

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It's a dream.

While those words were not specifically expressed – that was the sentiment at Wednesday's public hearing, dubbed a "large home site plan review" of the new house planned for 90 Gammons Road.

John and Motoko Deane, who are long-time Cohasset residents, have purchased the 5,500-square-foot former Weltman house, which they plan to demolish and replace on the two-acre site with a 7,154-square-foot home that is energy efficient.

Under the town bylaw, the Planning Board must review plans for homes that exceed certain size and dimensional standards. The bylaw came about following the "mansionization" of a lot at 3 Jerusalem Lane that caused an uproar about four years ago.

Architect Jim Sandell came equipped with drawings of the exterior of the proposed shingle-style home and diagrams of the floor plan. He also went into some detail about the energy efficient features and environmentally friendly construction materials that would be used.

He walked the Planning Board and audience through the home that will be built on the existing house's footprint on a promontory with panoramic views of Little Harbor. The existing guesthouse and tennis court on the property will remain, Sandell said.

The Deanes, who are actively involved in the community, will open their home up to different organizations for a variety of celebrations and fundraisers, he said while explaining how the entry drive will "set up the arrival to the house."

A pool "with an infinity edge" will also be constructed that will be a continuation of the terrace; and colonnades will project from the second floor all around, allowing one to circumambulate the entire house in the summer months. Sandell also described a conservatory, formal living areas and a music room as well as a studio, which will be built on the top level of the 3-1/2-story structure.

There will also be large areas of glass to let the view in. The windows will be installed with a shutter system that would provide protection in the event of a hurricane and also provide energy efficiency in the winter months.

The Planning Board compared the project to the house that was built on Whitehead and asked the Deanes to be cognizant of construction hours and accessing the site while the work is being done.

Chairman Al Moore said during construction on Whitehead, the owner even made arrangements to shuttle the workers in.

Sandell said it would be "commonsense and courtesy" to look at Whitehead as a model.

David Replogle, who lives next door and praised the Deanes' plans, said the construction would be nothing compared to the sewer and water work that the neighborhood has been living through over the past year.

Bob Sturdy, a member of the Planning Board, suggested the Deanes look into installing a sprinkler system, because of the difficulty the fire department would have in reaching the Little Harbor side of the property. "The fire department would be hard pressed on the water side," he said.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said what the Deanes were doing in terms of energy efficiency could be used as a model for future projects.

But neighbor Keith Moskow, who is an architect, said the sheer size of the home negates the fact it will be energy efficient. "A very large house for two people is like having a seven-course meal with a diet coke to save on the calories," he said.

Dave Calhoun whose home would look directly across Little Harbor at the Deanes' new house, gave the project high marks.

"We are thrilled to see the change," he said. "It will look less commercial than it does now and will add a lot to Little Harbor."

The Planning Board voted unanimously to recommend the Building Commissioner issue a building permit. Construction on the site is expected to start soon, Sandell told the board.

Thanks for speaking up

Before 2007 gets too far along, we still have some important 2006 business to attend to.

Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor or penned a commentary to the Cohasset Mariner in 2006.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

Paul Antico, Lincoln P. Bloomfield, Russell Bonetti, Austin Breslow, Elaine Breslow, Richard P. Brooks, Emily J. Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard, but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

Last year, the Cohasset Mariner received 151 letters and commentaries from 102 different people, groups or organizations.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy. Let us hear what you think in 2007.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Advance man' for President Ford

TO THE EDITOR:

Gerald R. Ford, 38th President of the United States, was as decent, unassuming and sensitive a person as you could ever meet. And yet he served in the most powerful position in the world.

It was my privilege to serve President Ford as an "advance man," 1976-1977. My first "advance" was to the mountain community of Spruce Pine, N.C., during the President's spirited contest for the Republican nomination versus Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

This adventure came with a surprise introduction to clogging, a dance form native to the Carolina mountains. The Avery High School Mountain Cloggers were the afternoon's entertainment.

On that same trip, due to deteriorating weather conditions in the mountains, President Ford had to abort a flight on Marine One and come by motorcade, arriving two hours late.

The President made his warm, folksy remarks standing in the drizzle and fog. He connected instantly with the soaked crowd, greeting personally not only the Governor and assorted dignitaries, but also the high school cloggers.

And that's how he was. Whether you were the Secretary of State, a White House staffer, an advance man — or a clogger, Gerald Ford noticed and was unfailingly courteous and appreciative of the work you were doing on his behalf.

A man who never took himself too seriously, Gerald Ford definitely took the presidency seriously and was absolutely the right man at the right time to begin to heal a deeply troubled country.

He remarked just after taking his oath of office, "My fellow Americans, our long national nightmare is over." And it was.

All of the eulogies we have heard and read during the last week are well deserved. As an amateur historian of the U.S. presidency, I considered it a high honor to serve President Gerald Ford during a terrible crisis in our history.

Farewell and thank you, Mr. President, for a job well done.

Energizing the village with downtown housing

TO THE EDITOR:

Further to my letter published Dec. 18, I'm informed that a majority of the Planning Board favored the citizen articles presented at the Town Meeting to facilitate construction of reasonably priced housing in the Village. However, the articles might have been better worded if they had been composed by or in collaboration with the Planning Board (although I don't know how that would be done if one or more members of the Planning Board opposes such changes).

Ironically, the articles might have been unnecessary had the ZBA not decided that it could not overrule the ridiculous 40,000 minimum lot size buried in the Bylaws, and failed to accommodate the need for such housing in the Village by issuing a variance. (The need is not only the need of our citizens for such housing, but the need of the merchants for economic stimulus).

The Selectmen didn't help by bringing up the bugaboo of "unintended consequences", as if any such could not be dealt with adequately if and when they surfaced.

At any rate, let us hope that the $30,000 will be sensibly used and that all members of our elected boards will co-operate constructively with the relevant citizenry to produce suitable language for the next Town Meeting, and that all will support passage at Town Meeting.

Local merchants thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

Thank you to the local merchants for making Cohasset village especially attractive this holiday season. The storefront windows, wreaths and Holiday Stroll have been enjoyed by many and certainly brighten up these early dark evenings.

A special thanks to David Bigley of All the Best natural foods store for suggesting the merchants purchase their store wreaths from the METCO organization, proceeds of which benefited the Cohasset METCO Scholarship Fund. A special thanks also to Karen Kirkendall of Coastal Countryside Properties (and her helpers!) for their beautiful decorating of these wreaths with a seashore motif reminiscent of Cohasset's own Sandy Beach.

In the true spirit of giving the village merchants generously donated the proceeds of each store's raffle and of the hayride during the Holiday Stroll to Cohasset's Appalachia Service Project. The lighted star above the village shines brightly!

Happy New Year,

Connie Afshar

Neighbors to hear proposal for 25 Ripley Road

The Cohasset Housing Partnership would like to invite neighbors of 25 Ripley Road, to a public meeting regarding its proposal for redevelopment of that property.

The meeting is slated for 7 p.m., Tuesday (Jan. 9) in the public meeting room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

At this meeting, the CHP will provide a short presentation on the history and development approach of the Partnership, how this particular property came to the Partnership's attention, the Partnership's thoughts about how the property could be redeveloped to fill a defined town need, and the means by which it plans to approach redevelopment. The CHP will also have some preliminary drawings of how the building could be reconfigured into a multi-family use.

The CHP wants this meeting to be an opportunity for neighbors to fully understand what the Partnership hopes to accomplish and to hear it straight from the Partnership rather than the rumor mill, CHP member Tom Callahan said.

Please RSVP to Tom Callahan at 781-706-9989 or tcallahan@witsop.com.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership includes: co-chairmen Clark Brewer and Tom Callahan, Margy Charles, Taffy Nothnagle, Galt Grant, Jim Hamilton, Jim Lagroterria, and Steve Lucitt.

Sohier Street crossing is still bumpy

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

What's New? – Very often we address questions from residents in this column. Today is one of those days. We continue to get a lot of questions about the state of the Greenbush Sohier Street crossing. The last time any significant work was done in the roadway at the crossing was last spring. So, we've had a bumpy crossing for around nine months. And, it appeared for the longest time that no one was doing any work in the area. The obvious question is, "Why aren't they doing anything?" "Will it be like this forever?" "Is it finished now?"

The answer, like most things, is not simple. Last spring, work was stopped at this crossing so that the Music Circus season would not be affected by the rail construction. When it was time to resume work, the pacing item was relocation of the utility poles. The reason this is important, is that the present poles are located in the new roadway. No relocated poles, no new roadway. It's that simple.

National Grid, our electric utility, owns the utility poles. But, as is often the case they hold lines belonging to two other utilities, Comcast and Verizon. So what had to happen was: National Grid had to add a set of new poles off of the roadway so they wouldn't interfere with roadway construction. But, since these poles are on Town land, National Grid was required to hold a Pole Hearing in front of the Selectmen to get the required permission to relocate the poles. Once the Selectmen were satisfied with the new pole configuration, work could begin. National Grid then needed to get their field crews scheduled to add the new poles and the associated power wiring. All lines to homes in the affected area then had to be switched over to the new lines.

Likewise, Comcast and Verizon had to repeat the steps of stringing new wires and connecting them to homes in the area. After all of the new wires are in place for all of the utilities, then the old wires could be removed. The accompanying photo shows a line of "old" poles to the left with all of the wires removed. The line of poles to the right is the "new" pole line. Note how far off of the street the new poles are placed. Once National Grid removes the "old" poles, CBB can come back and finish the sidewalks and the road crossing. We are told that this will be completed before the Music Circus season starts next summer.

Train times — We've been asked by a number of residents how long the train will take to reach Boston and visa versa, how long to reach Cohasset from Boston. The table gives the preliminary travel times from Boston to each station of the Greenbush.

We are told that some trains may stop at the JFK/UMASS station, but we have no information regarding which trains may be involved or the timetable implications.

Speaking about stations, the included photo shows the train platform at the Cohasset station under construction, as of Jan. 2, 2007.

Platform canopy under construction: as you can see, the platform will only have a roof structure, but no walls.

Platform — As you can see, the platform will only have a roof structure, but no walls. We haven't mentioned this before, but the station will have a rack for bikes. Should anyone choose to use a moped, they can either be locked to the ends of the bike rack or parked with motorcycles in regular car spaces.

A change from the earlier designs in the station area has been made. Originally, the roadway from North Main Street to the station was to have been one-way inbound to the station. As a result of a redesign, forced by the bike accidents at the rail crossing this past summer, the connecting road to North Main Street will be built as a two-way road. The reason is that the MBTA needed to design a way for bicycles to cross the tracks at a 90-degree angle rather than the very oblique angle that exists on North Main Street. So, their solution was to use the North Main Street connector road for bicycles to cross the tracks and then use the walkway that runs parallel to Woodside cemetery that connects to North Main Street at the cemetery entrance on the Hingham side of the tracks. Since, bicycles must follow the same road rules as automobiles, and bikes will be using this detour in either direction, cars must also be able to use the North Main Street connector road as a two-way road.

Not so happy feet this winter

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

At the end of one of the warmest Decembers on record, I'm amazed that it was only two years ago where, after five snow days in a row, it was difficult to refrain from whacking the next person who asked, "isn't it pretty?" upside the head with my shovel. Yet, here we are, in the first winter where I'm not wistfully dreaming about a Pina Colada, palm trees, and a cabana boy named Antonio. I suppose that's a good thing. But, when I read about the Ayles Ice Shelf — all 41 miles of it — breaking off from an island south of the North Pole, I can't help but hope that penguins learn to fly real soon.

Now, I know that penguins live at the South Pole and Santa Claus at the North Pole. This is a good thing, as it's ok to force reindeer to pull a fat man on a sled, but harnessing penguins to Santa's sleigh just seems so wrong. However, whether it's Heat Miser having a tantrum or Al Gore wasn't kidding and he really did invent global warming, it's something for penguins, and all of us to be worried about. And just in case you haven't given it much thought, I've spent my morning reviewing all the potentially responsible parties.

Those gosh-darn Hollywood liberals. Yes, there are those who believe that "Happy Feet" is a left-wing plot to brainwash children into believing that global warming is actually an issue. I'll grant them that "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip" is a front to push every bleeding-heart liberal platform that exists via a series focusing on "Saturday Night Live," that pinnacle of network programming responsible for cultural icons like the Church Lady, Coneheads and Mister Robinson's Neighborhood. Two thoughts on that: SNL did give us "land sharks;" and I always knew that Matthew Perry was the best actor on "Friends."

Verdict: While they might be loopy enough to elect The Terminator as governor, I'm not sure their wackiness extends to using global warming to put out wildfires.

James Cameron. In 1997, he gave us "Titanic." This means it's time for a 10-year anniversary, special collectors' edition DVD release. What would boost sales more than an iceberg taking out a cruise ship? In addition, according to Wikipedia, Cameron's a member of the Mars Society — "an international space advocacy non-profit organization dedicated to encouraging the exploration and settlement of Mars." Maybe he knows something we don't?

Verdict. Keep an eye on this one. Especially since he once proclaimed himself "King of the World."

George Strait. Global warming could prompt a re-release and give whole new meaning to the song "Oceanfront Property in Arizona."

Verdict: Since all his "Ex's Live in Texas," it's more likely he'd do something to take out the Lone Star state first.

Al Gore. Al does manage to get involved with some of the biggest controversies of our time: the internet, whether he was the focus of "Love Story," and global warming. But, John Edwards may have stepped on his toes a bit by listing global warming as one of his top campaign issues.

Verdict: Al got a bad rap with the internet thing; but, it's more likely that his alter ego is Oliver Barrett IV rather than Heat Miser. Besides, with John Edwards having much better hair, he'll likely get credit for anything Al did or said on this issue.

Dick Cheney. Not a suspect. While he might shoot his best friend in the face; clearly, global warming is not good for oil and gas companies.

The Scientific Community. Isn't it always the poor, ignored scientists who invent global disasters only to swoop in at the last minute and rescue the world? If you haven't noticed, there's been a subtle campaign being waged to make scientists cool. First you had the revenge of the nerds led by Bill Gates, Steve Jobs and all the other tech dudes on the geek squad. Now, you have shows like "Dexter's Laboratory" and "Jimmy Neutron" to convince kids to grow up and be scientists.

Verdict: Maybe if we all unilaterally decide that scientists are really, really cool, they'll band together and help stop global warming. Until then, I'm not investing in oil and gas, and I'm headed to Venice this year before it disappears. I've also put "An Inconvenient Truth" back on my Netflix list so that I can make other travel plans accordingly, including checking out some properties in Scottsdale and Phoenix.

Diane K. Danielson is the CEO of DowntownWomensClub.com, a blogger for www.womensDISH.com, and a Cohasset resident who will have oceanfront property real soon if global warming keeps up.

April – Noting the success of perky Katie Couric as anchor of the CBS Nightly News, NBC signs Paris Hilton and Britney Spears as co-anchors. "We're going after the viewers who spend the most money," said the announcement. "You know, the younger crowd."

May – Massachusetts Supreme Court finds an obscure phrase in the State Constitution that permits undocumented immigrants to run for state office as long a they have a driver's license and can prove they have paid in-state tuition to attend a state college.

June – Red Sox pay the African country of Namibia $50 million for the right to sign a pitcher discovered throwing rocks at 105 miles an hour in the desert. "I think we can get him for under $100 million for five years," says GM Theo Epstein.

August – Patriots open season without Tom Brady, who signed with another team. "That's all right," says Coach Bill Belichick. "We've signed Peyton Manning. Isn't free agency wonderful? We could lose our whole team and go out and buy us another one."

September – The summer tourist season being over, the price of gas reverts to under two dollars from a seasonal high of $3.50 a gallon. Exxon Mobile announces that 2007 is well on its way to becoming the most profitable ever. Executives receive million dollar bonuses.

November – Cable news channels stake out voting places and prepare to take exit polls of the presidential election. "It's not until next year," says a passerby when he is asked why no one has showed up to vote. "We should have an election every two years," says CNN. "No, every year," says Fox.

December – ACLU announces plans to sue to eliminate the date Dec. 25 from the calendar since it has become too closely associated with the outlawed C-word. "We'll file as soon as we find out who is responsible," said the announcement. Suggested replacement acceptable to all would be Dec. 32.

opportunity to use the skills he has acquired to benefit the town as a Selectman.

Carlson has an interest in the schools and volunteered his time on the Planning and Technology Subcommittee of the Strategic Planning Committee. In 2005 he, along with Steve Fusco who is now a member of the School Committee, made a presentation to the School Committee and provided recommendations on how the school should be planning for its technology needs.

A few hours after Carlson, Dormitzer made his way over to Town Hall to take out nomination papers. He said while many long-simmering issues were retired successfully in the past three years, "There are several which are carrying over into 2007 and beyond and, for which, I have an historical context and understanding which may help in their resolution." He said, for example, efficient and effective government, investment in the schools, affordable housing, Greenbush mitigation, infrastructure financing and improvements, the Second Amended Final Judgment and economic development.

Dormitzer added responsibility, authority and decision making in town government is decentralized. "It exists in the individuals on multiple elective boards such as Selectmen, School Committee, Sewer Commissioners, Water Commissioners, Planning Board, Board of Health, Library Trustees, Recreation Commission etc., appointed boards such as Advisory Board, Board of Appeals, Capital Budget Committee, Conservation Commission, Council on Elder Affairs, etc., ad hoc committees such as Economic Development, Housing Partnership, Harbor Health, etc., in the position of Town Manager and finally, with the Town Meeting." He said in light of the situation, the challenge for Selectmen is to be "effective and to make a difference in this diffuse structure. I believe it puts a premium on collaboration, common sense and courage. I hope you believe I brought these qualities in my first term as selectman and hope you will support me for a second term."

In addition to candidates for the Board of Selectmen, Elsa Miller pulled papers to retain her position on the Board of Assessors. Ralph Peroncello also pulled papers to continue his role on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15. Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

Library program to get residents on the same page

encouraging reading among young, old and everyone in between. While the goal is to have as many residents as possible read the book, for children who are not old enough to participate, age-appropriate books with similar themes will be chosen. The hope is that people will not only read the book on their own, but bring the One Cook concept to the various groups they might be in, whether it be Boy or Girl Scouts, houses or worship, or the Rotary Club, and adapt it for their purposes.

"It is endless what you can do with it," said Rafferty, adding other communities have come up with some very exciting activities to go along with their One Book programs and she plans to do the same. For example, one town chose a book with an Asian theme and hosted a Japanese tea ceremony and held events at an Asian restaurant in addition to the usual book discussion groups and author talks. She said the library has plans to partner with many different organizations and businesses in town to make it a true town-wide event.

The program will take place throughout the months of February and March. Rafferty said as the program gets going, there will be information listed on the library's Web site at www.cohassetlibrary.org. She said although the program has not yet begun, she is anticipating it will go well and has already begun thinking about Cohasset's One Book 2008. "This is our first experience with the program, but I hope it won't be the last," she said.

HEALTH NOTES

Taking charge of your health in 2007

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Here's the latest thinking from the web on what to resolve for the new year. According to one pundit who'll get no credit cause he's selling something: "It's easy to make New Year's resolutions around health. Sticking with them all year is more challenging!" Well how about that? Now that the advice has been defanged, below are some examples:

• Posture and Core Fitness: It starts: "If good posture, is your goal, then use this relaxing practice to release unnecessary tension before you do abdominal fitness work". It tells you to tie a belt or scarf around your knees, inhale, then pretend there's a balloon under your back and you're inflating it. When you exhale, imagine your neck and shoulders are made of wax which flows toward your feet. It goes on for 9 more steps to tell you where the wax flows. There's one we can all keep. The BoH recommends you don't slouch.

• There's a solution for head, neck and shoulder tension, which says among other things: relax, yet remain alert. A good resolution; the BoH agrees.

• This year change a kid's life. Help a trusted charity. We suggest you do so, but choose your favorite.

• Resolve to take responsibility for chronic pain. Amid the ads, we found some good advice. If you have chronic pain and someone, a doctor for instance, tells you it's in your mind, but if you've gotten along all this time without someone calling you delusional, perhaps you should find someone who will treat your symptoms. But use the old remedies first. For example try ice. There are a lot of good ice packs out there. No need to check out the Boohbah Bye-Bye Boo-Boo Ice Packs - they come in different colors; or the Lower Back Ice Pack.(tm)

Resolve to take responsibility for chronic pain. Amid the ads, we found some good advice.

• Flu vaccine is the best way for people to avoid the flu and to protect their loved ones as well. It's not too late to get a flu shot.

• Resolve not to eat certain soft cheeses, known as Portuguese or Brazilian Cheese, made by the Julima, Inc. The cheese products may have "sell-by" dates of Dec.23 or Dec. 25. DPH is recalling these cheeses.

• Make sure your smoke detectors and carbon monoxide alarms are operating properly.

• Make sure your holiday decorations stay safe. Following simple safety measures like making sure your tree is well watered and keeping open flames, such as burning candles, away from the tree will help keep you and your home safe.

• Use and serve alcohol sensibly. Last year, over 15,000 people died in alcohol-related motor vehicle crashes, accounting for 39 percent of all traffic-related deaths in the United States. An alcohol-related motor vehicle crash kills someone every 31 minutes and nonfatally injures someone every two minutes

• Prepare for an emergency. The first thing to learn is to use and teach the entire family about 911. The second is to have an emergency plan. The plan should contain common sense information you may not have thought about which could save you from harm and discomfort during an emergency. Contact the Board of Health for particulars and help on what to do.

• Send food or a gift to an overseas serviceman. The most important thing to remember when mailing food gifts is to choose foods that are not perishable, can tolerate a range of temperatures and won't break with rough handling. Also, because of security risks, the U.S. Postal Service will no longer deliver mail addressed to "Any Serviceman," so be sure there is a name and address on the package.

• Throw a party, but if you do, be sure to follow good food safety practice. The Department of Agriculture has a good food safety brochure which can be obtained on their website:

www.fsis.usda.gov/Fact_Sheets/Focus_On_Holiday_or_Party_Buffets/index.asp

So, if you haven't thought of a good resolution, take one of ours for a guilt free year. But above all, have a happy and fulfilling new year.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week, BHRC reports local representatives' roll call attendance records for the 2006 session through December 29.

The House has held 595 roll call votes. BHRC tabulates the number of roll calls on which each representative was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Several quorum roll calls, used to gather a majority of members onto the House floor to conduct business, are also included in the 595 roll calls. On the quorum roll calls, members simply vote "present" in order to indicate their presence in the chamber. When a representative does not indicate his or her presence on a quorum roll call, we count that as a roll call absence just like any other roll call absence.

Only 32 of the 157 House members have perfect 100 percent roll call attendance records.

The three worst roll call attendance records belong to Reps. James Vallee (D-Franklin) who missed 418 roll calls resulting in a 29.7 percent attendance record; Louis Kafka (D-Sharon) who missed 202 roll calls (66.0 percent attendance record) and Harold Naughton (D-Clinton) who missed 128 roll calls (78.4 percent attendance record). Both Vallee and Naughton missed many votes because they were serving with their National Guard unit while Kafka missed many votes because of the death of his father.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' 2006 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the representative's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the representative was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the representative missed.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

COURT RULING ON SAME-SEX MARRIAGE VOTE - The Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the constitution requires the Constitutional Convention to vote, prior to the end of the 2006 session on January 2, on the proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriage The court added that it does not have the power to force the Legislature to vote. The convention in November voted to recess the until 2 p.m. on January 2, 2007 - the final day of the 2006 legislative session. The recess would postpone until that date any further action on the proposed constitutional amendment to "define marriage only as the union of one man and one woman." The measure needs the votes of 50 out of 200 legislators in both the 2006 and 2007-2008 legislative sessions in order to appear on the November 2008 ballot. It is sponsored by an anti-same sex marriage group that gathered the necessary 65,825 signatures to bring the matter before the convention. Possible actions that could occur on January 2 include a roll call vote on the ban; adjournment without voting on the ban; a filibuster by supporters of same-sex marriage until midnight when the 2006 session ends and the proposal dies. Another scenario would be the refusal by a sufficient number of supporters of same-sex marriage to attend the convention. This action would deny the quorum necessary to convene the convention and the measure would die at midnight.

REGULATE TEEN DRIVERS (H 5378) - The House and Senate approved a conference committee version of a bill increasing the requirements that teens under 18 must fulfill in order to obtain a driver's license and increasing the penalties for their driving violations. The measure has been stalled in the Legislature since the summer when each branch approved a different version. A conference committee drafted this compromise version. Provisions include increasing from six to 12 the number of hours of on the road driving experience that these teens must have during their driver's education program; hiking from 12 to 40 the number of required supervised driving hours with a parent and requiring parents or guardians to participate in two hours of the teen's 30 hours of classroom instruction. The measure also increases fines and license suspensions for speeding and other violations. Provisions that were only in the Senate version and were dropped by the conference committee include prohibiting the use of cell phones by minor drivers and requiring that a special "junior driver" decals be attached to their vehicles. The conference committee version creates a special commission to study the possibility of requiring the junior operator decals. Final approval in both branches in needed prior to the measure going to Gov. Romney.

EPINEPHRINE IN SCHOOLS (H 2637) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill requiring schools to allow students with life-threatening allergies to possess and administer epinephrine in accordance with Department of Public Health regulations. Epinephrine is an injection that is often used to counteract allergic reactions to food. The measure also requires schools to allow storage of epinephrine in a secure but unlocked place that is accessible only to authorized persons. Supporters said that epinephrine, available in an easy-to-carry container that looks like a pen, can be used to ease a child's allergic reaction to foods and could save lives if the allergy is life-threatening.

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com)

This chart shows Cohasset's outstanding debt at the end of 2004 as a percentage of its 2004 budget. By law a community may have debt outstanding "inside the limit" up to 5% of its cumulative property value. A community may take on additional debt "outside the limit" as long as it is authorized by the voters and only used for certain authorized items, typically large capital projects.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

CEF appeals for school support

The CEF is asking for people's support to benefit the children, community and town of Cohasset.

The Cohasset Education Foundation recently sent out an appeal to residents and businesses of Cohasset. The CEF is a non-profit local education fund designed to promote academic initiatives and excellence in the local Cohasset schools. The appeal is asking for contributions to the CEF in two ways: donating to the Project Gift fund which will immediately fund needed projects at all three Cohasset schools and donating to the Endowment Fund which will provide long term funding solutions for the schools. The CEF has currently raised over $100,000 in gifts and pledges for 2006.

The goal of the CEF is to ensure that Cohasset students, teachers and administrators are provided with the programs, materials and up-to-date equipment necessary to maintain a level of academic excellence in today's competitive environment. The CEF works with the Cohasset school administration to determine the needs at each school. The CEF maintains that it will immediately fund projects once money has been raised for its Project Fund gifts. The Endowment offers a principal preserved fund, with its income from the Endowment fund becoming available for projects and for long term funding, while assuring that the principal cannot be invaded.

This fall, the CEF funded the Osgood School computer lab. The grant of $25,000 purchased 24 new desktop computers, flat panel display screens and Microsoft Office Professional Edition 2003 software. Projects designated by Dr. Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Cohasset Schools for CEF include: funding the final phase of the Middle School Technology and Engineering Lab, purchasing Promethean White Boards for the Deer Hill School, purchasing Safari Montage Video on Demand software systems for all schools and grade levels. The CEF is also donating all of the money raised through its "Extra Credit" program which recognizes teachers, administrators and staff at all three Cohasset schools to professional development.

The CEF is asking for people's support to benefit the children, community and town of Cohasset. Tax deductible donations, in-kind contributions, corporate matching donations and volunteer hours will be gratefully accepted. For more information on the CEF, you can visit their website at www.cohasseteducation.org. The CEF is looking for volunteers to help with the upcoming Spelling Bee and Gala event planned for the spring. Please contact Catherine O'Callaghan at 781-383-6868.

Cohasset High School wins Larry Ames award

Honor given to school with best winning percentage in all sports

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the second straight year, Cohasset High School has won the Division 4 Larry Ames award.

The honor, given by the Boston Globe, goes to the school with the highest total winning percentage between all varsity sports during the academic year.

For 2005-06, CHS finished with a combined winning percentage of 59.97, just edging out South Shore League rival Norwell's 59.65.

The other winners were Andover (Div. 1), North Andover (Div. 2), and Duxbury (Div. 3).

CHS Athletic Director Ron Ford praised the school's athletes and coaches for the accomplishment.

"It shows how well our kids go out and compete," Ford said Wednesday. "Our coaches try to play the best competition. We really try to run a high-powered program, and I think we pull it off."

Of Cohasset's 20 varsity teams, 14 recorded above-.500 records. Among the best were golf (12-4), boys lacrosse (13-3), swimming (6-1), girls lacrosse (13-2-1), softball (14-6) and girls tennis (15-5). Only regular season records are considered.

Ford said one of the biggest reasons for Cohasset's back-to-back Ames awards is the recent surge of success experienced by the school's girls programs. In addition to those listed above, the girls basketball team was also strong last year with a 13-7 mark.

"We really try to run a high-powered program, and I think we pull it off."
Ron Ford, CHS athletic director

Overall, the nine girls teams on record posted an 81-44-5 mark, good for a winning percentage of 64.2.

"We're in the middle of one of the school's greatest runs in girls sports right now, and it's great to see," said Ford.

A complete list of every school's record is available on the Globe's high school sports web site, www.boston.com/sports/schools.

Skipper skaters rout Mashpee

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

HINGHAM – While the play on the ice wasn't always pretty, the final scoreboard was a sight to behold for fans of Cohasset High hockey Wednesday night.

Behind the strength of three first period goals – two from senior Chris Davis – the Skippers took a 5-0 win over South Shore League foe Mashpee at Pilgrim Ice Arena in Hingham.

The win improved Cohasset's record to 3-2-1 overall, 1-0-1 in the league, going into an important week for the team. After taking on Hull this Saturday at 5:40 p.m. at Pilgrim, the Skippers will host Abington-East Bridgewater on Wednesday and then Norwell next Saturday night. The Clippers are undefeated on the young season and are regarded by many as the favorite to again win the league.

After taking one on the chin Sunday against Blue Hills in an 8-2 loss, the Skippers left that one behind and came out aggressive against Mashpee. The Falcons have the reputation of being one of the most physical teams in the league, but it was Cohasset that took it to its opponents in a dominant first period.

"We came out with that in mind; that was the game plan from the start," said Skippers head coach Bob Walsh of his team's physical play.

While Mashpee got a couple good shots early on sophomore goalie Johnny Wade, the Skippers began to assert themselves after the first five minutes. It didn't take long for them to get on the board, as Davis scored at the 7:37 mark, with assists from senior Austin Lanzillotti and sophomore Andrew Smith.

The goal clearly gave Cohasset momentum, as the Skippers began unleashing shots on the Falcons goalie in what turned out to be a 16-shot first period (compared to just

Tough break for CHS boys

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Once again, the Cohasset High boys basketball team got burned at the buzzer.

Whereas East Bridgewater pulled the trick three weeks ago, it was Hull's Nick Belcastro who did it to the Skippers in the championship game of the Cohasset Holiday Tournament last Friday.

Belcastro hit a three at the end of regulation to force overtime, and two extra periods later, it was the Pirates who walked out of the CHS gym with a 70-66 win and the tournament championship.

The game was tight from the opening tip and both teams played well. With only a few seconds left on the clock, Cohasset had a three-point lead and things were looking sweet. As Hull inbounded the ball, everything went according to plan for Cohasset as Belcastro received

Skippers grappling with success

Wednesday's win over Holbrook puts CHS atop the league

Steve Gratta of Hull looks for the official to call for the pin during his opening round match at the Marshfield Tournament.

They may be in a new-look league, but the Cohasset High wrestling team has yet to have much trouble adjusting.

Wednesday's 36-12 win over Holbrook gives the Skippers a 3-0 record in the newly formed South Shore-Mayflower League, and all things point to a big showdown with Carver on the 17th that will go a long way toward determining the league champion.

Wednesday's win featured a couple solid wins for a couple different names in the lineup, including sophomores Ross Collins-Wooley and Chris O'Grady. Collins-Wooley, in his second year with the program, won at 152 pounds, while O'Grady won his match at 189. For O'Grady, it was the first win of his varsity career.

The Skippers' next league match is Wednesday night at 7 when they host Norwell. In the meantime, Cohasset will compete in the North Quincy Tournament on Saturday.

Last Friday, Cohasset took part in the eight-team Lexington Dual Meet Tournament. Cohasset lost its first two matches to Whittier Tech and Watertown before beating Haverhill in the first ever match between those two programs.

Senior Nick Cambi (189) and junior Steve Hurlbut (215) were standouts on the day for the Skippers, winning all three of their matches. It was the continuation of a great start to the season for Cambi, who has compiled a 15-1 record to date.

In Lexington, seniors Ryan McLellan (119), Adam Smith (145), Gannon Dorion (152) and Tim Toomey (160)

All-Scholastic field hockey team

Sheelah Scott named among area's elite

Editor's note: With the recent merger of Community Newspaper Company and Memorial Press Group, there are now more schools and more athletes to be considered for All-Scholastic teams. The increase from 13 schools to 20 in the region will have an impact on how teams are chosen, including how many representatives some schools receive.

Only public school athletes from the following schools will be considered for All-Scholastic honors: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Old Rochester, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, Wareham, Weymouth and Whitman-Hanson.

Sheelah Scott – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Cohasset

Scott's all-around play from her forward position was perhaps the biggest reason for Cohasset's successful season, which ended with a 13-5-2 record that included a tournament win over East Bridgewater…In that game, dropped back into defense to help shut down EB star Jessica Roberts…Finished the season with 11 goals and seven assists…Notched two goals and an assist in 4-1 win over Westwood in September…Factored into both goals in 2-1 win over Norwell on Oct. 14 with a score and an assist…Named to the South Shore League All-Star team, one of three to earn that honor from the Skippers' squad.

Kayla Littig – Junior Forward – Carver

The South Shore League All-Star already owns the career point scoring mark at Carver High and will add to those numbers next fall… She had no trouble sharing the wealth for the lady Crusaders this season, scoring 20 times and adding 22 assists. Littig recorded 83 points in three seasons, breaking the old Carver High record of 78… After a 9-7-2 regular season the lady Crusaders beat Mashpee in the first round of the Division 3 tournament before being knocked from contention by Canton.

Jill Caramello — Junior

Duxbury's Jill Caramello was one part of a talented junior class this season that helped the Dragons to a third place finish in a tough Patriot League and a win over Norwood in the Div. 1 state tournament…Caramello was second on the team with six goals and three assists, behind classmate Erin Levesque…Caramello scored one of Duxbury's two goals in a 2-0 win over Norwood in the state tourney…Only a junior, Caramello will return next fall with several classmates to make up a very potent squad.

Erin Levesque – Junior Forward – Duxbury

Duxbury junior Erin Levesque wasn't just one of the most dangerous offensive players on her own team, she was one of the most explosive in the Patriot League, too…Levesque led the Dragons on the field in scoring this fall, and finished among the top scorers in the PL in both goals and assists…The Patriot League all-star helped Duxbury to a third place finish in the league and a win over Norwood in the first round of the Div. 1 playoffs…Levesque will return with a slew of talented players next year.

Kristie DuVal – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Hanover

A two-year starter on the Lady Indians' squad, DuVal finished the fall as the Patriot League's leading scorer with 24 points on 14 goals, 10 assists…Shined in several games this season but had her biggest contests against Duxbury, notching the game-winner to clinch second in the PL, and racking up four goals in a 6-2 win over Scituate…A PL All-star, DuVal's consistent play helped Hanover to a 9-2-1 record in the league, behind only Hingham, and 11-6-2 overall mark and berth in the Div. 2 South tourney…A three-sport athlete at HHS, DuVal is a starter on the basketball team and will be a key player on the softball squad this spring…Has narrowed her college choices down to Quinnipiac or the University of Rhode Island next fall.

Kate LaRose – Senior
Goalie – Hanover

Hanover's starting keeper for the last two seasons, LaRose proved she was the best again this fall…Finished the year as the Patriot League's top goalie, allowing just 12 goals in 18 games for a nearly untouchable 0.67 goals against average…LaRose was the backbone of a Hanover defense that shut out almost half of their regular season opponents (eight)…Came up big, even in the team's slim losses, registering big save totals in a pair of 1-0 losses to PL champs Hingham and another one-goal setback at the hands of powerhouse East Bridgewater…LaRose shined in a 3-1 victory over Duxbury, stopping 12 shots in a game that essentially locked up a second place finish in the league for the Lady Indians (9-2-1, 11-6-2)…LaRose will certainly be missed next fall.

Lauren Pastuszak – Senior
Midfielder – Hingham

Earned her team's MVP award and for good reason…A contributor both offensively and defensively, Pastuszak's blistering speed in the midfield made her a huge asset for the Patriot League champions (12-0)…On the offensive end, Pastuszak often got the play going in the midfield and contributed one goals, four assists…Defensively, her presence was felt most in cutting down opposing offenses on breakaways and disrupting penalty corner attempts, helping her squad allow only two goals when tested…The two-time PL All-star's consistent play was essential to the team's success in the regular season and in landing the squad in the Div. 1 South tourney, where the Harborwomen (12-6-1) endured a heartbreaking triple-OT loss to Dennis-Yarmouth in stroke play…Pastuszak plans to continue her field hockey career at Quinnipiac next fall.

Jillian Watts – Senior Forward – Hingham

When the Harborwomen needed a big score, chances are Watts was the one who delivered it…Among the Patriot League's top scorers, Watts led the Hingham team this season…Scored several big goals this year, but perhaps none was bigger than the one she scored with 17 minutes left to play in a scoreless tie with rival Hanover in a match that clinched the team's first PL title in several years (12-0)…Watts was the leader of a Hingham offense that out-scored its league opponents 26-4 this fall…Her consistent play helped guide the Harborwomen (12-6-1) to a berth in the Div. 1 South tourney, where they forced triple-OT and ultimately fell short in penalty strokes…Also a basketball player and All-star at HHS, the forward will be missed next fall as she heads off to college

Morgan Lynch – Senior Defense – Hingham

Often had the difficult task of marking the opposing team's best player and Lynch often made it look easy…The Patriot League All-star was an essential part of a defense that shut out eight PL opponents and surrendered only four PL goals this season en route to an undefeated title (12-0)…Was a stalwart in a pair of key games against rival Hanover, shutting down the Lady Indians' potent attack in a pair of 1-0 victories…Lynch benefited most from her natural stick-handling ability, which allowed her to thwart several scoring attempts…The PL All-star earned the Coach's Award at the team banquet this season… Scored the first goal of the season on a penalty stroke in Hingham's (12-6-1) devastating triple-OT loss to Dennis-Yarmouth in the Div. 1 South tourney…Lynch hopes to continue playing field hockey at the collegiate level next fall.

Cat Collins – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Old Rochester

Every girl on the Old Rochester girls field hockey team is talented, but none more than Cat Collins, the Bulldogs obvious leader on and off the field…Collins suffered a minor leg injury in a crucial game against Apponequet and had to come out of the game…ORR went on to lose that game, its only loss of the season…Collins, a senior captain, helped lead the Bulldogs to a 14-1-3 regular season, winning a South Coast Conference title and earning the second overall seed in the Div. 2 state tournament.

STAFF FILE PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Cohasset's Sheelah Scott had 11 goals and seven assists this season to lead the Skippers to a 13-5-2 record.

Cristi Pineda – Junior
Forward – Old Rochester

There's no doubt Old Rochester was one of the most talented teams in the state this fall, and Pineda was one of its most talented players…Pineda led the Bulldogs in scoring with 11 goals and six assists, pacing a potent offense that frequently put pressure on opposing defenses…Just a junior, Pineda will be relied upon heavily next season as the Bulldogs lose a very strong senior class that includes fellow all-scholastic Cat Collins and teammates Amber Zablowski and Christina Cady.

Krista Lewis – Senior (Capt.)
Midfield – Pembroke

There's one thing Pembroke senior captain Krista Lewis can always lay claim to: she was one of two captains to first lead the Pembroke High field hockey team to a state tournament berth…Lewis was the Titans biggest offensive spark in a breakout year, helping Pembroke to a 7-7-4 finish and the Div. 2 bracket's 22nd seed…Lewis was a leader on and off the field during a magical run late in the season.

Lauren Paton – Sophomore
Defense – Plymouth North

Despite only picking up the game her before her freshman season, Paton has looked like a veteran right from the start for the lady Eagles… Paton was called up to the varsity squad midway through her freshman year and she has rarely, if ever, come out of the lineup since that time… Paton plays center back, but her big shot allows her to play a part in the offense. The captain-elect for the 2007 season had two goals and two assists last season.

Corrine Short – Senior Forward – Plymouth South

After some down years for the program, Short has helped the lady Panthers steadily improve over the past few seasons… The Atlantic Coast League All-Star was a four-year starter with Plymouth South … The midfielder was strong defensively and made an impact on the offensive end of the field, chipping in with a goal and four assists this season.

Heidi Sheehan – Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder – Scituate

Whether it was scoring goals, passing to open teammates or helping out on defense, Sheehan did it all for the Sailors this fall…The offense frequently ran through Sheehan, no surprise given her all-around talents…Scored a key goal in 2-0 win over Pembroke on Sept. 20, and did it again in 3-1 Oct. 6 win over Silver Lake…Picked up three assists in 8-0 drubbing of Plymouth South…One of three Sailors to be named to the Patriot League All-Star team, a sign that the program continues to head in the right direction…Sheehan is also a standout for the SHS basketball and softball teams.

Kaylie Jacinto – Junior Forward – Wareham

Wareham junior Kaylie Jacinto had the unenviable task of stepping in to replace a departed 2005 senior class that helped lead the Vikings on a state tournament run last year…But Jacinto carried more than her share of the load…She was among the top scorers on her own team and in the South Coast Conference, en route to being named an all-star…Jacinto will head a strong junior class next fall that should make Wareham a big player on the South Coast.

the ball, just like the Skippers wanted.

The problem was, Belcastro was a lucky man on this night because his last second three-point attempt went in, and gave Hull a second chance as the game was headed for overtime.

"I felt we forced a shot we wanted to, but unfortunately the shot went in and that's part of the game," said Skippers head coach Dorian Bryant afterward.

With the game still tied at the end of four minutes of overtime, the game went into a second extra period. Here, Cohasset appeared to fall out of its groove as Hull was finally able to pull ahead. A last minute three-point shot by junior co-captain Pat McCarthy, who finished the night with 25 points, missed and that was basically it for the Skippers, as Hull was able to hold on for the win.

Senior co-captain Justin Alexander and junior Mark Flibotte had good games as they both finished with 10 points. Junior David Snowdale also played well and finished with eight.

Bryant said after the game it was a nice learning experience and that its better for something like this to happen now rather than later in the season. In order to overcome such a heartbreaker like this, Bryant said, "We need to focus more on the little things that we teach in practice, and us as coaches need to help the kids pay attention to what we teach.

"The effort was there, we all really wanted to win, but the ball doesn't always bounce your way. We need to take the positive things out of the game rather then the negatives."

In the tournament's first round, the Skippers faced off against West Bridgewater. It was a relatively tight game until the last few minutes, where Cohasset was finally able to pull ahead for good and take a 55-44 decision.

In the first couple minutes of the game the Skippers jumped out to an early 7-0 lead; but West Bridgewater answered with an 11-2 scoring run until McCarthy finished off a three-point play.

The rest of the half was a defensive battle while both teams scored very few points and neither was taking over the game. At halftime, led by McCarthy's seven points, Cohasset trailed by a mere one point to West Bridgewater.

In the first six minutes of the second half, Cohasset was able to take a six-point lead. Much like the first half, neither team was able to take control of the game and both teams exchanged shots as the clock kept on ticking. With five minutes left to play, West Bridgewater was down only one until McCarthy made two free throws and then stole the ball and passed it ahead to Flibotte for two.

Although West Bridgewater was able to sink a three-pointer to pull back to within two, the Skippers were not phased. With a minute left Cohasset was able to extend its lead to seven and hold off West Bridgewater for the rest of the game.

McCarthy and Alexander led the team with 16 points apiece, but it was Flibotte's breakthrough performance of eight points that lifted Cohasset to victory. With the win, Cohasset would face off against league and school rival Hull in a final championship game.

Following the game, Bryant said that although he thought the team played sluggish in the first half, they were able to make adjustments to play a cleaner game.

After beating Bristol-Plymouth and losing to Sacred Heart in last week's Cohasset Holiday Tournament, the Lady Skippers are 4-1 going into tonight's (Jan. 5) showdown with defending South Shore League champion Carver. The girls host Harwich on Tuesday.

Due to a series of technical errors committed by the sports editor, correspondent Evan Deutsch's report on the girls' 52-45 win over Abington on Dec. 19 has not run. It will next week, along with accounts from the Carver and Harwich games.

Skippers grappling with success

all won two bouts, as did sophomore Mike Froio, who split time between the 145- and 152-pound classes.

Froio is among a group of sophomores and freshmen that head coach Torin Sweeney says is developing nicely and making solid contributions to the team. Also among that group are Rudy Helbock (103), Jack Murphy (112), Hull's Steve Gratta (119), David Toomey (130), Andrew Liberty (135) and the 140-pound trio of Mike Dorion, Jake Wheelwright and Andrew Littauer.

Marshfield Tournament

Several Cohasset wrestlers experienced success at last week's Marshfield Holiday Wrestling Tournament, led by Cambi.

The Skippers senior dominated the first day of the competition, pinning all three opponents to advance to last Thursday's medal rounds. There, Cambi kept it up and got all the way to the 189-pound final, where he lost to a strong wrestler from Bridgewater-Raynham.

Also getting to the second day of the tournament were Adam Smith, Tim and David Toomey, McLellan and Gannon Dorion. Smith had an excellent tournament, including an 8-0 over the number-two seed and a pin against the fourth-seeded wrestler.

Smith eventually finished fourth.

six for Mashpee). The first line of senior Corbin Faber and juniors Charlie Czerkawski and Pat Doonan applied a lot of pressure, and it was Doonan who factored into the team's second goal.

The junior winger, who came into the game with a team-high 10 points (nine goals, one assist), controlled the puck in the offensive zone and slid it to senior defenseman Conor Holway at the left point. Holway's blast appeared to be tipped by Doonan into the net, but official credit for the goal went to Holway. Either way, it was 2-0 Cohasset with 2:13 to go in the first period.

Davis broke it open with just 18.9 seconds left before the first intermission, punching in a rebound for his second goal of the night. Line-mates Lanzillotti and Smith again got credit for the assists.

Wade made 15 saves to earn the first shutout of his high school career. Wade is beginning to come into his own as a goalie, and is looking far more confident and assertive than during his freshman season.

The second period went scoreless, despite a flurry of shots in the middle of the frame by Cohasset. Toward the end of the period, Wade made three saves during a Mashpee power play.

With Wade, Holway and senior defenseman Zack Murray keeping Mashpee forwards at bay, the Skippers' offense went back to work in the third period. At the 10:27 mark, Doonan made a pretty pass from the right corner to Faber in front, and the senior winger went 5-hole to score Cohasset's fourth goal of the evening. Czerkawski also earned an assist on the play.

With just 3:28 to play, it was Czerkawski assisting Doonan, putting a cap on another strong game from the Skippers' top line.

"That line has been so productive," said Walsh. "They're such grinders; they wear people down. They don't care about scoring pretty goals or looking good. They're just looking to put the puck in the net."

Wade made 15 saves to earn the first shutout of his high school career. Wade is beginning to come into his own as a goalie, and is looking far more confident and assertive than during his freshman season. Walsh attributed that in part to Wade's work with assistant coach Dayce Moore, a former goalie for Xaverian.

Holiday Tournament

Before the Blue Hills game, the Skippers earned a 6-2 win over Southeastern Regional in the first round of the tournament.

Doonan continued his torrid start to the season with two goals in that game, followed by one apiece from sophomore Andrew Bell, Murray, Lanzillotti and Smith. For Bell, it was the first goal of his high school career.

Pan-Mass Challenge

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge opens through the PMC Web site, pmc.org, Tuesday, Jan. 16, at 9 a.m.

Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5. The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country.

This year's goal is to raise $27 million for the Jimmy Fund, which supports cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. To date, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for the world-renowned cancer research center.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route.

One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route. Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. More than 200 PMC cyclists and volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more.

For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

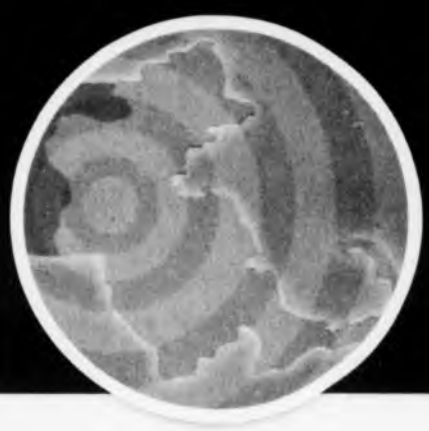
Back to reality after break

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

With a little under a month left in this semester, now is the time to square away any scheduling issues or concerns!

I hope everyone enjoyed the break, because this Tuesday students groggily entered CHS. The bells that signal the start of the school day and the class periods dealt us crushing blow; simultaneously waking us up and dashing any hopes that we were sharing a collective nightmare. Wake up and grab your backpacks — classes are back in session. With a little under a month left in this semester, now is the time to square away any scheduling issues or concerns! Once the quarter starts the early bird really does get the worm. Be wary of your curriculum, and there shouldn't be any problems.



- Tuesday after school a PDP Information Session was held in the Library.
- The Middle School faculty met in the library after school Tuesday.
- Wednesday the Safe School Initiative met after school.
- The School Improvement Council met after school Wednesday afternoon.
- School Committee met Wednesday evening.
- Thursday morning the PSO Principal's Council met.

Officers from the Cohasset Police Department came in to talk to Mr. Buckley's Law class Thursday, continuing their ongoing program with high school students.

That sums up this week's news. The shortage of news most definitely doesn't reflect the haphazard CHS students adjusting to the school schedule — present in class while their minds drift to happier places. While we go on vacation mentally, those familiar bells (and the voices of our teachers) stomp on our sandcastles and sound reveille in our ears. Heading back to school after a taste of freedom is like being brought back to the big house after a break-out. The warden and COs are pretty lenient, even if they do give us a lot of homework. They just want to turn us into citizens, and help us turn ourselves into something.

Look at it this way guys; at least we aren't really locked up. We're in gen. pop instead of solitary. And our "time" is only as bad as we make it. In all seriousness, we're a lot luckier than we let on. Still though, some of us might prefer a spot in a chain gang. I'll see you next week.

Tom Foster retires from The Trustees of Reservations

Helped lead Coalition to Preserve Turkey Hill

The Trustees of Reservations have announced with regret the retirement of Tom Foster, Vice President of Field Operations. Foster served as a backbone of the nation's oldest regional non-profit land conservation trust for 31 years. Soon after his retirement, he will leave his longtime Hingham home on Weir River Farm to relocate to South Deerfield, in the picturesque Pioneer Valley.

Beginning with his role as Superintendent for the Trustees' South Shore and Cape Cod Management Units in 1975, Foster quickly grew with the organization, taking on the Southeast Region in 1978 and then the Southeast and Islands Region in 1985. After changing his leadership focus to mainland Trustees' properties in 1992, he took charge of the Field Operations division in July 2002. In this role, he produced the first strategic plan for field operations, introducing a statewide framework for the care and preservation The Trustees' 96 reservations, all of which are open to the public.

In the late 1990's, Foster helped lead The Coalition to Preserve Turkey Hill, a 62-acre reservation whose 187-foot summit offers spectacular views of the South Shore. Now co-managed by The Trustees with the towns of Cohasset and Hingham and their respective land trusts, Turkey Hill was the missing piece needed to link Whitney and Thayer Woods Reservation to the Weir River Farm, originally known as the "Common Lands of the Hingham Planters," referring to the colonists who settled there beginning around 1634. Around 1904, Henry M. Whitney began purchasing parcels of abandoned farmland to create a private estate. The Whitney Woods Association later acquired much of the estate and donated more than 600 acres to The Trustees of Reservations in 1933, who have owned and managed the property ever since. Ten years later, Thayer Woods was also donated, and the Reservation became known as Whitney and Thayer Woods.

"The protection of Turkey Hill not only linked Whitney and Thayer Woods to Weir River Farm, but helped to preserve the cultural and agricultural character of Hingham," Foster said. "The work we accomplished there, in partnership with town residents, the Conservation Commissions, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the Hingham Land Conservation Trust, volunteers and town officials, established the community-driven, grass roots model we now use for nearly all Trustees land protection projects around the state."

Tom Foster, a Hingham resident, served as a backbone of the nation's oldest regional non-profit land conservation trust for 31 years.

"The protection of Turkey Hill not only linked Whitney and Thayer Woods to Weir River Farm, but helped to preserve the cultural and agricultural character of Hingham."

— Tom Foster

In addition to his many significant contributions to The Trustees, both locally and statewide, Tom has also been an active participant in the Hingham community serving for many years as an active member of a number of committees including the Hingham Fourth of July committee and The Hingham Town Advisory Committee. In addition, he was also a member of St. John's in Hingham where he served on the Vestry during the 1990's.

Movie review

Take family to 'The Museum'

"Night at the Museum" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Larry (Ben Stiller) gets a private tour of the museum by Teddy Roosevelt (Robin Williams).

If you think "Jumanji" sounds like an Italian word for what Israelites do at dinnertime, "Night at the Museum" will seem unique. But the film is, in fact, a variation on that 1995 blockbuster.

"Night at the Museum," based on a 1993 children's book by Croatia-born illustrator and animator Milan Trenc and directed by Shawn Levy ("The Pink Panther"), is a distinct improvement.

Ben Stiller, the film industry's current favorite Everyman, is Larry Daley, divorced dad and newly appointed night watchman at New York City's world-famous Museum of Natural History.

After passing muster with the museum's three ancient, retiring guards — played by veterans Dick Van Dyke, Bill Cobbs and an apoplectic Mickey Rooney — Larry learns a secret.

At night, the museum's displays come to life, leaving Larry alone with roving wild animals and cavemen. Meet San Juan Hill-era Teddy Roosevelt (Robin Williams of "Jumanji") and his trusty steed, King. Watch out for the frolicking T.rex skeleton. Here comes Attila the Hun (Patrick Gallagher) and his barbaric hordes. The Easter Island head demands gum. Stay away from the Hall of African Mammals: The lions will eat you.

"Night at the Museum" will do for the Museum of Natural History what "The Da Vinci Code" did for the Louvre. It will make it a popular stop for families whose children will demand to see the real thing after seeing the movie, and that's considerably healthier than a plug for Domino's Pizza.

The dynamic between Larry and his son Nick (Jake Cherry) is trite. Scenes featuring Stiller and his real-life mother, Anne Meara, as an unemployment-office worker have more edge.

The film has a wonderful sense of playfulness, evident in scenes recalling "Gulliver's Travels." A bit involving Larry getting in touch with Attila's inner child is a hoot, and casting Carla Gugino as a history nerd will appeal to men who like women brainy and bodacious. An unrequited romance between Teddy and Sacajawea (Mizuo Peck) is a nonstarter.

But Williams pays a nice tribute to Ray Bolger's immortal Scarecrow from "The Wizard of Oz," and, as a tiny rival cowboy and Roman centurion, Owen Wilson and Steve Coogan bring a surreal daffiness to their scenes as well as an amusing "Brokeback Mountain" reference. Moreover, kids will love Dexter, the mischievous Capuchin monkey, even if the digital, slapping-the-monkey bit is sophomoric. There's even a tiny "Apocalypto" display, featuring ancient Mayans armed with blowguns.

Every Christmas, a film opens that every family wants to see. This year, it's "Night at the Museum."

CHARLOTTE'S WEB (B+)

Leading ladies are usually beautiful, but in "Charlotte's Web," the latest live-action adaptation of E.B. White's classic novel, the star is downright ugly. If it's possible to see beyond the surface of this eight-legged wonder (voiced by Julia Roberts), you will find that director Gary Winick's vision does justice to this timeless tale. The sensational swine is Wilbur (Dominic Scott Kay), the runt of the litter who is nurtured by Fern (Dakota Fanning). Wilbur's days are numbered, but a new friend offers him some help. Using her talents and expertise, Charlotte sets out to save Wilbur and prove he's special by weaving messages in her web, and the town becomes enthralled with this small miracle. (Rated G) — Chelsea Bain

CHILDREN OF MEN (A-)

"Children of Men" is a terrific and haunting example of the end-of-the-world tales. It's 2027, and human beings have ceased to reproduce. In Britain, where the story is set, TV viewers mourn the news of the murder of "Baby Diego," the youngest person on earth. Theodore Faron (Clive Owen), a Scotch-soaked journalist with connections in high places, gets involved with a resistance movement at the behest of the mysterious femme fatale Julian (Julianne Moore). In these bleak, war-torn times, "Children of Men" might be the most relevant film of the year outside of the several documentaries about the fighting in Iraq. (Rated R)

THE CURSE OF THE GOLDEN FLOWER (A)

For sheer, sumptuous spectacle, nothing you've seen all year is going to top Zhang Yimou's "The Curse of the Golden Flower." It's a 10th century battle of wills, armies and psychology between the scheming, selfish, all-powerful Emperor of China (Chow Yun Fat) and his beautiful and perhaps doomed, unfaithful Empress (Gong Li). "Curse" exhibits enough martial arts fighting to satisfy any "Matrix" fan. There are armies of black ninjas, resourceful female fighters and a climactic battle of thousands that's a bit like the fearsome night siege in "The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers." (Rated R) — Stephen Schaefer

Aging hippie Jasper (Michael Caine) has a political discussion with bureaucrat Theo (Clive Owen) in "Children of Men."

THE GOOD GERMAN (C)

Imagine "Casablanca" without Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman, director Michael Curtiz or writers Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, and you have "The Good German." The film, a pastiche of 1940s postwar tropes, has an impressive pedigree. Featuring George Clooney and Cate Blanchett as "Casablanca"-like lovers in a black-and-white, post-World War II Berlin, the film is a beached cinematic whale. Clooney is hardboiled scribe Jack Geismer, a military journalist who returns to cover the Potsdam Conference, where Truman, Churchill and Stalin will divide the world among them. In the process, square-jawed, cock-hatted Jack gets involved in a murder investigation involving darkly sexy Lena Brandt (Blanchett), his onetime lover. "You should never have come back to Berlin," someone says to Jack, echoing that famous "Chinatown" kicker. Putting it another way, I might suggest, "Don't play it again, Sam." (Rated R)

THE HISTORY BOYS (A-)

Paging "Dead Poets Society" members. How and why knowledge is transmitted is the subject of "The History Boys," a film adaptation of Alan Bennett's acclaimed 2004 stage play featuring the original cast directed by Nicholas Hytner ("The Madness of King George"). The result should appeal equally to teachers, students, theater buffs and fans of fine, finely-acted films, which is to say as many people as are currently going ga-ga for penguins. "The History Boys" recalls such vintage, British school-days favorites as James Hilton's novel-turned-film "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and Terence Rattigan's beloved play "The Browning Version." Predictably, the film's most characteristic trait is its dialogue, which this cast virtually sings. (Rated R)

"We've kicked this around for a while and finally, we made the decision to expand and move forward with changes to the building."

— James Watson, Cohasset Hardware

Jim "Benji" Watson of Cohasset Hardware is closing shop in the village later this month. The store has been in the extended family since the 1920s and the immediate family since 1964.

Cohasset Hardware to close its doors

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It truly is the end of an era. Since the 1920s, Cohasset residents have been able to run downtown for a can of paint or a box of nails, but that will no longer be the case as Cohasset Hardware has plans to close its doors.

James Watson, who along with his brother and sister own the building located at 40 South Main St., said while he is unsure what the future will hold, he would like to renovate the space currently occupied by the hardware store into two retail spaces. He would also like to renovate the upstairs portion of the building into four apartment units, if the town passes zoning bylaw changes that would allow him to do so.

"We've kicked this around for a while and finally, we made the decision to expand and move forward with changes to the building," said Watson, adding while on one hand it will be sad to leave the business behind, on the other, he feels relieved that the decision has been made. "I think it's a very positive decision and we're very excited about doing the building over."

The clearance signs in the windows of Cohasset Hardware indicate Watson is looking for a somewhat speedy exit. He estimated it would only take a couple of months to have things cleared out and ready to move forward. With circumstances the way they are, with the much larger Hingham Lumber located on Route 3A, Watson said he had always figured it would only be a matter of time before he would start to feel its effects.

"The big paint companies don't put more than a couple of retailers within close proximity to each other," he said, and although he thinks Hingham

Village viability subject of powwow

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Village is going to change, but just how much or when are questions that remain to be answered.

To help chart a course for the future, members of the Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, Sewer Commission, Board of Appeals, Advisory Committee and Economic Development Committee held a joint meeting last Thursday (Jan. 4) to try to brainstorm and find some common ground from which everyone can move forward together. At the top of the list: making sure the Village stays a viable entity in town.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore chaired the joint meeting and said in his opinion, the only way to find a solution for the downtown area, is to figure out what the "problems" are with the area. He said it has continually been said that the area does not have enough parking, or that it needs more people living there, and that is why the area is not as economically viable as it should be. He said in his opinion, a thorough analysis needs to be conducted before anything drastic is done. "Maybe we'll change things and shoot ourselves in the foot. As a town, we're famous for that," he said.

Moore also said people continuously talk about the "character" of the downtown area, but it has never been defined. "What is it?" he asked. "We got here because there was no plan. Look at the Village 75 years ago and I think you'd have a hard time recognizing it, yet somehow, the character is surviving," he said.

Above all, Moore said his board is not going to be too hurried to make decisions that aren't well thought out.

Housing proposal upsets neighborhood

Worries about traffic, zoning and septic issues

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although he stood for the entire meeting, Housing Partnership Chairman Tom Callahan was definitely in the hot seat Tuesday night.

The Partnership has announced it would like to transform the building located at 25 Ripley Road, which is currently a single-family home but has its roots in town as the Cohasset Private Hospital and nursing home, into a seven-unit "friendly 40B" affordable housing project. Neighbors, who were invited to attend a meeting at the Paul Pratt Library to ask questions and provide feedback on the project's preliminary proposal, were overwhelmingly opposed.

There were roughly 40 abutters in attendance, many of whom argued not only will their homes lose value with the addition of the project to their neighborhood, but also that they are living in a residential district which already has five non-residential entities within its boundaries. The South Shore Music Circus, the Cohasset Swim Center, the Little League fields, the Paul Pratt Library / Our World Children's Museum and the condominiums located at 150 N. Main St., are not single-family homes and add to the traffic in their neighborhood.

Callahan said Cohasset is a town that has time and time again spoken to the importance of building more affordable housing. "(However), we are a predominantly single-family home community," he said, and to meet the affordable housing guidelines set by the state, the town is likely going to have to build some multi-family housing in predominantly

Man arrested in conjunction with MV break-ins at Whitney Woods

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey isn't reluctant to give luck some credit when that credit is due.

In fact, a little luck combined with solid police work has resulted in the arrest last week of a man whom police believe is responsible for the rash of motor vehicle "smash and grab" break-ins in the Whitney Woods parking lot off Route 3A. The parking lot is across the street from Cohasset Plaza.

For the past month, several victims — including one woman who was home for the holidays visiting her parents — have contacted police after walking the trails in the wooded reservation only to find a window smashed in their motor vehicle and some valuables gone.

During the process of the investigation, Cohasset police reached out to other towns — an effort that has paid off.

A suspect was arrested in Scituate following the alleged theft of a pocketbook in Marshfield. Scituate notified Cohasset police who interviewed the suspect. As a result of that investigation, Cohasset will seek charges of larceny and breaking & entering of a motor vehicle against Peter Bulman of Pratt Road in Scituate. Police believe Bulman, 27, acted alone and was involved in as many as seven larcenies at Whitney Woods.

"We figured it was one person and was someone local who lived within a radius of a few miles of the site – so we communicated with neighboring towns," Hussey said.

However, Hussey reiterated that despite the arrest, motorists should still put any valuables in their trunk or under a seat so they are out of plain sight. He explained hiding valuables when leaving the car to take a walk or shop would help deter a potential criminal.

Intoxicated youth

In responding to a call about a party that was breaking up, police came across a young man whom they determined was under the influence of alcohol and transported him home to his parents. The incident occurred at about 12:33 a.m. Monday (Jan. 1). Police did not find any motor vehicles in the area. The young man was underage, Chief James Hussey said.

Email issue

Officer Lisa Matos is talking with the various young, teens involved in "threatening emails." Chief James Hussey said a mother reported on Monday (Jan. 1) that her son had been receiving threatening emails. Hussey said after further review police determined the emails did not rise to the level of a crime. However, Matos, who works with the schools, would sit down with the parties involved and try to handle the matter. The teens are 13 and 14 years old, Hussey said.

MV crash

The operator of a 1994 Ford pickup was cited for speeding and not having a valid inspection sticker following a single-car accident at 12:04 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 2) on Norman Todd Road. Police responded to the scene after dispatch received several calls about a motor vehicle that hit a tree.

The operator told police he had gotten something in his eye and took his eyes off the road for just a second when the accident occurred.

However, police determined excess speed had to have been a cause because of the damage to the pickup. The operator was transported to the hospital with non life-threatening injuries, police said.

Junior operator

A youth driving on a junior operator's license could be fined and have his license suspended. Last Thursday (Jan. 4) at 3:07 p.m. at Ripley Road and Depot Court, police stopped the youth who had passengers in the car. Chief James Hussey said the teen had been stopped before for the same thing and had received a verbal warning.

There is a passenger restriction during the first six months of junior operator licensure, including no passengers under 18, unless accompanied by another licensed driver 21 or older with one year or more driving experience, occupying front passenger seat. The passenger restriction is not applicable to junior operator's immediate family members (parents and siblings), according to the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Intoxicated driver

A clerk at the gas station on King Street notified police about a customer who came in and appeared to be intoxicated. The clerk asked the man not to drive but he did anyway, police said. The information was put out to other police departments and Scituate stopped the vehicle and is pursuing the charge of operating under the influence against the individual, Chief Hussey said. Hussey praised the clerk for calling police.

He said police appreciate calls about erratic drivers and other situations, such as the intoxicated gas station customer, because they can prevent a potential accident.

Hit & run

Last Friday (Jan. 5), a caller reported seeing a hit and run accident at Leo's Exxon. The plate number was obtained from the video camera and police contacted the motorist who thought he had just "bumped bumpers," Chief Hussey said. However, there was a cracked headlight lens on the other car.

3A MV crash

Last Saturday (Jan. 6) at about 11:09 a.m., several callers notified dispatch about a car accident at Route 3A and lower King Street. Police said a 2004 Kia was heading northbound on 3A (toward Hingham). A 2005 Ford van was coming out of lower King and was trying to make a left to head southbound on 3A when the collision occurred. The operator of the Ford van was cited for failure to yield. Police say the Ford pulled out in front of the Kia, causing the collision. There were no injuries but the Kia had to be towed from the scene.

Drug arrest

Based on information received by the investigation division of the Cohasset Police Department, officers made some observations and based on those observations have arrested Justin E. Baker, 21, of 43 Elm St., for possession of OxyContin, Chief Hussey said. "The investigation is ongoing," he said.

OxyContin is a narcotic drug.

Emergency notification system coming

The town will soon initiate the emergency notification system called Connect-CTY. Also known as the "reverse 9-1-1" system, residents will be able to submit up to three separate telephone numbers and an e-mail address to receive emergency communications from the town. The town will be conducting a test call in the near future, using the primary telephone number provided by Verizon.

The town has developed a policy for the Connect-CTY system, which Town Manager Bill Griffin said he hopes will be online this week. The policy notes there are two kinds of emergencies: intra-departmental notifications and public notifications.

Department heads or their designees would send the intra-departmental notifications to employees. Approval from the Town Manager would not be necessary. Public notifications would come in the form of time-sensitive emergency dispatches and town-generated emergency notifications. The Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Town Manager, Police Chief, Fire Chief, Emergency Preparedness Director, or their designees could only initiate the time sensitive emergency dispatches. The Emergency Management Team must be included on these dispatches.

Time sensitive emergency dispatches might include severe weather, natural disasters, terrorism threats, community emergency response team (CERT) activation, hostage situations, amber alerts/missing persons, danger from a fire, HazMat incidents, bomb threats, or health risks such as EEE virus exposure.

Town-generated emergency notifications must be generated by a town department head and the Town Manager need not approve the notification. These types of notification include; power outages, water main breaks, water contamination, temporary water shut-off, or special service needs as approved by the Town Manager, such as senior citizen communications or transportation.

In a story last week about the Deanes' proposed new home at 90 Gammons Road, the Mariner should have said the owners are Gordon and Motoko Deane. Mr. Deane was misidentified as John in the story.

The Mariner apologizes for the error.

And as a matter of clarification, the Deanes have two daughters who live with them. A direct quote from an abutter may have led readers to think there would only be two people, Mr. and Mrs. Deane, living in the home.

CFD sets fees for open burning permits

DEP rules to be followed

"This process is being instituted so that we can properly track who is burning, what is being burned and where it is being burned."
— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Open air burning is allowed as of Jan. 15 and the fire department is taking the proper precautions to ensure everything is in place for the start of the season. To that end, residents should know there are new fees in place for obtaining burning permits. Safety will be closely monitored, to ensure any burning adheres to the rules laid out by the Department of Environmental Protection.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia came before the Board of Selectmen Monday, seeking permission to implement an open burning permit fee of $5. Until now, burning permits had been free, but with a tight town budget, all town departments are being forced to take a look at their fee structures.

Silvia said the towns of Hingham and Scituate both charge $5 for a permit, and 11 of the 16 towns listed in the town's benchmarking report charge for a burning permit — seven reported they charge $10 and three charge $5.

In addition to implementing the new fee, the process to obtain an open-air burning permit will be different this year. In the past, residents were able to call the station and receive permission to burn, but that will no longer be allowed. Applicants must come down to the station and apply for the permit in person, and upon receiving the permit, will also receive a set of regulations which dictate the rules of burning.

"This process is being instituted so that we can properly track who is burning, what is being burned and where it is being burned," Silvia said.

"The $5 fee would pay for one permit that would be good for the entire season," said Silvia, adding once the permit is granted, residents may burn as much as they like during the season, which lasts until May 1, provided they call the station first, each time they wish to burn.

Residents who receive a permit will be required to sign a form, indicating they have received a copy of the rules. The fire department will keep a copy on file. The department has also set the goal of inputting the names of residents who receive burning permits into an excel spreadsheet, which will allow the department to keep track of everyone. "We hope that this will streamline the process," he said.

Silvia said he would recommend to anyone who thinks they will need to burn at some time during the season, that they obtain their permit as soon as possible. He said that will avoid having a rush to the station on the first warm weekend in April, when residents typically show up in droves for their permits, although he quipped with the way the weather has been, people could be showing up earlier than that.

The DEP and fire department limit open burning for public health and safety reasons. Open burning pollutes the air and can make it difficult for people with respiratory problems to breathe. In addition, when the air is stagnant, open burning can cause smoke and odor nuisances and pose health risks to nearby residents, particularly in densely populated areas. Open burning can also pose a safety risk when it is not adequately controlled.

Silvia said residents are allowed to burn brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris, but are not allowed to burn grass, hay, leaves or stumps. He said in the past, "People played fast and loose with the rules," and the fire department has witnessed not only burning of improper materials, but burning much too close to buildings.

Selectmen Vice Chairman Rob Spofford asked what the fire department could do about residents who do not abide by the rules.

"We can revoke their permits, or some communities charge a fee to go put out the fire," Silvia said. Spofford said he would like to see the department take further enforcement action and said charging to put out an illegal open-air fire is the proper way of covering the cost of the department's efforts.

"I have no problem with that," said Silvia of implementing fines. Spofford said he thought having more of a consequence would give the permit "more teeth." Silvia noted the vast majority of people who conducted burning in the past did call the fire department ahead of time.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said in his opinion, the rule which says burning may only take place between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. forces residents to get a late start to their day. Silvia explained that rule is one of the DEP's and it is merely his department's job to enforce the rule.

For more information on burning, please contact the fire department on its business line at (781) 383-0616. More information can also be found on the Department of Environmental Protection's Web site at www.mass.gov/dep/air/compliance/burning.htm.

Open burning season begins Jan. 15

Below is the "Frequently Asked Questions" page from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection webpage about open burning.

The season begins on Jan. 15. The Cohasset Fire Department is changing the procedure for obtaining a burning permit in the Town of Cohasset. Permits will not be issued over the phone as in past years. Anyone wishing to obtain a permit must apply at Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St. Permits will be issued for individual addresses and will be good for the entire burning season, Jan. 15 to May 1.

What are the limits on open burning in Massachusetts?

The Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP) and the Cohasset Fire Department limit open burning for public health and safety reasons. Open burning pollutes the air and can make it difficult for people with respiratory problems to breathe. When the air is stagnant, open burning can pose smoke and odor nuisances - and health risks - to nearby residents, particularly in densely populated areas. Open burning can also pose a safety risk when it is not adequately controlled. The limits on open burning do not apply to outdoor cooking.

What can be burned, when, and under what conditions?

You may burn, with limits: brush, cane, driftwood, forestry debris, tree prunings, dead raspberry stalks, blueberry patches and infected beehives. You may not legally burn grass, hay, leaves, stumps or tires.

In most of the state's towns and cities, homeowners are allowed to burn brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris - not including grass, hay, leaves or stumps - between Jan. 15 and May 1, so long as the open burning takes place:

- with the permission of the local fire department;
- between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.;
- when the air is circulating well but winds are light;
- no less than 75 feet away from all dwellings; and
- on your own property and as close as possible to the source of material(s) to be burned.

Be sure to get a permit from your local fire department before burning anything.

Fungus-infected elmwood and other materials normally associated with agriculture and agricultural land clearing - such as tree prunings, dead raspberry stalks, blueberry patches for pruning purposes - and disease-infected beehives may also be burned with fire department permission.

What types of open burning are not allowed?

There are no circumstances under which it is legal to burn grass, hay, leaves, stumps or tires. They simply do not burn as "cleanly" as those materials that may legally be burned. All of them produce acrid smoke that causes nuisance conditions and threatens people's health. When tires are burned, they produce noxious gases and petroleum residue, both of which can be harmful to people and the environment.

In addition, the burning of brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris from commercial or industrial land clearing is prohibited statewide.

Open Burning Guidelines:

First things first:

Contact your local fire department for information on obtaining an open burning permit.

Starting the fire:

Remove all grass from the area where you will be burning.

Try to start the fire with natural "kindling" - never with gasoline or charcoal lighter fluid. If you must use an artificial helper, kerosene is probably safest.

While burning:

Never add brush that is green or wet. It will reduce the efficiency of the fire and produce thick smoke.

Someone must attend the fire until it's completely out. You will need a hose or other supply of water and a shovel or rake for controlling the fire.

Putting the fire out:

Burn the fire down to the coals, drown them with water, spread them out, then drown them again.

BRIEFLY

Town Census to be mailed

The Town Census for 2007 will be mailed to each household the week of Jan. 15th. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2007. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2006 license. If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Rep. Bradley office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley (D – Hingham) will hold district office hours on Friday (Jan. 19th), at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham, from 6-7pm. Whistle free Greenbush not a guarantee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There is still no guarantee the Greenbush line will be a whistle (or horn) free train.

At Monday's Selectmen's meeting Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan presented information regarding the potential MBTA schedule, once the trains are up and running. In the midst of conversation, the question of whether the town would be a whistle-free zone surfaced.

"We've been designed to not have a horn," said Gruber, but added the town must put in an application in order to be approved as a whistle-free zone. Brennan added, "A certain inventory needs to take place," as officials come to the town and inspect the design to ensure the proper measures are in place to forego the whistle.

Members of the Board of Selectmen were shocked by the news.

"I thought it was a done deal," said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer.

However, Gruber noted he and Brennan have been led to believe by the MBTA that the town will have no problem receiving approval. "Right now it's not a done deal, but we expect it will be," said Gruber.

Dormitzer said he is also concerned about the lack of shelter at the planned station. He said he received a call from a citizen who made the excellent point that the only shelter at the station for commuters waiting for the train is a shelter that will be roughly 200 feet away from the platform and used for people waiting at the drop off and pick up area.

Gruber said the shelter Dormitzer is referring to is similar to what would be found at a bus stop, with only three walls and very little protection. "It could fit 10 to 12 people, maybe, if they're good friends," he quipped. He also noted the shelter in Cohasset will be the same as at other stations on the line and other stations that currently exist.

Dormitzer said it is the simple things like providing a little shelter from the elements that will help encourage commuters to use the train. "We want people to use it," he said.

Book unveiled for 'One Book' program

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen is now on board with the One Book One Cohasset program.

At Monday's Selectmen's meeting, Library Director Jackie Rafferty and Chair of the Library Board of Trustees Stacey Weaver came before the board to present an overview of the program and unveiled the book which will be at the center of Cohasset until April 1.

All five members of the Board of Selectmen received a copy of "The Last Pick," by David J. McGillivray, written with Cohasset resident Linda Glass Fechter, so they can participate in the town-wide reading program.

"It's a wonderful concept," said Rafferty, adding the program began in Seattle and spread across the country and now cities and towns across the nation are participating. The program asks the entire community to read a book, and from there it challenges the town to begin a common dialogue about the book and its message, supported by activities and events which also tie in with the book's theme. By having the community participate in a group activity, it helps foster a feeling of unity and togetherness. The hope is that people will also bring the One Book concept to the various groups they might be in, whether it be Boy or Girl Scouts, houses of worship, or the Rotary Club, and adapt it for their purposes.

"Could there be a better program for the library to run?" Rafferty asked.

Rafferty said the program would give the library the opportunity to think creatively, to come up with ideas to keep the whole community involved. "We've already gotten to know people," we didn't know before beginning the program, she said.

Selectman Fred Koed asked how many books the library will be bringing in for the program.

"We're borrowing some from other libraries and the Friends of the Library have purchased some. We're also partnering with Buttonwood Books," she said. The library is also trying to work with groups, such as the Council on Elder Affairs, to ensure everyone has access to a copy. Town Manager Bill Griffin quipped, "I mentioned it at home, and guess what I got for Christmas?"

Coauthor Fechter also attended the meeting and said from the very beginning she has been very excited about the program. "I love it because we haven't asked for any money," she said, adding there have been a number of generous donations already for the books and supplies, which make the program possible. She said Goodwin Graphics designed the logo for the One Book program for free, which will be featured on promotional materials such as fliers and t-shirts, and some sponsors have already come forward for the shirts.

"The Last Pick" tells the story of Dave McGillivray, now race director of the Boston Marathon. McGillivray, who stands 5 feet 4 inches tall, often found himself standing alone as kids of larger stature were chosen for team sports. While he thought he would never "measure up," McGillivray was determined to overcome the odds with perseverance, discipline and a steadfast belief that he could attain seemingly unattainable goals with a lot of preparation and hard work.

"This book was chosen because of its message," said Weaver. She added while it helped that Fechter lives in town and McGIllivray is not far away, the library felt the message would be universal.

Program at a glance

What: One Book One Cohasset encourages the entire town to read one book and participate in discussion groups and other activities which unite the community around the book's central theme.

When: The program will officially kick off in February and will continue until April 1, culminating with the Road Race By the Sea.

Book: "The Last Pick," by David J. McGillivray and Cohasset resident Linda Glass Fechter.

Where to get it: The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Buttonwood Books and major book retailers.

New trail map for Wheelwright Park

Thanks to Boy Scout August Oddleifson, the town has a new trail map for Wheelwright Park and the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary. For his Eagle Scout Project, Oddleifson, a member of Troop 28, not only used GPS mapping software to create a new map, he cleared away brush for a new trail to be enjoyed by all.

Town Manager Bill Griffin informed the Board of Selectmen about the project Monday and said the maps are available at two kiosks constructed by high school students. Pat O'Brien, Christopher Bryan and Will Pinkus built the kiosks as part of Jack Buckley's civics and community service class.

"I recently went up to look and all the maps were gone," Griffin said of a recent trip to Wheelwright Park. He said the maps are so helpful to residents walking in the woods that they are having trouble keeping up with the demand. However, he noted the maps are also available at Town Hall.

Deer Hill third graders help the homeless

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WINTER WARMTH

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing? The winter feel has been around a little bit this week and maybe will continue into the beginning of next. I am very happy that the dark hour of the afternoon is slowly moving ahead closer to 5 p.m. now. It always makes it feel a bit blah around when it is dark by 4:30 no matter what the temps are outside. Make sure to read about the Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast happening on Monday. Enjoy the long weekend if you have one and send in your news and information for me next week.

CYBSA REGISTRATION

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association is holding its annual registration for the upcoming spring baseball and softball season from now through Feb. 15. The CYBSA will hold a walk-in registration on Saturday, Jan. 20, from 9 a.m. to noon, in the upper lobby of the high school gymnasium. Registration forms are also available on our website: CYBSA.net and at the Town Hall. Mailed in registration forms need to be postmarked by Feb. 15, 2007. For more detailed information, please see the Sports section.

CARING BANK

Here is a bit of news on some work done by a local band. During the holidays, Pilgrim Bank and its employees continued their tradition of supporting the community by donating funds to support local activities. The Bank bought gift cards for the Scituate and Cohasset food pantries to distribute to their families in the amount of $500. In addition, the employees organized a fundraiser, which raised more than $200, matched by the Bank, to donate $500 to the South Shore Hospital Breast Care Center.

TAKING THE PLUNGE

Julian Herth comes out of the water on Sandy Beach after a New Year's Day plunge.

Julian Herth moved with his family to Cohasset from St. Louis, Mo. this summer and decided to celebrate his first New Year in Cohasset with a plunge at Sandy Beach on New Year's Day to prep for an annual fundraiser.

Julian had planned on repeating his plunge in February on Hampton Beach to raise money for Farmsteads of New England, a farming environment in Hillsborough, N.H. enhancing life for special people with special needs www.farmsteads-ne.org. However, Julian found out this week he has to be 15 years old for the Hampton Beach plunge!

We're sure Julian will be helping the program when he is old enough!

Julian is an eighth grader at Cohasset Middle School, son of Diane and John Herth.

GIFT OF GIVING

The Deer Hill School third grade class exhibited the gift of giving this holiday season in support of helping the homeless. Through indirect support from Malden Mills, the classes made fleece blankets and scarves. The students with the aid from their parents all helped in the project. Some of the blankets and scarves were given directly to families in need while others were sold, at various school activities, to raise money. The proceeds from these sales were used to buy needed items and supplies for the homeless. Everyone is so proud of these third graders in showing their spirit and true gift of the holidays. These types of stories are so nice to write about and include in this column. Keep sending them in.

A pancake breakfast will be served from 9 to 10 a.m. followed by an uplifting program honoring the memory of Dr. King. The featured speaker will be David Hall, Professor of law, at Northeastern University. Professor Hall is the author of "The Spiritual Revitalization of the Legal Profession: A Search for Sacred Rivers" and his breakfast talk is titled "Looking in Dr. King's Mirror." Class of 1982 graduates please contact Marcy Brown Fleming at marcydon@msn.com to update your contact information. If you don't have email, please write or call: Marcy Fleming, 211 W. Linwood Dr., Birmingham, AL 35209; (205) 879-9253.Hope to see you then!

VOLLEYBALL CLINIC

Here is a super fitness and sport program to consider for your child in grades 5- 9. The Cohasset Recreation Department is sponsoring a youth volleyball clinic for boys and girls in grades 5-9 at the Deer Hill School gym on Tuesday and/or Friday afternoons. This program is being run by Ben Leong and Wendy Lum, both of Cohasset from 3:30-5:30 and is 8 weeks long. Children will learn the basic skills or enhance skills already learned, bumping, setting, serving, spiking and most important, have fun and work as a team. If your child would like to take this class on both days each week, the cost is $140 and for one day a week, the cost is $100. The registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall Recreation Department or by logging onto www.onecreativeplace.net. If you have any questions or would like to register by phone, call 781-383-4109 or 781-383-2211. For questions about the actual program, you may email Wendy at LeongLum@NEHCF.NEMC.org . This class is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, Jan. 16.

Third graders at Deer Hill made fleece blankets and scarves to help the homeless. Be sure to read more about it in this week's Around Town.

LACROSSE BOOSTERS

Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (781-383-9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event and the boosters will be sure to run out of tickets before the 20th, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and we need the support of the entire community! The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls.

This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to our younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Our recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

That is all the news for this week. Send me in any that you may have for the next copy no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

CEA takes New Year's resolutions in stride

Offers myriad programs to keep seniors in shape

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As we approach the middle of January, it's not unusual to see New Year's resolutions fading off into the distance. The good intention to start exercising again or get finances in order may sometimes fall by the wayside as old habits tend to die hard.

But at the Council on Elder Affairs, Director Linda Elworthy said there are a number of programs in place that will help Cohasset's seniors maintain their goals for the new year. Everything from exercise to planning for the future, to getting together with friends at social events is covered, to ensure there is an activity for everyone.

The senior population is one that spans many ages. While technically residents who hit 65 are considered senior citizens, theirs is an age group that is as active as ever. In contrast, the population is living longer, which means there are even more senior, senior citizens. Elworthy said any senior who is looking to improve their overall health, is invited to take part in the CEA's complementary therapies sessions.

Elworthy explained complementary therapies are practices that are used in conjunction with Western medicine for health benefits, including Reiki, massage, reflexology, yoga, tai chi and acupuncture. Thanks to a partnership with Nantasket Therapeutic Massage, seniors can take part in both reflexology and chair massage sessions.

"They are aware of the changes in the senior body," said Elworthy of Paul and Lynn Wilson, the husband and wife team behind Nantasket Therapeutic Massage. She noted they apply appropriate pressure for every age of body, to ensure the maximum result as well as comfort.

Reflexologists use pressure, stretching and massage of the feet and hands to remove congestion and/or tension in corresponding parts of the body. The idea is, the body's nerves end in the hands and feet, and by working those endings, the body can experience healing. Elworthy said reflexology is very effective for specific disorders including plantar fascitis, diabetes, edema, muscular stiffness and arthritis. It improves circulation and provides relief to overworked feet. Elworthy noted the therapy is to be used only in conjunction with medical care, and advises anyone interested in participating to check with his or her doctor first.

The CEA also offers chair massage, which for seniors can encourage circulation, decrease muscular stiffness, and help decrease inflammation that may rest in joints. It is beneficial for treating people with arthritis, muscle and bone deterioration, tendonitis, bursitis and respiratory problems, such as asthma and emphysema.

There are other fitness classes that require more exertion on the part of the person participating. On Tuesdays from 1-2 p.m., Nancy Kramer teaches line dancing in the Senior Center's "pink room." There is also senior dance aerobics, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 8:45 a.m.

Elworthy said one of the most popular classes is the arthritis exercise class, which takes place at 9:30 a.m. on Fridays. Guided by occupational therapist Paula Luoma, the class helps people with moderate problems affecting movement regain some agility.

There is also a walking club, which allows seniors to chat and exercise at the same time. For one hour (some people walk for a shorter amount of time), three times per week, seniors meet at the high school to walk its corridors after 3 p.m. Couches, chairs and rest rooms are available.

To exercise the mind, Elworthy said the CEA offers book clubs and bridge. The second Friday of every month, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., seniors share in lively book discussions over coffee. Mondays at 12:15 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, the CEA holds an ACBL sanctioned game with stratified scoring, so the less experienced can play against peers. Refreshments start at 11:15 a.m. and everyone is welcome. There is also drop-in bridge Wednesdays at 1 p.m.

To ensure seniors are secure in their finances, the CEA also holds workshops and lectures about the many issues that affect them. Elworthy said elderly fraud is on the rise and the CEA is working to get information out to the community. "Lisa Matos of the police department comes in once a month, and she's wonderful," said Elworthy, adding seniors are taught about the various scams that typically target seniors. "We had someone who lost $4,000. Someone scammed her. They're out there, even in Cohasset," said Elworthy.

In addition to fraud protection the CEA offers workshops on understanding your credit report and helps seniors obtain a copy of their report for free. Workshops that deal with protecting your assets and reverse mortgages are also offered.

For social well-being the CEA offers some programs which are strictly meant to entertain. She said there are many intergenerational activities, which take place throughout the year, which both the seniors and children who participate in really enjoy. Elworthy said many seniors have grandchildren that live far away, and many grandchildren have grandparents who live in Florida for at least part of the year, and getting the older generation together with the younger is beneficial for both age groups.

There are also gourmet lunches at the CEA, provided by both the Angel Food Project and Anna's Gourmet Cooking Class. The gourmet lunches are provided every Wednesday.

The CEA also knows how to throw a party and has various events throughout the year. Its most recent was the End of the Year Soiree, held at Historical Society headquarters, in the Pratt Building. "I met someone there who has never come to the center," said Elworthy.

To that end, Elworthy said her goal for the coming year is to increase the number of people who are using the services the CEA provides. "We like to bring in a wide range of people," she said. With such a wide variety of offerings, and transportation available for those who cannot come down on their own, there is no reason why any senior in the town cannot participate, and she looks forward to spending time with them all.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Village housing

There is no question that the village is the "heart" of Cohasset. It does not have the harbor at its back as does downtown Scituate nor is it as big as Hingham Square. But, nevertheless, Cohasset's small "downtown" nestled next to its pristine town common is an important place for the future of this seaside community. Cohasset without a vibrant downtown is not a prospect that most of us would seek or envision.

So where do we go from here? We have followed the Village revitalization process for years and covered the debate in the early 90s about whether to have Greenbush stop downtown rather than out on Route 3A. Al Moore and Bob Sturdy of the Planning Board keep raising the "station issue" as an opportunity lost. That could be the case but we have to agree with Planning Board members Stuart Ivimey and Michael Westcott that now is not the time to revisit the past but to move forward.

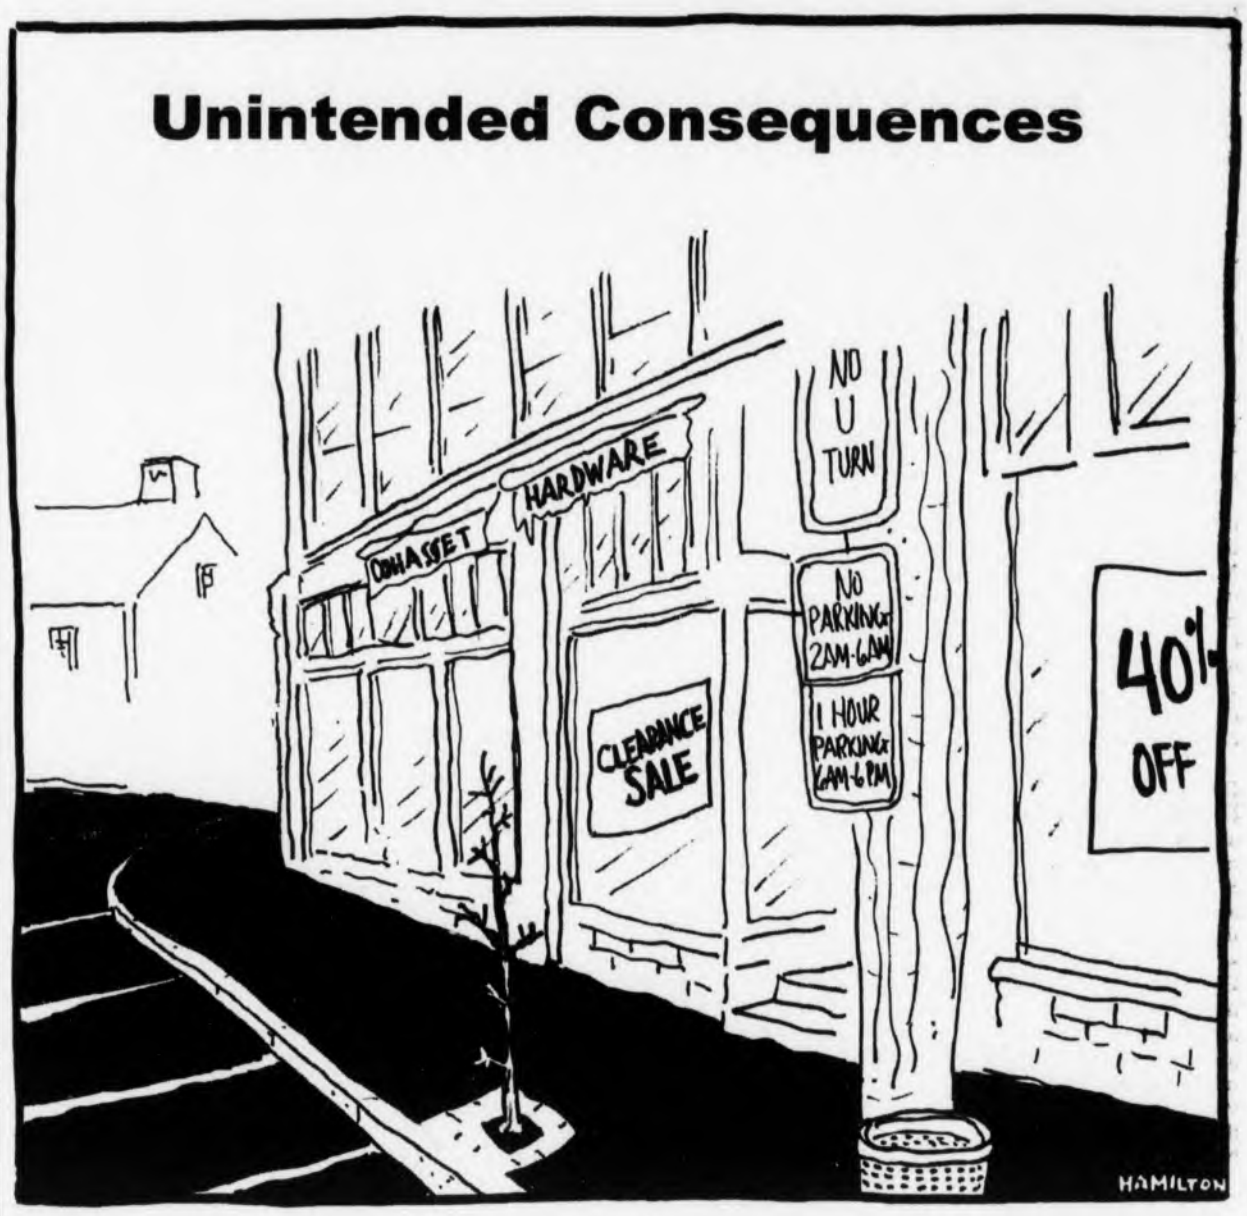
We do not agree with Mr. Sturdy that the Transit Oriented Development, dubbed a TOD, is going to hurt the village. (The TOD is a mixed-use development including retail and some housing planned next to the Cohasset train station).

If that were the case, then Cohasset should have followed Scituate in not allowing commercial development along the Route 3A corridor. Cohasset's TOD is going to be relatively small and draw the same traffic that pulls into the businesses, restaurants and shops along the state highway. It should also help generate some badly needed tax revenue.

What is before town boards at the moment and could be before Town Meeting this spring is whether to create a separate business district for the downtown area that could open the door for zoning amendments. Currently the downtown district is packaged with business districts on the waterfront in the harbor, in North Cohasset and even in Beechwood in terms of the zoning bylaw.

Seen by some business owners and developers as critical is being able to create housing downtown by amending a zoning bylaw —the so-called "40,000-square-foot" requirement — which currently makes that impossible. Essentially as it stands now, the current zoning bylaw prohibits adding multi-family dwellings in the downtown business district on lots of less than that size. No lot in the village currently meets that criterion.

There's some debate over whether downtown housing would increase tax revenue for the town and whether more people living in the village area would generate more foot traffic for local shops. We hope the "village" consultant the town will hire can help answer that question. Not long ago Hingham amended its zoning to allow more housing in downtown Hingham. Scituate Harbor is becoming totally "condo-ized" – not something that would fit in the village – but, we have got to believe that the shops in Scituate Harbor are going to benefit from all those additional residents within walking distance.



Planning board member Peter Pratt is drafting the RFP for the village consultant. He strongly advocates moving forward with that process first and then bringing forth potential zoning amendments in the fall at the Special Town Meeting.

Here at the Mariner we will continue to endeavor to keep readers informed about village developments. This week we learned that Cohasset Hardware is closing. Cohasset Hardware is not just a shop – it is a way of life that has sadly come to an end. James "Benji" Watson has plans to subdivide the space and hopes to be able to add apartments upstairs. But the apartments are a non-starter until the zoning is addressed.

Wayne Sawchuk, who lives and works in town, has plans for the Samuel Bates House that have had to be scaled back because of the same zoning issue.

Both these men cannot be described as "developers" in the generic sense. They grew up here, love the village and are committed to Cohasset. They should be applauded for their efforts and their creativity.

It took years to "revitalize" the village streetscape, which looks great. Unfortunately, the shops downtown that survived the construction cannot wait indefinitely for a more vibrant village in terms of the business climate. It's up to Cohasset residents to make that happen by shopping downtown and also by keeping the pressure on town officials to move forward quickly in hiring the consultant and bringing forth the debate on potential zoning changes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Redefining the dream

TO THE EDITOR:

In 2005, world oil supplies began to show signs of measurable decline. In 2005, McDonald's gave into pressure to alleviate American bloat by eliminating Supersize portions. In 2005, increases in home size finally stabilized. In 2006, the feature film, "The Inconvenient Truth," made it impossible to deny the realities of global warming. In 2006, scientists admitted that our alternative energy sources (including nuclear, solar, wind and bio-diesel energy) don't even come close to supporting our infrastructure as we know it.

It is becoming clear that the only hope we have is to redefine our way of life through our innate human ability to adapt.

So after reading Mary Ford's report (Cohasset Mariner, January 5, 2007 – p. 7) on the recent approval of a 7,000 sq. ft. home, it wasn't that another Supersized House was being built, nor was it the convenient yet highly questionable use of the descriptive phrases "environmentally-friendly" and "energy-efficient" that has me writing a Letter to the Editor. It is the fact that the representatives, the leaders, of our community qualify this excess as "a dream" — a "grand" ideal that we should "use as a model for future projects."

I am all for freedom to express our personal needs and desires (hoping that our internal compasses will keep us in check), but perpetuating the myth that excess is a dream which we should model is not only illusory but these days it is just plain unconscionable.

I am far from being the poster child for sustainability: I still drive (a non-hybrid); I still buy more shoes than I need; and I still eat off-season (although that melon I had yesterday was predictably awful!). But everyday, as I learn more about that "inconvenient truth" that is too overwhelming to deny, I find myself redefining The Dream. I start by being conscious. I continue by educating myself, owning up to the consequences of my behavior, cultivating community, and following my heart. I can't change the past, but I can change today; and by changing today, I am starting to do my part to change the future.

And from the truth, while inconvenient indeed, I hold hope that by starting locally, we can change The Dream.

Tree pickup, a success!

TO THE EDITOR:

It is with great appreciation that we thank all who helped make our 2007 Christmas Tree Drive a big success. Over 40 enthusiastic Cohasset Middle School Students volunteered last Saturday to pick up trees around town. With the community's support, we raised over $1700 for Project Safeguard, which helps fund Awareness Programs for Cohasset Middle High School. A special thank you to our generous drivers whose trucks were invaluable:

Public forum to learn about and discuss the Iraq War

An open public forum to learn about the historical events, strategic alternatives and ongoing future prospects regarding our nation's involvement in Iraq in particular and the mid-east in general will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 17, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road.

Two directions for future policy have been framed as follows and will be a guide to the presentations and open discussion:

Direction 1: "Going forward, the main thrust of America's policy toward Iraq should be to withdraw all direct military involvement as soon as practicable and work through diplomatic, political and economic means to enable the Iraqi people to peacefully achieve effective self-government."

Direction 2: " Going forward the main thrust of America's policy toward Iraq should be to maintain or increase our military involvement as the most effective means of enabling the Iraqi people to achieve effective self-government - and then withdrawing all direct military involvement."

Professor Lincoln Bloomfield will present a historical overview and analysis of present and future strategic alternatives. Bloomfield, emeritus professor of political science at MIT, has served with the Navy, State Department, and National Security Council. His latest book is "Accidental Encounters with History (and some lessons learned)". Charles Higginson of Cohasset will also participate in the panel. Higginson served as a Foreign Service Officer from 1960-1990, with assignments in Belgium, Vietnam, Algeria, Italy, Luxembourg and with the United Nations on economic, energy and disarmament issues. Other presenters will be announced as they are confirmed. Tom Callahan, attorney and former Cohasset Selectman, will moderate the meeting.

The basic overriding purpose is to provide the public with an opportunity to have an open forum and rational discussion on an issue of overriding public concern. All viewpoints welcome. Refreshments will be provided.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

First things first ... safety – While Tuesday's fatal MBTA accident involved MBTA work crews and possible human error, it is a tragic reminder that the railroad right of way in not a safe place. We travel in and around the right of way and have seen evidence of hazardous trespassing. We have seen people walking on the tracks, graffiti on MBTA property and so on. This seems to indicate that residents are not taking trespass and safety seriously.

Please, please keep reminding family members, of all ages, to stay clear of the train tracks. It Is Not A Safe Place!

Train schedule — Last week we gave you the preliminary data from the MBTA about the travel time between all of the stations and Boston. The MBTA has also given us a preliminary train schedule, which we have included in this article for your information. Remember, the times are from Greenbush, which is about 15 minutes farther south of Cohasset station. So, for INBOUND service add 15 minutes to the Greenbush departure times. For OUTBOUND subtract 15 minutes from the Greenbush arrival times.

Any interest in a late train? – Early in December, the Town received a letter from Mr. Daniel Grabauskas, General Manager MBTA, about possible changes to the schedule to accommodate later travel from Boston to the South Shore. We have had inquiries from residents, and apparently the MBTA had inquiries as well, about the possibility of later service that might better serve South Shore residents attending functions in Boston that would preclude making the 10 p.m. train. If you have an interest in the possibility of adding a later train, either pro or con, please give us a call or send an email at the addresses or phone numbers listed at the end of this article. We are very interested in getting a sense of residents' thoughts on this matter. Is it Great? Horrible? or, Neutral? Just let us know your thoughts.

'Our cat Muffin is a warm soul'

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

We all know guys love to drone on and on about themselves, but I've learned firsthand that even a narcissistic windbag can do it for only so long. So in my Mariner columns I've tried to mix things up a little by featuring relatives, friends, and neighbors. Unfortunately, although I'm by no means short on hilarious stories involving them, I'm just about out of relatives, friends and neighbors willing to forgo legal action if I mention them again in public. It seems that unlike myself, some people consider fame and infamy to be two very different things. However, I'm happy to report that after a long search I found one particularly easy-going friend who agreed to be the subject of this week's article.

Our cat Muffin is a warm soul. He's sitting on my lap right now and I can tell you he's quite warm. He's also quite frustrated and confused. If I hold my arms out over the keyboard too long he will stand up, hug one of them tightly, and attempt to engage it in a very intimate conversation. Once clamped onto my forearm he will resist any declamping efforts pretty fiercely, growling at me whether I pet him or pinch him. I've tried explaining to Muffin that an arm likes to be wooed a little first. "You could send it some flowers," I'll say. "Bring it a mouse or something." But it does no good. This cat is like an animal.

It's ironic that my only pets so far have been cats, because I'm really more of a dog person. Specifically, a red-bandanna-wearing, Frisbee-catching, golden retriever kind of person. I always envisioned myself spending hours at the park throwing a tennis ball and having it brought back to me coated in saliva. At some point, though, I realized that for the average guy a dog is a very impractical pet, because you really can't have more than one total slob in the house. The scales of filth need to be balanced somewhat, otherwise one day the two of you return from the beach covered in dog slime to find your condo being condemned and demolished in order to save the neighborhood. A dog is a good pet for someone who is relatively neat themselves, and wouldn't mind tidying up after a large, incontinent hog, which is why most men should probably have a pet rock instead.

Very few people enjoy housework, but somehow the average husband still gets away with doing far less than his fair share. Guys will tell you they're "just no good at cleaning," but don't be fooled. If there were decent money in mopping or swabbing we'd be all over it. Many fathers balk at the idea of changing diapers, but if there were something substantial in it for us, instead of merely something substantial in it from the baby, you know we'd make a sport out of it. Speed laundry would be an Olympic event by now, with career-ending injuries, playing cards, Maytag sponsorships, the works. To win you'd have to remove a stain, sprint a hundred yards, find two matching powder blue socks in a 40-gallon drum full of electrified underthings, hurl an iron, and shoot something, all without generating any lint.

But the world is not heading in that direction. Guys will say it's because we're market-driven. There's no money or prestige in scrubbing toilets, so we're not up for it. Of course there's no money in watching football from the couch either, but it's a lot easier on the hands. By the way, has anyone else noticed that the space under a family room couch has an almost supernatural quality to it? I was cleaning our family room the other day — something I do every year for my wife's birthday almost without fail — and when I moved the couch I couldn't believe the volume of junk that had been shoved under there during the Christmas festivities. Wrapping paper, boxes, whole entrees, small appliances.... Enough to fill eight trash bags at normal atmospheric pressure. It was like I'd found the Cohasset Mystery Spot right there under my sofa.

Well, I'd better turn in this article before Muffin files his cease and desist order. He and Felix, his kitty counsel, are now standing on my desk glaring at me with perturbed expressions. Luckily my lawyer is a black lab who's been known to chase witnesses out of the courtroom. His fleas may be bad, but his fees are reasonable.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, literally on top of the famous Cohasset Mystery Spot. Take Route 3 south to exit 15, then follow the signs. Bring a camera and a few bags of trash, but leave your understanding of physics and geometry at home!

Another first in gov's race

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

We swore in our first black governor the other day, an event that brings to mind it wasn't that long ago we were swearing in our first Irish Catholic governor after a string of 45 consecutive Protestants.

His name was David I. Walsh, a lawyer from Fitchburg and a rare Democrat in a day when Republicans ruled the Bay State. Walsh was only passing through. He really had his eye on the U. S. Senate seat held by the ailing W. Murray Crane.

As race played a surprisingly small role in Deval Patrick's campaign for governor in 2006, so did religion play a surprisingly minor role in Walsh's campaign in 1913.

"I cast my ballot in the recent election for Mr. Walsh," wrote President-emeritus of Harvard Charles W. Eliot, the most Puritan of Puritans. "The fact that he is a Roman Catholic should not interfere with my ballot. I voted for Mr. Walsh because only through him could I express my opinion."

Unlike Deval Patrick, Walsh did not just burst unexpectedly on the political scene. He had served a couple of terms in the state legislature around the turn of the century and had even been lieutenant governor for a year.

I should explain that, at the time, the state's constitutional offices carried one-year terms, which meant that as soon as a governor was sworn in he started running for reelection. Not that they don't do that now.

Walsh served as lieutenant governor under Eugene Foss, a Boston manufacturer, who couldn't make up his mind if he was a Republican or a Democrat. He was with the GOP until 1909 when he decided the party wasn't doing right by him. He was a Democrat while he was governor, from 1911 to 1914. Then he was a Republican again.

Walsh's campaign for governor in 1913 had an advantage left over from the 1912 national election --- Teddy Roosevelt's Bull Moose Party, which fielded a candidate in the state election a year later that split the Republican party and allowed Walsh to win by more than 50,000 votes.

The Republican candidate, Augustus Gardner, son-in-law of Henry Cabot Lodge, also boosted Walsh's candidacy when he told a gathering of workingmen in Springfield:

"You people are getting $12 a week and you want 14, don't you? How do you expect to get it, if your fourteen hundred thousand cousins are willing to take your job for $10 a week?"

Like Deval Patrick, Walsh came in for some criticism for his treatment of those convicted of a heinous crime. In Patrick's case it was Edgar LeGuare. In Walsh's case it was Jesse Pomeroy.

Pomeroy was a teen-age psychopath who terrorized South Boston with a series of sadistic child murders. He was sentenced to life in solitary confinement with only one visit a month from his mother. When Walsh became governor, Pomeroy had been in solitary for 38 years.

The governor commuted Pomeroy's sentence from "solitary" to "life at hard labor" and permitted him exercise time and an opportunity to attend chapel services. Pomeroy was later transferred to Bridgewater where he died in 1932, a prisoner for 56 years.

Walsh was reelected in 1914 but lost a bid for a third term a year later to Republican Samuel McCall, in spite of the backing of Louis Brandeis, the future Supreme Court justice, who stumped for him.

"It has never been my practice to take part in political campaigns," said Brandeis. "But this year defeat of Governor Walsh would imperil the maintenance of policies and measures for which forward looking men have been striving for a decade — that the power of government shall rest in men, not money.

"No governor of Massachusetts has been freer from the subtle influence of wealth or has striven more conscientiously to serve all the people."

After earning an MBA at Columbia University, Carlson had a 30-year career in mutual fund management, rising to senior positions with major Boston firms.

Following retirement from the mutual fund industry, he spent 10 years as a resident advisor on financial market development in several former Soviet bloc countries, including Romania, Bulgaria, and Ukraine.

As selectman, Carlson plans to:

Owners have plans to renovate building

Lumber is a great company with a very nice facility, it became really hard for him to compete. He said it got to the point where he would need to lend money to his business, and he was not getting that money back.

Although he is excited about his plans, Watson said he knows there will be obstacles to overcome. Currently, to have a mixed-use building, he would need zoning relief. At the fall Town Meeting, voters approved allocating money for a consultant to study the best way to develop the downtown area, which could include changing zoning laws to allow parcels with less than 40,000 square feet to renovate and build apartments, but that person has not yet been hired. Other groups in town would like to see things move more quickly ahead, as they feel developing the Village and bringing residents downtown will help keep businesses more viable, but there is no guarantee articles would be ready to come before voters at the Annual Town Meeting this spring.

Watson said whatever the town decides, "We're ready to go forward and we're ready to try a good honest attempt at getting things going downtown. We don't owe anybody any money, so we're ready to go right now."

If all goes as planned, Watson said at the very least, he expects the renovations to the first floor will be complete by the summer. He said the fate of the upstairs would depend on whether the town decides to allow renovation of buildings to include apartments on the upper level. If the upstairs cannot be turned into apartments, "I'll just sit here and wait for CVS to tap me on the shoulder…just kidding."

Jim "Benji" Watson will miss the people, like Scott Coughlin of Cohasset, who has been a regular at his store. Watson plans to close Cohasset Hardware later this month.

Watson's extended family has been running Cohasset Hardware for the last roughly 80 years. He said he is related to the Colliers and McGaw's, who were the shopkeepers in the 1920s. In the 1960s, Watson's father owned a Chevy dealership in Scituate, which he sold in 1964 to take over the hardware store.

Watson recalled when the transaction took place. "We went from having Corvettes in the driveway to a pickup truck, right before I got my license," he quipped.

Although Watson eventually took over for his father in the 1980s, surprisingly enough, he rarely worked at the store while in high school. "Back then, it wasn't cool to be within 50 miles of you family," he joked. He therefore went into landscaping and went on to earn a college degree in horticulture.

But while Watson was out mowing lawns in high school, his friend Phil Rose was down in the Village helping stock the shelves at the hardware store. "He's been my sidekick over the years," said Watson, adding when he began thinking of letting go of the business, he began helping Rose find other employment. Rose is now working at a hardware store in Scituate.

Without the hardware store, Watson said he would still have plenty to keep him busy. He said with his background in landscaping, that field is always an option. He also has his 100-ton captain's license and currently, he works on a dinner charter boat in the summer. "There's no retirement in my future," he said. But no matter what his future holds, Cohasset Hardware will always hold a special place in his heart. "This has been great fun."

Village viability tops discussion at joint meeting

"Maybe we'll change things and shoot ourselves in the foot. As a town, we're famous for that."
— Al Moore, Planning Board

He feels having a consultant on board — Town Meeting voted to appropriate the money necessary to hire a consultant to aid the Planning Board in figuring out the best route to take for the Village — is the proper way to move forward. "My biggest concern is that we will make changes that will give us a very different downtown," he said, and he feels having a consultant's input will help avoid making mistakes.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormtizer said in his opinion, the Village is a huge asset and "Right now, we're at a tipping point." He said with Cohasset Hardware closing and Cohasset Car Care by McBrien's coming to town, there are already some significant changes in the works. "We ought to agree there are goals for the downtown and at what rate they can happen," he said and find a way to ensure the Village remains the asset it is.

Dormitzer said he wonders whether adding residential units will help the retail shops, which is again a question for the consultant. Allowing residential units would require changing the town's bylaws, which has many different board members concerned.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy said the way he sees it, the town is currently in a series of changes, many of which in his opinion are ill advised. He said having the train station out on Route 3A rather than in the village where it could serve as a powerful economic force, was a huge mistake. "There has been a battle between 3A and the Village and the other shoe is going to fall," he said. He added with the development of a Transit Oriented District, which will have housing and shops around the train station, there will be even less reason for people to frequent the downtown shops.

"We can only eat so many Wheaties in Cohasset. It just depends on where you buy them," he said. He added the town has seen many businesses disappear after a short time and the town needs to find a way to ensure businesses that come into the Village are able to stay.

Assessor Elsa Miller said what really needs to be looked into is the number of apartments that are currently located in the Village. She said the best estimate at this point is 30, and that needs to be clarified. Secondly, she said the estimate that building apartments on the upper levels downtown will yield between $50,000 and $60,000 for the town in tax revenue is impossible. "The EDC's numbers are off. Stop & Shop doesn't even give us that," she said.

Sheldon Road resident and developer Dave Calhoun said if the town really wants to make money, it could either choose to build large homes that will bring in a large amount of tax revenue, but also burden the school systems with children, or it could turn the downtown area into a place that caters to foot traffic. He said in towns like Scituate and Nantucket, everyone comes in by boat and walks around the town to shop and dine. He said if the town could accommodate day travelers, it could take in money from the fees to dock for the day, it could provide a launch boat to bring people back and forth from their boats to the town, and foot traffic could be increased to the shops during the summer months. "You want the transients that come and leave their wallets, not their kids," he said.

EDC Chairman Peter Brown said in his opinion, if there are people living downtown, automatically he would think the Village becomes more than an 8-hour per day operation, as people who live there would also frequent the shops later at night. He said while he liked Calhoun's idea, the town would really have to decide whether it wants that kind of traffic all summer long. However, he said if something isn't done soon, "We'll continue to deteriorate."

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he isn't sure there is a consensus to put more housing downtown. "I think we have to ask the planner if that will produce more viability," he said.

While the general consensus was that a consultant should help the town in its decision making process, Town Manager Bill Griffin said all he needs is to receive the RFP from the Planning Board, in order to put it out into the marketplace. "These people are ready to respond, we just need to get the RFP in their hands."

Neighbors against proposed Ripley Road housing project

single-family housing neighborhoods. "This is a need the town has repeatedly said needs to be met and it's got to be done somewhere, somehow."

He said the Partnership is looking at areas all over town to build affordable housing, and he said he knows residents in any area where a project is proposed will put the same arguments forth. "We're not just picking on one area," he said, adding the home that the Partnership is looking at is currently on the market and slated for foreclosure, which is requiring a more speedy approach.

Kim McGowan, 154 N. Main St., asked why the town is in such a rush to delve into the project. She asked whether the town would lose money or be fined or have to deal with some form of consequences. Callahan explained, "Until you reach it (state affordable housing threshold), you're vulnerable to anyone who comes along with any project. You're vulnerable to the types of development that we don't want," Callahan said.

But neighbors argued the proposed project is the type of development they don't want. As planned, the building would be converted into seven units. There would be three one-bedroom units on the first floor, and four two-bedroom units on the second and third floors. The units would be between 700 and 1,200 square feet. There would be parking for 11 cars, or one parking space per bedroom.

McGowan pointed out, there could likely be a couple living in one of the one-bedroom units and they could have two cars, which indicates to her there are not enough parking spaces in the plans.

Septic troubles also weighed heavily on the minds of abutters. Bruce Pratt, 83 Sohier St., said he has lived in his home for the past 30 years and watched the transformation of the building from a nursing home to a single-family home. He said he remembered the nursing home having its septic tank pumped almost weekly to keep up with the amount of flow being generated, and he expects it would take a lot to bring the septic system up to the point where it would be able to accommodate a large number of people once again.

Callahan noted septic is a huge contingency when it comes to moving forward and although he has heard the system was built for 13 bedrooms, he has not yet seen anything in writing. "I've also heard they may have about three or four cesspools and that could throw us off and make the project not viable," he said.

Attorney Rich Henderson, 129 N. Main St., said the day the neighborhood heard the Partnership was looking at purchasing the building to turn it into affordable housing, he received five phone calls before 9 a.m. He said people were in a real panic to hear their residential, single-family district could soon be home to another non single-family home. "Sometimes in the summer, I can't even go down the street to get a bottle of milk at Stop & Shop. It takes a half hour," he said, due to the increased traffic from the non single-family buildings. He added parking is prohibited on the street which makes having guests difficult if they cannot fit in the driveway. He said in his opinion, the cars generated at the Ripley Road housing development cannot be accommodated, especially if they invite guests over.

Henderson also noted the project will need zoning relief because it does not have adequate square footage per the town's bylaws to accommodate seven units of housing. He said the bylaws ensure the land area is proportionate to the people living in the dwelling and he doesn't feel asking for that relief is in anyone's best interest. "You do not have the support of the neighborhood, you have zoning trouble, septic trouble, and everyone who's called me is unhappy. People are going to appeal," he said. Henderson noted his is a neighborhood that is sharing more of the burden than other neighborhoods when it comes to traffic.

However, Callahan rebutted traffic is an issue all over town, as many intersections are operating at low grades when it comes to safety.

Pratt noted many of his neighbors have not been living in the area as long as he has, and said in his opinion, traffic has actually improved over the years. "The Music Circus used to be running seven nights a week in the summer and back then, you really couldn't get out of your driveway. Sometimes you couldn't even get an ambulance up the street," he said. He added when the building was a nursing home, there never seemed to be any trouble with visitors finding a place to park.

Melinda Evans, 36 Sohier St., asked whether the Partnership would be willing to consider downsizing the project. While Callahan said nothing would be ruled out, the purchase price for the property is $699,000 and it is going to cost a certain amount of money to renovate the building and there is only so much you can ask for rent with affordable units, which may make it necessary to keep the project the way it is in order for it to be viable.

Paul Hart, 63 Sohier St., said while he's all for affordable housing, he thinks the lot should be four times the size for what the Partnership is proposing. "I'd be for it if it was on a 2-acre lot," he said.

"Then find us a 2-acre lot…cheap!" quipped Callahan.

Pratt noted at this point, everyone is essentially getting upset over nothing, as the project is still very much up in the air. "The owner could sell it to a family with eight teenagers tomorrow and then you'd have eight cars in the driveway anyway. If you get something firm, then come back and show that to us," he said.

The Housing Partnership will continue to have meetings on the proposed development. Its next scheduled meeting is Jan. 16 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall. For additional meeting information, look for postings in the Mariner or on the town's Web site at www.townofcohasset.org_on the meeting's calendar page. Meetings are also posted on the bulletin board at Town Hall.

HEALTH NOTES

Medical ethics and unhealthy habits

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We, as potential patients, should know that every health care practitioner receives training on the common basics of ethical medical behavior.

There is a system of ethical behavior covering the practice of giving and receiving medical care. Unlike conventionally accepted ethical standards, which vary as a function of ethnic or geographical considerations, medical ethics seems to be relatively uniform regardless of where it is applied. Basically, medical ethics is based on six premises, which most medical people follow regardless of their station in the profession:

- Beneficence — a practitioner should always act in the best interest of the patient.
- Non-maleficence — "first and foremost, do no harm".
- Autonomy — rational patients have the right to choose or refuse their treatment.
- Justice — When treatment resources are limited, responsibility for the decision of who gets what treatment generally lies with the most experienced practitioner at the scene. In most instances, the decision is based on principles of triage (selecting those most likely to benefit most from the resources available). Under some conditions the decision is related to the importance of maintaining the availability of medical care, such as in the case of a pandemic when practitioners receive vaccine first to ensure that they are not spreading the illness.
- Dignity — the patient (and the person treating the patient) have the right to dignity, privacy, limits to information dissemination and civil treatment.
- Truthfulness and honesty — a patient deserves to know the whole truth about his/her illness and treatment.

Thus, caregivers have reasonably well structured ethical guidelines. Clearly, when patients' rights are considered there is always much discussion and plenty of controversy. We, as potential patients, should know that every health care practitioner receives training on the common basics of ethical medical behavior. It is therefore important to understand not only what treatment is being recommended, but whether the ethical considerations in the list above have been fulfilled. Almost every organization has its own code of ethical practice. If you have a question about your treatment by any medical practitioner, you should be able to obtain information about the code of medical ethical practice by which they operate.

On the other hand, we, the receivers of care have a separate set of ethical considerations. The question bears on the relationship between health and virtue. H.L. Menkin once observed that the aim of healthcare was not to preserve the virtue in man, but to repair the consequences of his vices. For example, when does it become an ethical consideration whether to eat or drink too much or too little. Should we tell a bulimic "go and thin no more'?

Often, an act that begins as a decision quickly becomes a habit, then a compulsion and finally an addiction. Scientists suggest that, some combination of genes, social conditioning and desire cause some of us to develop unhealthy habits. One writer* asks if some of us are missing a self-control gene.

What is the threshold where one stops being permissive and starts to become ethically negligent? With the possible exception of smoking, our society tends to permit self-destructive behavior as a matter of right until it affects others, such as the drunk who drives or the person who serves alcohol to minors. So, unless we carry our bad habits to extremes, we're going to have to police ourselves.

It's been my observation that fear of dire consequences such as stopping eating fatty food for fear of a heart attack won't prevent a person from slipping into excess. Nor will simple conviction — you know you shouldn't so you resolve to stop — be a strong enough incentive to prevent excess. It's always easier for us to build a rational reason for doing something we know we shouldn't. "It's only a few calories; it's not going to hurt."

However, we have within us the weapons to cope with habits, which in advanced stages become destructive behavior. The best is to find ways to feel good about yourself. Negative habits and uncertainty about self worth have been shown to be triggers to destructive behavior such as overeating. Find purpose in life for the things you do. Accomplishment is a stimulant to feeling good about yourself — even if it's cleaning out the cellar or weeding the garden, certainly if it's supporting a cause.

Do things you like to do and finish them. Don't get distracted. And take on long term tasks you enjoy; a succession of overlapping goals and keep them before you all the time.

Don't be constrained by artificial barriers. For many, their work is done when the kids are raised and on their own. For others, it's retirement. Both induce inactivity. If you stop being challenged, there's really not much reason to go on. Begin new activities: life begins when the kids leave home and the dog dies.

Those who lead healthy lives seem to have found the way to be respected, keep busy and feel good about the things they do.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Support for ballpark appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who have supported the rebuilding of the Beechwood Ballpark. We would like to especially thank the Community Preservation Committee for all they have done to make this project a reality. With out their support the rebuilding of the Beechwood ballpark would have never been able to happen.

The committee has had many meetings over the last year and half to get the best field for the area and all the organizations that will be using it. We think this will be a show place for the area and the Town when it is done. This park will be used by many different organizations. We have made it clear from the very beginning that this park is not just for one organization; we look forward to having many groups use it.

One of our goals was to be sure we kept the tot lot and the basketball court, both used quit extensively. One of the plans is to have a beam built up around the out side of the basketball court so it could be flooded in the winter for ice-skating.

We are planning on a building for storage, snack bar and latrine. This and many other things will make this a much better place. We will need money for above and beyond what we have now. The committee would also like to raise as much money as possible to help with the cost of the rebuild. So far we have raised a little over $10,000. We could use a lot more to help with the project.

We will be putting up a plaque with the names of the donors. However, at this time we have not decided just where it will go. Anyone who would like to donate to such a worthy cause may do so by making a check out to the Town of Cohasset and in the memo area put in for the Beechwood Ballpark. Send your check to the Town Treasure 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Again, The Beechwood Ball Park Committee would like to thank all of those who have and plan on supporting this project.

If you have any questions, you may call Glenn Pratt at 781-383-0048 or Merle Brown at 718-383-1625.

Skippers skate to tie with AEB

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

HINGHAM – For a short while, it looked like the Cohasset High hockey team would have an easy go of it Wednesday night against Abington-East Bridgewater.

The Skippers were en route to out-shooting the Green Wave 14-5 for the first period, and a goal from sophomore forward Andrew Smith halfway through the frame had Cohasset out front, 1-0.

But with just 1:09 to go in the period, AEB junior Michael Marella tied it up, and the momentum over the last 30 minutes clearly shifted to the visitors. Despite some good opportunities, AEB couldn't pull ahead, and the two evenly matched South Shore League teams skated to a 1-1 tie at Pilgrim Arena.

Cohasset (4-2-2 overall, 2-0-2 league) head coach Bob Walsh said he figured his counterpart, Tony Sulmonte, would make some adjustments between the first and second periods. Still, Walsh was disappointed with how his team performed, particularly in a second period in which the Green Wave posted an 11-5 advantage in shots.

"Tony's a great coach; I knew he was probably all over his guys (during the first intermission), and they came out ready to play in the second period," Walsh said. "They were all over us. They caught us running around, our defense ended up breaking down; we couldn't get the puck out of our own end."

It was the exact opposite for Sulmonte, whose team was saved by some fine goaltending from senior Joe Judge, who was sharp all night and finished with 20 saves. The AEB coach said his team had a great practice on Monday against an alumni team, but for whatever reason couldn't carry that into the opening minutes of Wednesday's game.

"I think they were just a little nervous that maybe they couldn't perform the way they had Monday," Sulmonte said. "I think the real key (in the second and third periods) was they got to

Next up: Norwell

Coming into the season, Norwell was expected by most to repeat as South Shore League champions.

The Clippers returned all six of their league all-stars from last year, and thus far have held up their end of the bargain with a 4-0 league mark. They are 6-1 overall, and have split a pair of games with defending Div. 3 South champion Scituate.

With that said, Cohasset (4-2-2 overall, 2-0-2 league) will be looking to make a statement when they face the Clippers this Saturday night at 8 at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham, the home ice for both teams.

Skippers head coach Bob Walsh seemed confident after Wednesday's 1-1 tie with Abington-East Bridgewater that his team can get it done, as he expressed an "any given Sunday" attitude.

"For our players, it's the most important game of the year," said Walsh. "This should be a really good matchup between these two clubs…If we can keep the penalties to a minimum, Norwell's going to be in trouble."

Lady hoopsters top Green Wave

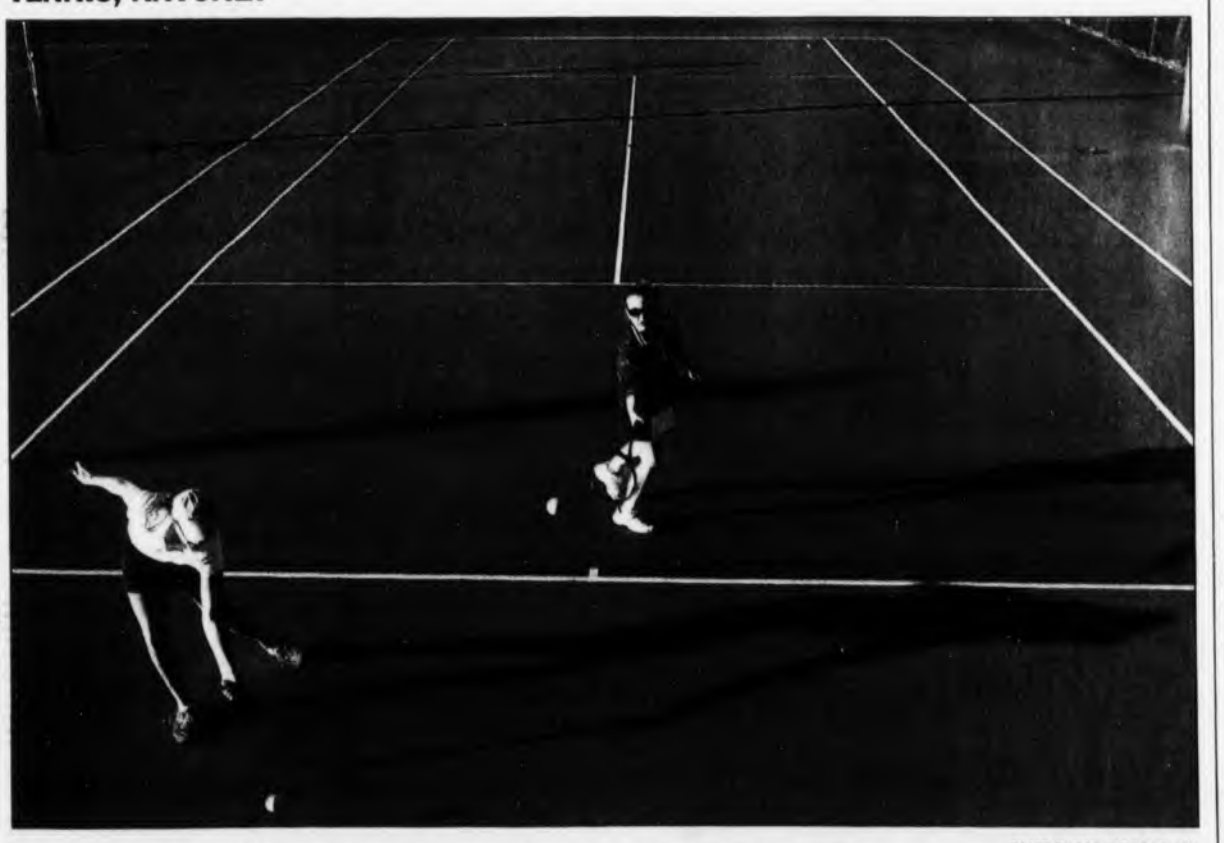
By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Editor's Note: This story was originally scheduled to run in the Dec. 29 edition. The Mariner apologizes for the delay.

Christmas came early for the CHS girls basketball team on Dec. 19 in the form of a win against one of the traditionally stronger teams in the South Shore League.

When the Skippers walked off the court with a 52-43 victory over Abington, many grins and sighs of relief filled the bus on the way home.

After a first half of back-and-forth attacks by both teams, the Skippers began to worry about the uncomfortably close score. And when the Green Wave came out equally strong in the second half, Cohasset knew they had to change something.



Midway through the second half, the Skippers turned up the intensity and developed a decent lead. Then, the tables turned against Cohasset. As both senior captain Lacey Richardson and sophomore center Sam Lehr fouled out with minutes left, the Green Wave edged their way back into the game. With Abington close at their heels, the Skippers realized that something must be done.

Once again, sophomore Kayla Farren came up big with four instrumental free throws to light the fire. Freshmen Meredith Kelly then finished the job by muscling in two put-backs to put away the lead. As the final seconds ticked away, the Skippers celebrated their third win of the season.

"We came out with plenty of Great expectations

Sci-Coh swimmers prepare for an exciting season

By Alyssa Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

After a successful season and an impressive 6-1 record last year, Scituate and Cohasset have joined forces once again with hopes of becoming the Patriot League swimming and diving champions.

The Sci-Cohs' first win of the season, last Thursday against Silver Lake, proves that the team is already headed toward success.

At last Thursday's meet, head coach Jon Fortin led the Sci-Cohs to victory. The boys scored a 54-42 victory over the Lakers, while the girls won by 18 points, 74-56.

The swimmers quickly dominated the pool, as individuals instantly began to break both team and league records. Standout junior Brian McGuiness had exceptional performances in both the 200- and 500-yard freestyle events. His times shattered both team and league records, an incredible feat.

McGuiness was not the only swimmer to shave seconds off his times. Many team members have already matched their best times from the end of last season and others have broken past records. Senior co-captain Rob Lilly set new team records in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle. Cohasset's Sheelah Scott dropped five seconds from her best 200-yard freestyle time last year and teammate, junior Mike Wall, set a new team record in the 100-breaststroke.

Perhaps the meet's highest point was the remarkable performance from the boys' final relay team. The last event, the 400 freestyle relay, broke the team record from last year's state meet by three seconds (3:31.59). Johnny Drybanski, Colin Conway, Lilly and McGuiness are only a half a second away from setting the league record in that event.

Senior co-captain Justin Damaso is extremely impressed with the team's motivation.

"Everyone is already making an effort to match their best times from last year," he said. "We are all really looking forward to a winning season."

In his second year of coaching, Fortin has high hopes for the team.

"We are working harder this year, we have more pool time, more lanes, more kids, and a new motivation to build on the successes of last year," Fortin said.

The swim team is indeed off to a great start and is anticipating many more victories in the weeks to come. The Sci- Cohs' next meet is against Middleboro on the 16th at their home pool in Quincy.

Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming spring baseball and softball season from now through Feb. 15.

Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, Jan. 20,, from 9 a.m. to noon, in the upper lobby of the High School gymnasium. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than Feb. 15.

Registration forms are available on the website: CYBSA.net or at Town Hall. Registrations that are received or postmarked after Feb. 15 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made on Feb. 15. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

The registration is for boys aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of April 30, 2007. The registration is for the girls softball aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of Dec. 31, 2006. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Junior league baseball and softball programs will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100.

The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the Farm league instructional division (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65.

Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please also be advised that effective the 2008 season, 12-year olds boys/girls must play at least one year in the American League to be an automatic selection for the Major League Baseball division. (This does not pertain to softball).

Also note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the Farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about player eligibility.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)383-1897.

the puck and won the 50-50 battles more, and as a result we got more opportunities."

AEB had its best chances to take the lead at the end of the second period, thanks to sustained pressure from senior Derek Slonina. A Michael Decarvarillo shot with just 28 seconds left in the period clanged off the post. Otherwise, Skippers sophomore goalie Johnny Wade (22 saves) was up to the task.

Wade needed to be on his game, too, as Cohasset committed six penalties over the final 30 minutes, including a three-minute double-minor in the third period. Smith, seniors Chris Davis and Zack Murray, and junior RK Quebec all did a great job in killing that penalty.

The PK units in general were strong for Cohasset, but Walsh would like to see them get a little less opportunity to shine in future games.

"Penalties are going to kill us every time," said Walsh. "The two games that we've lost were penalty-ridden."

Sulmonte felt his power play unit, meanwhile, may have done the Skippers a favor by not executing properly during its chances. The AEB coach attributed that to a relative lack of experience among his top power play personnel.

"They caught us running around, our defense ended up breaking down; we couldn't get the puck out of our own end."

Skippers coach Bob Walsh after Wednesday's tie against Abington-East Bridgewater

"They get excited, and they rush everything," said Sulmonte. "They don't realize that they have more space to really slow it down. That's going to be our goal, to try and get them to slow down the power play and to stay in their lanes and their positions."

In addition to Judge, Sulmonte praised the efforts of his top four defensemen in keeping Cohasset's quality scoring opportunities to a minimum: seniors Anthony Poliati and Connor Reynolds, junior Chad Quaglia and freshman Chris Brandon.

Cohasset received a strong game from junior Alex Goetz, who created havoc in AEB's zone by simply flying all over the ice. Goetz looked sure to score when he broke in on Judge's net all long at the 9:13 mark of the second, but Judge made a great save as Goetz's attempt through the 5-hole.

Skippers 9, Hull 1

Cohasset out-shot Hull 59-7 in a blowout win last Saturday at Pilgrim.

The Pirates actually scored first, but after that, it was all Cohasset. Hull held the lead for just 23 seconds, thanks to an unassisted goal by senior defenseman Holway. Holway also scored again in the second and picked up an assist.

The second goal was scored by junior Pat Doonan, assisted by senior Corbin Faber and junior Charlie Czerkawski – the "grinder line," as Walsh likes to call them.

In the second period, the goal scoring started with Goetz on a great rush where he blew by two Hull defensemen.

"Goetzie had just made a bad pass that I was going to talk to him about when he got off the ice, but before he came off, he made this great rush and scored," said Walsh. "When he came off the ice after he scored the goal I walked over to him and the first words out of his mouth, before I could say anything were, 'I was mad that I made such a bad pass, I knew I had to do something before I came off the ice to see you, coach.' Now that's a disciplined player."

Next it was Smith, assisted by linemate Chris Davis and Holway. The third goal of the period came from Holway, with Smith picking up an assist.

The third period was more of the same and once again it was all Cohasset, starting with a slap shot from the blue line that found the five-hole by Quebec. Then freshman Tommy Buckley scored his first high school goal assisted by senior defenseman Ben Masotta and Smith.

Next, it was Murray, assisted by Doonan and Faber. Finally, with 28 seconds left in the game, freshman Brendan Doonan scored his first high school goal, assisted by sophomore Tommy LeMaire.

All together, 13 different players were in on the nine goals.

"We dressed 22 guys for tonight's game, and I'm happy to say that all 22 got ice time," Walsh said. "We took Jonny Wade out in the third period to give Andy McKenna some time and, although he didn't see a whole lot of shots, he was focused, challenged the shooter and made the necessary saves."

force, but just couldn't break away," said Cohasset head coach John Levangie. "Luckily, we got it together at the end."

Richardson and Lehr put away 20 and 10 points, respectively, before they fouled out. Farren racked up 10 points as well, closely followed by freshmen Tori Lehr, who contributed seven.

Defensively speaking, Sam Lehr pulled down 11 boards, while senior captain Haley Haracz had nine of her own. Levangie commended junior Anna Haggerty and sophomores Carly Salerno and Sarah Coggins for both their strong defense and solid passing.

In fact, while the Skippers' offense played the clutch role at the end, their defense really won them the game.

"Our 1-2-2 zone has worked great," explained Levangie. "That success, coupled with our usual press, made it tough for Abington to get anywhere."

Tori Lehr added, "We really executed well in transition. We kept them on their toes and maintained our intensity throughout the game."

Since then...

The Skippers were runners-up in their annual holiday tournament – defeating Bristol-Plymouth before losing to Sacred Heart – and followed that with two league losses to Carver and Harwich.

Tuesday's loss to Harwich was especially tough, as the offense struggled to find the mark in a frustrating 42-39 loss. Richardson led Cohasset with nine points.

The loss leaves Cohasset with a 4-3 record (2-2 league), and the Skippers now encounter a pivotal stretch of games if they wish to get back into contention for a league title. Tonight (Jan. 12) at 6:30, the girls go to Hull to take on a much-improved Pirates squad.

On Tuesday, Cohasset hosts Norwell, whose only league loss as of Thursday came by four points to undefeated Carver. Next Friday, the Skippers host Mashpee.

Two tough losses for CHS boys

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Sometimes during a lopsided loss, some frustration will come out.

Junior co-captain Pat McCarthy, who has been the backbone of the Cohasset High boys basketball team since he was a freshman, displayed that frustration last Friday with a technical foul that was just one of many Skipper woes in a 86-52 loss at Carver.

Cohasset was looking to go over the .500 mark for the season, but in the end, came up well short.

Carver junior Rich King led all scorers with a game high 26 points. But it wasn't only King who did all of the work for Carver as multiple players were in double digits in scoring.

"I've scouted these guys a couple times and, to me, they had their best shooting night of the year," said Cohasset head coach Dorian Bryant after the game.

At halftime, the Skippers trailed by 11 points and were never really able to overcome the good play of Carver.

"We came out sluggish in the first half" said Bryant. "In the second half, we just couldn't get things started, and things just started to snowball from there; it was a bad shooting night."

One Cohasset player who didn't have such a bad shooting night was sophomore Danny Martin, who put up a team high 15 points, and has really been playing up to his potential so far this season. Senior co-captain Justin Alexander had nine points and McCarthy put up 11 despite sitting for the majority of the second half.

With the deficit as large as it was, Bryant was finally able to get the non-regulars some playing time, something they have not seen a lot of this year. But this led to another disappointment; not only had the Skippers lost the game, but due to an elbow in the face which caused a broken nose, junior Chris Rose was most likely lost for the reminder of the season.

Tuesday, the Skippers traveled all the way down to the Cape to take on Harwich. The Rough Riders, behind a solid defensive effort that held McCarthy to five points, came away victorious by a 62-54 score.

Once again for Cohasset, Martin led the team with his career high of 19 points. Alexander also had a good game with a total of 14 points.

Throughout the game, Cohasset was playing well and everything was looking positive for the team. With just over nine minutes remaining in the game, the Skippers went on a little run to push their lead to 10. As this happened, Harwich began to press the Skippers.

As Bryant said simply, "We didn't respond well to the press." Because of this, Harwich was able to pull back into the game as they made their open shots, and Cohasset did not. Cohasset did call three timeouts in the final six minutes but the momentum had swung to Harwich's side and the Skippers were never really able to overcome it.

"They beat us on offensive glass and we had many turnovers in the final minutes," said Bryant.

Cohasset will need to play a lot better to come out victorious against the Hull Pirates, whom they play tonight (Jan. 12) in Hull. Bryant said his mission in practice to prepare for this showdown was clear.

"We're going to do a lot of work on decision-making drills and rebounding drills," he said. "As a team, we have to be more relaxed, although it's hard with a young team; we need to stay positive and patient.

"They need to pick it up a notch, and this team will turn it around."

The Skippers (3-5 overall, 0-4 league) lost to Hull in overtime in the championship game of the CHS holiday tournament.

Wrestlers fare well at NQ

The Cohasset-Hull wrestling team had a good showing at last weekend's North Quincy tournament, placing ninth in a talented field of 20 teams, out of which only three are in Div. 3 (with Cohasset-Hull being one).

Leading the way for the Skippers were Ryan McLellan and Nick Cambi, both of whom took third in their respective weight classes. After finishing fourth in the Marshfield tournament, Adam Smith took fourth again. Head Coach Torin Sweeney said Smith is beginning to hit his stride and should be in line for a good seed this weekend.

Rounding out Cohasset-Hull's top performances in North Quincy were sixth place finishes from Steve Hurlbut, Gannon Dorion and Tim Toomey. Toomey was competing with an illness but stayed tough throughout.

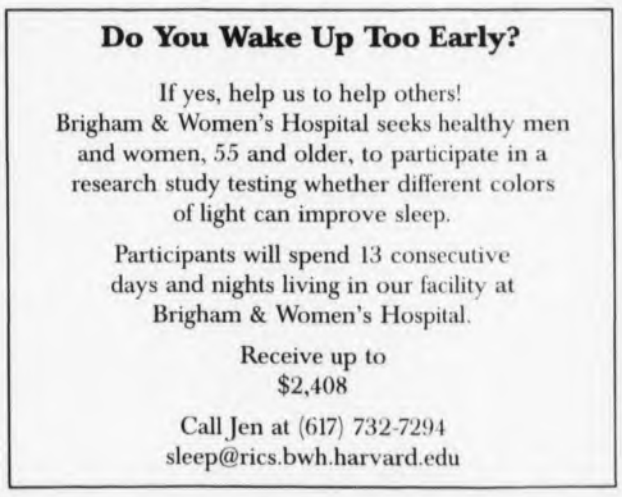
Saturday's Cohasset tournament starts at 10 a.m., which the championship rounds beginning at 5 p.m. Joining the Skippers in what figures to be a very competitive day are Duxbury, Hingham, Hanover, Nauset, Scituate, Rockland, Lynnfield and Holbrook.

Gymnasts drop a pair of close meets

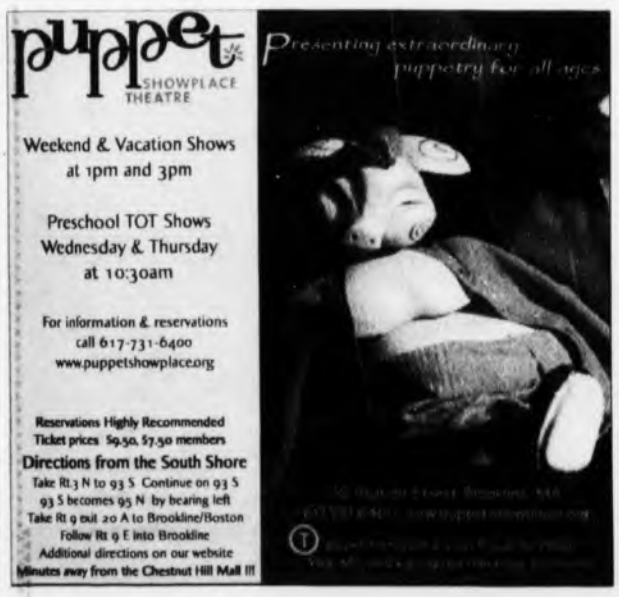
Last week, the Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team lost a couple competitive meets to Case (Thursday) and a tri-meet Saturday against Bridgewater-Raynham and Notre Dame Academy.

The team posted a solid score of 121.2 against Case, who came in with a 126.6. Melissa Murphy and Corinna Durham led the team with all-around scores of 31.6 and 30.7, respectively. Murphy led a solid team effort on the floor exercise with an 8.4, followed by Durham (7.9), Kiersten Shontz (7.9), and Cassie Pacella (7.8).

Jamie Nichols earned a 7.9 on the beam.



In the tri-meet, Coh-Nor turned in a team score of 119.85, but B-R (135.45) and NDA (127.7) are among the best teams in the state.



Murphy had a 31.4 in the all-around, earning solid marks in all four events (floor, vault, beam and bars). Pacella had a 7.7 on the floor, while Vanessa Durham (7.6) and Liz Clapp (7.5) both had a good showing on the vault.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

Cohasset at Weymouth - Patriot League

The Grade 7 boys' team won its first game of the year last Sunday with a thunderous comeback from a 10-point deficit to defeat Weymouth, 38-32.

This was a tremendously exciting game, and the boys showed grit and poise, as Weymouth built a 24-14 lead early in the second half. At that point, Cohasset turned on a pressure defense that led to Weymouth turnovers and fast break baskets during a decisive 18-4 run.

Weymouth maintained a 4-6 point lead through the first half, as Cohasset struggled with the clear height advantage of the Weymouth front line. Guard play was improved, with contributions by Chris Carpenter and Christian Allard.

Early in the second half, Weymouth's height reaped dividends, after their big men pulled in several offensive rebounds, leading to baskets and a 10-point lead. The seventh graders then began to show their athleticism with active, hustling defense, which began to unravel the Weymouth offense.

Kyrel Jaundou, Patrick MacCormack, Pat Kearney, Jamie Faber, Allard, Chris Murphy and Robbie Mahoney rotated in and out of the game, intercepting passes, blocking off driving lanes, trapping, and pressing Weymouth into turnovers and poor shot selection. Faber and Jaundou were particularly effective defensively during this run. Morgan McCarthy again pulled down rebounds with great timing and positioning, and Chris Lunde, as usual, took good care of the ball on offense.

As Cohasset took over the tempo, they tied the score and took the lead on soft jumpers by Jay Salerno, strong drives to the hoop by Mahoney leading to baskets and free throws, and a great drive to the basket by Kearney leading to a gutsy 3-point play. Allard played very effective point guard, harassing Weymouth guards and cleanly breaking traps and presses. His passing led to great ball movement by the entire offense.

As Cohasset held a slim lead in the waning seconds, MacCormack took a great feed from Salerno as he drove to the basket. Rather than take the quick shot, MacCormack dribbled back out and took time off the clock before being fouled. He later drained two clutch free throws to ice the win.

Coach Rob Mahoney was pleased, saying, "We showed great energy. Our defense was active in the second half, and I was very happy with our effort."

5th grade Travel B stuns Scituate at buzzer

Coaches Stanganelli and Fitzgerald had their boys ready for their rematch against a strong Scituate club on Saturday afternoon to the delight of the fans. Scituate came out firing to go up 4-0 within minutes of the tip off, but Ryan McKeon quickly set the tone for the offense in the first half with his great ball control at point guard with crisp perimeter passing that immediately loosened the Scituate defense.

Cohasset's pair of Jacks (Stanganelli and Leffel) sparked the offense with terrific hustle that produced four buckets in the first half to lead their team in scoring. Leffel complemented his scoring with a steal and two rebounds to round out his spectacular effort.

Eric Weinstein maintained his presence on the boards to dish out a nice rebound to Timmy Cavanaro for a clean four foot jump shot to put Cohasset in front midway through the half. Doug Fitzgerald and Jake Osmanski put up another strong defensive front that led to multiple turnovers to disrupt the Scituate passing attack that helped Cohasset end the first half with a 10-8 lead.

The second half was a heavyweight defensive bout. It wasn't until midway through the second half before Scituate knotted it up at 10-10. Clark Indek contributed with timely rebounds on both ends of the court to steady the tempo and control the ball, while Mark Rattenbury maintained Cohasset's great ball movement and had some terrific shots that flirted with the rim.

Shortly after Scituate tied the game, the dynamic duo of Zach Coggins and Chris Cohen put it in overdrive with punishing pursuit on both ends of the court. Coggins repeatedly denied Scituate with a team-leading four steals and five rebounds.

But it was the final 40 seconds of the tied contest that turned this one into an instant classic.

On his final steal of game, Coggins drove the left sideline before getting mugged on his way to the hoop that set up the gut-wrenching drama that only a parent can appreciate – a chance to put the team ahead in the closing seconds - enough to silence even the strongest voice in the bleachers. The first shot was well thrown but rolled off the rim for a miss. With 18 seconds left on the clock, the second shot was fired and was nothing but net.

With the only play that could match the go-ahead point, Cohen reached for the sky to rob Scituate of any hope with an immaculate interception on the inbound pass to run out the clock and seal the second win for his team of this very young season.

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The Grade 5 travel A team took on a strong Rockland team on Saturday evening. They came up on the short side of a 34-18 score, but there were several reasons to be pleased with the boys' performance.

For instance, the team's first game was against this same Rockland team, and they went down to defeat by 30 points. Most encouraging was the fact that Cohasset had pulled within 10 points midway through the second half, and they played with poise, composure and patience as they stuck to their offensive and defensive sets throughout.

Rockland built an early lead, when Cohasset received a real boost off the bench by Rocco Laugelle. Laugelle ball-hawked on every Rockland possession, forcing several turnovers, then leading the fast break on offense. Mark Brown and Joe Buckley worked the inside, playing good inside defense and rebounding well against the good Rockland big men.

They were active on offense as well, scoring and keeping the game close. Chris Haggerty kept his offensive rhythm, with his strong baseline game and soft jumper.

Rockland maintained a 10-12 point lead through the first half. The guard play of Brendan O'Connell, Mark McKenna and Matthew MacCormack concentrated on controlling an active set of guards for Rockland with tight coverage in the open floor and good zone defense.

Rockland built an 18-point lead, and then Cohasset put on the jets. Their press caused Rockland turnovers, leading to an O'Connell jumper, inside moves by Brown, and good looks by Steven Maher. Maher, Dakota Achin and Connor Green were outstanding defensively during this run - blocking passing lanes, intercepting passes, and diving for loose balls as Cohasset cut into the lead before Rockland eased to the win.

Coach Liam O'Connell said, "We played a good game against a tough Rockland team, which is the class of the league, and we gave them a good run."

Mr. Newkirk cannot be replaced

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

He truly cared about each of his students and encouraged them to ask questions.

It's been a taxing week for CHS. The legend that is Mr. Scott Newkirk is no longer teaching at the school. Mr. Newkirk was one of a kind, a teacher who won your attention for every minute of every class (and not just because a giant paper smiley face covered the clock). A Newkirk class was a rite of passage at CHS, an independent sovereign state self-governed by the man himself; void of textbooks and lengthy homework assignments.

He truly cared about each of his students and encouraged them to ask questions. It won't be the same heading up the stairs in the morning without Mr. Newkirk there. Every class he taught filled up, because his unique teaching style engaged the students. I'm pretty upset I didn't have him this semester, but I feel sorrier for the pupils who never had Mr. Newkirk as a teacher. Scott Newkirk was a teacher that cannot be replaced.

CHS lost more than a teacher this week. I speak for countless students who would like to thank Mr. Newkirk for enriching Cohasset High school, and wish him all the best in his future endeavors.

Here is this week's news:

- An anonymous volunteer and Ms. McCoy helped with the Xmas Tree Fundraiser to raise money for Project Safeguard;
- Thursday morning the Safe & Drug Free Schools Coordinated Program Review meeting was held in the Superintendent's conference room;
- Thursday morning the PSO President's council met;
- Thursday afternoon Department Heads met in the Career Center;
- Friday morning the Cohasset Diversity Committee met in the library;
- The District Attorney's Round Table met in the Career Center;

There's nothing else to say, except we miss you already Mr. Newkirk.

Sneak a peek on Saturdays

ASK GEORGE

GEORGE HOBICA

In fact, domestic airfares can change up to three times daily, and once a day on weekends, so it's a good idea to check in the morning, around noontime, and after about 4 in the afternoon.

Q: When is the best time of the week to find the lowest airfares? I've heard it's on a Tuesday or Wednesday.

A: While it's true that more seats are available at the lowest fares if you travel on a Tuesday or Wednesday (and sometimes on Saturdays), that doesn't necessarily mean you'll save money if you purchase your fare on those days. Airlines can lower their fares at any given moment, seemingly on a whim. In fact, domestic airfares can change up to three times daily, and once a day on weekends, so it's a good idea to check in the morning, around noontime, and after about 4 in the afternoon. Also, I've found that some of the most amazing unadvertised sales appear on Saturday mornings. Why? One theory is that because when one airline unleashes a "sneak" sale, since airfares are updated only once on Saturdays other airlines can't respond immediately.

Q: I bought a package tour and I learned that the included airfare is a discounted "bulk" fare. Do these fares carry restrictions that regular fares don't?

A: It depends. Some bulk fares, such as those sold by consolidators or as part of cruise line or tour package, do indeed come with restrictions that so-called public or "published" fares don't have. For instance, let's say you miss your flight. The airline might require that you forfeit your ticket and buy a new fare at the non-discounted "walk up" price. If the airline cancels your flight, you might have to wait for a seat to open up on your original airline's next flight out rather than enjoy the option of flying on a competing airline's next flight, as you might with a regular fare. And you might not get frequent flyer miles or advance seat selection. So it's a good idea to ask if your fare is a bulk or non-published fare and if there are any special rules or restrictions to be aware of.

Q: I flew to the Caribbean last Christmas and I had a lot of luggage. My airline refused to allow me to check in my third bag even if I would pay for it, so I ended up calling a relative to pick it up at the airport and ship it by FedEx at great expense. Why did the airline do this, and do all airlines impose similar restrictions?

A: Many airlines impose restrictions on checked luggage during the holidays on routes to the Caribbean. Obviously, this is a time when people with family and friends in the region go back home, and many of them are carrying large packages laden with gifts. There simply isn't room for all the "largesse" and airlines need to draw the line somewhere. You can find a comprehensive list of restrictions on your airline's Web site under "baggage restrictions" or similar. In general, airlines are toying with the idea of allowing fewer free bags and restricting their weight. British Airways recently announced a new policy restricting the maximum weight of each checked bag to approximately 50 pounds, with no provision to pay extra if the bag is overweight as has been the case in the past.

Q: Is it legal to purchase a round-trip ticket and just use it one way?

A: If you mean "illegal" in the sense that you'll go to jail, no. But doing so is against virtually every US airline's rules. Known in the industry as "throwaway" ticketing, using this strategy might put your frequent flyer miles at risk (the airline could wipe out your account or kick you out of its program) or, if you've bought your ticket from a travel agency they might come after the agent for monetary damages. Luckily, more and more airlines now sell their tickets exclusively as one-ways. Among them are Air Canada, Jet Blue, ATA, Airtran, Alaska, USA3000, and Southwest. And even the larger airlines often sell fares one way on routes where they compete with the "all one way" carriers.

Q: I don't own a car, and when I rent one on a trip I decline all the optional insurance because I figure my credit card covers it. Am I making the right move?

A: You might want to ask yourself what would happen if you ran your rental car over a curb and hit a pedestrian and got sued for all you're worth. Because you don't own a car, you probably don't have personal liability insurance. And your credit card won't provide that. Although your rental car company probably has its own personal liability coverage, in most states it is limited to a very small amount, typically $25,000 to $50,000, not enough to cover a major liability judgment. So depending on your taste for risk and your assets, you might want to consider buying extra liability coverage next time you rent a car. Depending on the issuer and type of card, your credit card might, however, cover most damage to the rental vehicle in the event of a collision with another car.

Kelsey Erler and Emily Toomey cheerfully collect a Christmas tree from a Cohasset home. Each tree collected came with a $20 donation to benefit Project Safeguard. Project Safeguard is a Cohasset community initiative that offers information to youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and wellbeing.

Emily Toomey opens an envelope, which contains a $20 donation to Project Safeguard as a thank-you from a Pond Street home for disposing of a Christmas tree.

Sam Green carries a Christmas tree to his crew's trailer as part of a benefit to raise money for Project Safeguard. Forty-five youths met at the Teen Center Saturday morning to help collect Christmas trees.

IT'S HAPPENING

Rock the night away

Have the dark, snow less doldrums of winter got you down? Well, mark your calendars for Friday, Feb. 9, from 8 p.m. to midnight to put on your dancing shoes and head over to the beautiful Red Lion Inn Barn for a night of dancing to Cohasset's own "Grateful Dads."

The event will benefit the Cohasset Varsity Hockey team and promises to be a rockin' time. Tickets cost $20 and will be available at the door or through any hockey team member or parent: Ann Czerkawski, Karin Doonan, Jeanne Holway, Jane Lanzillotti, Andrea Wade, Steve Faber and Steve Brandt.

There will be hors d'oeuvres and cash bar.

Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast set for Jan. 15

Cohasset Clergy and Diversity Committee will host a Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., Monday, Jan. 15, from 9 to 11 a.m., in Walton Rodgers Hall, on the second floor of the Parish House. Cost will be $5 per person and $15 for families. A pancake breakfast will be served between 9 and 10 a.m., followed by a program honoring the memory of Dr. King.

Featured speaker this year is David Hall, professor of Law at Northeastern University. Hall is the author of "The Spiritual Revitalization of the Legal Profession; A Search for Sacred Rivers."

Lacrosse Boosters casino night Jan. 20

Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (781-383-9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event and the boosters will be sure to run out of tickets before the 20th, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and we need the support of the entire community! The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls.

This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Its recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

'Right Brain' writing workshop

Grub Street South at Buttonwood is a collaboration between Grub Street, Boston's only independent writing center, and Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route. 3A, Cohasset. The goal of the program is to get writers writing. On Tuesday, Jan. 30, at 7 p.m., Grub Street instructor Jamie Cat Callan will lead a Right Brain Writing Workshop.

Using intuitive, nonlinear techniques, based on multiple intelligence theory, Callan will lead the group through a short story exercise. She'll also discuss how to tap into the true narrative voice and use intuitive writing exercises to create strong, risk-taking and muscled prose. Callan will also talk about how to get published and break into the fiction writing market. Callan has been published in the Sunday New York Times Modern Love column, Missouri Review and Story. Her book titled. "Hooking Up or Holding Out" was published in November 2006.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

Find funding for college

Schools' financial aid offices are your best resources

By Timothy R. Homan
CNC CORRESPONDENT

For adults considering earning an advanced degree or taking continuing education classes, the back-to-school season isn't just in the fall.

With area colleges and universities offering courses year-round, would-be students can find courses offered pretty much any time of the year. The challenge for many, though, is finding a way to finance the pursuit of higher education.

Unlike college students, who typically are listed as dependents of their parents and eligible for all sorts of grants and loans, older adults often have limited funding sources when looking to obtain graduate or undergraduate degrees. The same goes for adults wanting to round out their education with the occasional college-level course.

Federal loans, such as the Stafford Federal Student Loan, are the most common way to cover tuition costs, according to area financial aid advisers.

"The Stafford Loan is how the large majority of students pay for their courses," said Susan Lanzillo, director of financial aid at Framingham State College.

The Stafford Loan offers up to $18,500 a year for graduate students and covers tuition, fees and costs related to transportation, books and supplies for students taking at least two courses per academic term.

Members of the new Democratic-led Congress announced recently that they hope to reduce interest rates on federal student loans, from 6.8 percent to 3.4 percent.

When filing federal taxes, most adults can take advantage of a variety of tax incentives – HOPE Scholarship, Lifetime Learning Credit, Student Loan Deduction and Higher Education Expense Deduction – and save thousands by doing so.

For students taking only one course, tuition costs are usually paid out-of-pocket or through employer compensation. Many larger businesses will subsidize or cover all education costs for employees taking job-related classes.

Sometimes inquiring about employer compensation can be enough to get things moving in the right direction.

Jenn Musso, a part-time graduate student at Boston University who works full time for a small consulting group in Brookline, said she's hoping her company will help defray the cost – $2,500 – of her last class this spring.

"Because I asked, they decided to institute a policy on tuition benefits," said Musso, 25, who is pursuing a master's in arts administration.

Financial aid advisers say this avenue should be exhausted before seeking out loans.

Chris Perry, director of financial aid at Suffolk University, said not enough employees consider the tuition remission benefits offered in the workplace.

"I think oftentimes that's overlooked," Perry said.

She added that associations and organizations, such as local churches, sometimes have scholarships for its members.

Another funding source, not recommended by most financial aid advisers, is a loan from private lenders, such as Access Group and Citibank. Private lenders usually have higher interest rates than federal loans.

"They're not good loans," Lanzillo said.

Financial aid offices at colleges and universities tend to be the most reliable sources of funding information to help prospective students navigate a course through the unchartered waters of incurring significant debt.

"It actually went fairly smoothly," said Tony Enslow, 35, speaking about the federal loan application process.

Enslow, who recently finished a master's degree through a Boston University program, said he just contacted the financial aid office at BU and asked, "Where do I begin?"

Working for a college or university can also translate into tuition savings.

System administration procedures, programming techniques and hardware platforms evolve quickly. Up-to-date skills can help keep salary increases and promotions coming.

There are many instructional styles available to kick-start development of new competencies. The best training combines relevant, complete presentations with facilitated hands-on practice to accelerate learning and boost retention.

But expense, availability of regular learning time blocks, and the availability of co-workers to answer questions all factor into the training method to be chosen. The tried and true method of instructor-led, hands-on training has obvious advantages: It is the most effective, with the highest retention and fastest learning curve. But students need to travel to the delivery location, and the cost is relatively high compared to self-study methods (as long as one does not consider the value of the student's time).

It is worth noting, however, that the formal nature of instructor-led training – the requirement to be at a certain place at a certain time – and the interaction with the instructor, leads to an extremely high completion rate.

Studies show that, when confronted with "anytime, anywhere" options such as e-learning, most people encounter real trouble fitting in regular blocks of time for learning activities into their already-busy schedules. When it comes to complex topics like computer skills development, the vast majority of students never complete a program of any length (more than 10 hours).

Community colleges are an excellent source of skills training at a lower cost for those who can attend over an extended calendar period, and classes are often available in the evenings as well as during the day. There are several industrial training firms offering courses during work hours that deliver new skills in a matter of days or weeks.

Quality does vary. Make sure, at the very least, that you perform an Internet search for feedback about a given provider's track record. The information is readily available.

For employed professionals, the work time saved by formal training is significant enough that it's almost always cost effective to attend instructor-led sessions. But for unemployed individuals, or those working on their own time to develop new skills for a career change, trading off their free time for lower tuition cost may present a reasonable alternative.

How you learn is important. How much you learn is critical. Retaining what you learn is what counts. When you choose training options that build your confidence and competence with a new IT skill-set, the bottom line will be professional success.

Con: Gets out of date quickly. One-way communication with no opportunity for questions.

TEXTBOOKS
Pro: Inexpensive information written by industry experts.

Local actor scales to professional ranks

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Bill Stambaugh

Bill Stambaugh has been a staple on the local community theater scene for the past decade — with leading roles at Norwell's Company Theatre, Braintree's Curtain Call and elsewhere – but recently the Plymouth native decided it was time to go pro. Stambaugh, who now lives in Holbrook, joined the Actor's Equity Association union so that he could pursue roles in professional theater.

"I felt like I reached a place in community theater where I was ready for the next chapter in my acting career. I'm hoping that getting my Equity card will provide me with a feeling that I am challenging myself with a new, higher level of acting experience. I really want to continue to learn and grow and just become a better actor," says Stambaugh, a 1991 graduate of Plymouth North High School who earned his Bachelor of Arts degree in theater performance from Franklin Pierce College.

Stambaugh joined Equity — the labor union that represents more than 45,000 actors and stage managers in the United States — on Dec. 26 — the first day of rehearsals for "Guys on Ice: The Ice Fishing Musical" in which he opens this week at Stoneham Theatre.

"This whole thing kind of came out of nowhere. I was asked to come up to Stoneham to audition for Jason Southerland, who is directing "Guys on Ice," on the same day and I was also cast that day. I had auditioned once before for Jason at Boston Theatre Works and, apparently, he remembered me. I didn't get that first job with him, but I got this one. And I really believe this is all happening for a reason. It is change for the better. I love theater and I love the exploration it represents so I am very much looking forward to working at this new level."

First up for Stambaugh is the role of Lloyd in "Guys On Ice," which features book and lyrics by the late Fred Alley and was originally written as a joint production of the American Folklore Theater and the Milwaukee Repertory Theater. The musical was first presented at Ephraim Village Hall in Door County, Wisconsin, in 1998.

In the show, longtime friends Lloyd and Marvin (Cory Scott) are camped out in their ice fishing shanty and keeping themselves warm with their mutual fondness for good bait, good beer and the Green Bay Packers. As Marvin waits to learn whether or not he'll get the chance to appear on his favorite cable television fishing show, Lloyd frets over a recent argument with his wife. Along the way — while scrambling to keep Ernie the Moocher (Weymouth's Bill Gardiner) away from their cold ones — the pair perform musical numbers including "De Fishing Hole," "Ode to a Snowmobile Suit," and "Fish is de Miracle Food."

"Guys on Ice: The Ice Fishing Musical" will be presented at the Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main St., Stoneham, through Jan. 28. For tickets and information, call 781-279-2200 or visit www.stonehamtheatre.org.

Stambaugh readily acknowledges that ice fishing is not the most obvious inspiration for musical theater.

"It is a very different show, for sure, but it's also extraordinarily funny. It takes place in Wisconsin where they have some very different attitudes and accents, too, and it takes you on a really funny ride. The ice fishing is just representative of how these guys bond every day. When you get beyond the ice fishing, the story is really endearing."

With roles in musicals like "Ragtime," "Oliver!," and "Cabaret" and plays including "Broadway Bound," "Speed the Plow," "Glengarry Glen Ross," and "A Streetcar Named Desire," the 34-year-old Stambaugh has endeared himself to local community theater audiences. He doesn't take his leave from that world lightly.

"I've been lucky and privileged to work as much as I have in community theater. And the people I've met along the way have been fantastic to me. I just hope I can achieve the same happiness and success in Equity houses, because the stage is where it's at for me. It fulfills me like nothing else. My biggest concern is the work. There will be fewer opportunities for me to work as a professional. I am ready, however, because I just wasn't taking as much from the experience in community theater as I had in the beginning. It was definitely time to find new ways to challenge myself."

Movie review

'Dreamgirls' has Supreme moments

"Dreamgirls" (B)

By James Verniere

Is "Dreamgirls," a film described by one of my colleagues as the gay man's "Lord of the Rings," another "Chicago" or "Rent?"

Since I'm no fan of either, it doesn't matter.

But I, like everyone else who's seen this colorful screen version of the 1980s stage musical, can say that a star is born in the film, and her name is Jennifer Hudson.

Written for the screen and directed by Bill Condon, who also wrote the "Chicago" (2002) screenplay, "Dreamgirls" tells the bewigged and sequin-drenched story of a 1960s-era girl group resembling the Supremes.

It features Beyonce Knowles as the Diana Ross-like Deena Jones; Hudson in the show-stopping role of big-boned singer Effie White; and Jamie Foxx as a Berry Gordy-like entrepreneur who turns a Cadillac dealership into a Motor City-based, Motown-ish industry. The film has many of the weaknesses critics identified in the stage version.

The action begins rather suddenly at a talent contest and unfolds in a stylized "Chicago" and "Rent"-like universe, half TV set, half theater stage. Condon is especially fond of colored filters to achieve an expressionistic, showbiz look.

If the story line is clearer in the film, it is also surprisingly flat and full of girl-group clichés: the diva-esque tantrums, sex, jealousies, betrayals and conspiracies. The group's increasingly wigged-out do's and pop-influenced costumes and gowns tell a vivacious story all their own, and Knowles especially looks splendid in her form-fitting costumes.

Three friends from the projects, the "Dreamettes" are hired to sing backup on the road for the Little Richard-like James "Thunder" Early (a strong turn by Eddie Murphy).

The film charts the girls' meteoric ride to the top of the charts. It acknowledges the scourge of payola and how songs composed and performed by black artists were routinely co-opted by white performers and given more radio and TV play.

But "Dreamgirls" never approaches the power of "What's Love Got to Do With It" (1993), the acclaimed film portrait of the personal and professional marriage of Ike and Tina Turner.

Another challenge facing the film is also one it shares with the stage version. Unlike "Mamma Mia" and "Jersey Boys," "Dreamgirls" does not feature its real-life source music.

Instead of the signature Motown sound of the Supremes, the songs in "Dreamgirls," composed by Broadway-bred Henry Krieger ("The Tap Dance Kid"), are show tunes. We hear about the new "fusion," black-bred, pop music, but we don't really hear it (although the faux Jackson 5 sound authentic).

Having said that, Hudson's rendition of "And I Am Telling You I'm Not Going" caused an outbreak of spontaneous applause at the screening I attended. Knowles is not upstaged entirely by Hudson and has her own spotlight moment belting out the tune "Listen." Anika Noni Rose is also fun as the third Dreamette, the good-girl-gone-sour Lorrell Robinson. Foxx's fictional Gordy, however, is a weak follow-up to his Academy Award-winning work in "Ray." Speaking of which, don't the Supremes deserve a "Ray" of their own?

Rated PG-13. "Dreamgirls" contains profanity and sexual references.

SOUTH SHORE ART CENTER ANNOUNCES TROMPE L'OEIL CLASS

Trompe l'oeil (pronounced TROMP LOY) means to fool the eye.... In art, this technique has been used since ancient times to create illusions on walls, ceilings, floors, and furniture. It is often combined with what we think of today as a "faux finish" such as creating the illusion of marble, stone, wood on humble surfaces with paint. This technique was traditionally done when the real material was either too expensive or inappropriate for the area it was to cover.

Marshfield resident Sharon Perlmutter has extensive experience in trompe l'oeil as a set designer and artist (www.thepaintedline.com) and will offer this technique and more in her Thursday evening class at the South Shore Art Center. To register for this class or the many others offered, call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org. The winter term classes begin January 16. South Shore Art Center is located in Cohasset Village.

Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10-4 and Sunday, 12-4, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025

New Releases

CODE NAME: THE CLEANER (C-)

"Code Name: The Cleaner" is a painfully absurd comedy that is loaded with shtick from the first frame to the last. It's too bad talents such as Cedric the Entertainer, Lucy Liu and Nicollette Sheridan ("Desperate Housewives") signed up for this disastrous romp, a twisted crime caper that goes awry.

Jake (Cedric) is a janitor who somehow became entangled in the government's quest for a missing computer chip. In the end, the film is a 90-minute excuse for a well-known funny guy to act like a clown. (Rated PG-13) — Chelsea Bain

HAPPILY N'EVER AFTER (B)

Do kids prefer good or evil? Judging by the yucks during the packed screening of the animated film "Happily N'Ever After," evil holds its own. So long, of course, it doesn't win in the end. In the best tradition of "Fractured Fairy Tales," "Happily N'Ever After" takes the Cinderella story and turns it on its head. The animation in "Happily N'Ever After" looks like as if it was done on a copy machine, and the music is awful, but the under-10 crowd in the audience enjoyed themselves immensely. (Rated PG) — Keith Powers

ROMANTICO (B+)

An unflinching, if also relentlessly bleak look at the hard-scrabble existence of a pair of illegal Mexican musicians, "Romantico" contributes to the ongoing immigration debate. Directed by Needham native Mark Becker, a Stanford film school graduate who co-edited "The Lost Boys of Sudan," the film is a straightforward depiction of undocumented Mexican immigrants for whom going home poses a serious problem. The film is a hauntingly realistic portrait of the sort of life led by countless immigrants in the United States. For them, being "illegal" is a step up from the abyss. (Not Rated)

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPYNESS (B+)

The hard-luck drama "The Pursuit of Happyness" is a family affair in more ways than one. Will Smith delivers a wrenching performance as real-life Chris Gardner, a husband and father trying to raise himself out of homelessness and poverty. His son Jaden Smith, however, almost upstages him playing his screen son. Chris is a harried father, husband and salesman whose hair is beginning to gray. He sells medical bone-scanning devices, which he purchased in a get-rich-quick scheme. Redemption appears in the form of an unpaid internship at Dean Witter, where Chris dreams of striking it rich as a stockbroker. The film's arc is predictable; the payoff comes late, and the little-engine-that-could musical score grates. Smith's hard-charging Chris is a genuinely moving metaphor for the indomitable human spirit. When Smith finally weeps, you will, too. (Rated PG-13)

APOCALYPTO (A-)

In opening scenes of "Apocalypto," Mel Gibson's latest, subtitled, gonzo-exotico effort, a young Mayan hunter chomps down on a tapir testicle, and you wonder: What is this, the pre-Columbian "Jackass"? No, it's "Mad Max Beyond Yucatan." "Apocalypto" is grotesquely violent and seething with rage. The film is chockablock with evil portents, an end-of-times vibe and a "Goddess of the Scaffold." In other words, it's vintage Mad Mel. A little girl's prophecy will remind some of Joseph Campbell's theory that Christ had mythic predecessors in pagan religions. But ontological Melisms aside, if you liked Michael Mann's great "The Last of the Mohicans," you are going to grock this ultra-violent, National Geographic extravaganza bigtime. (Rated R)

School Committee votes 'no' on override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"The town does not have the appetite for it."
— Steven Fusco, School Committee

The school department intends on running the district without the help of an override. While Wednesday's School Committee meeting had a brief discussion about going for a small override this year — sparked by Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz — in the end all five members agreed the town does not have the stomach to go for a tax hike.

The committee discussed bringing forward one of three budget options to the town for fiscal 2008. The first was to recommend a level services budget of $13,687,626 (an increase of $707,815 over fiscal 2007); the second was to recommend the level services budget with modifications (either cuts from level services and/or additions from the supplemental budget); and the third was to recommend the level services budget plus the supplemental requests, for a total of $14,406,011.

To begin, each School Committee member was given the opportunity to state his or her opinion. Member Jamie Williams said she would like to bring forward the level services budget. She said the town is committed to giving the schools $400,000 this year, which would leave a gap of $307,000 to be made up from its request. She said by using surplus funds, which are likely to be seen in the utilities line item, and other offsets, such as Chapter 70 state grant funds, "I hope we can take care of that $300,000" without going for an override.

Member Rick Flynn said he agreed with Williams. He said although the town does not know what it will receive from the state this year in terms of funding, he believes the roughly $300,000

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, who grew up in town, makes a point during an interview at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on Monday.

Hedlund proud of his 'blue-collar' sensibilities

Unfazed by change in governor's office

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"I have never looked at an issue along partisan lines."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth

State Senator Robert Hedlund is still relatively young, still sports a goatee, and still plays softball on L Street in Hull.

But the legislator who was a mere 29 years old when he first ran for the seat to represent the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District is now considered "as getting up there."

Clearly, at 45, he is not the oldest person in the Legislature by a long shot, but having been elected for the first time in 1990, "seasoned" is probably the best way to describe the Weymouth Republican.

Now the 1979 Hingham High graduate can employ skills honed in through years of interaction with the Democratic-dominated Legislature in dealing with the first Democratic governor in Hedlund's tenure.

Hedlund, who has lived in Weymouth for more than 20 years, described newly sworn-in Gov. Deval Patrick as "charismatic, and a great orator." But, he says, the general consensus on Beacon Hill is that Patrick may be a little naïve based on his initial actions.

However, Hedlund is quick to point out that he wishes Patrick all the best and wants him to succeed.

"There are huge fiscal clouds on the horizon and judging by his actions, I'm not sure he grasps that yet – but I'm hopeful," Hedlund said in an interview at the Cohasset Mariner office Monday. "Obviously, it's early and I hope he thinks outside the box."

Hedlund says Patrick has reversed former Gov. Mitt Romney's cuts to the fiscal 2007 budget amounting to $450 million without prioritizing and preserving some of the cuts that would have ended the fiscal year on June 30 with a surplus and a balanced budget.

"As examples, he could have restored the cuts in human services but not kept those 'pork' projects such as gazebos in Braintree and a piece of land in one of my Democratic colleague's district that is not even for sale," he said.

Hedlund, who also served with former governors William Weld, Paul Cellucci and Jane Swift, describes Romney, whom he says "got a bad deal from the media," which portrayed him as aloof, as having the best grasp of issues and level of detail of the group.

"Romney is an incredibly smart guy who put mature, very talented professionals around him," Hedlund said. "Romney did the best he could not to

TOWN ELECTION

Richardsson to run for School Committee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With just under one month left for candidates to pull nomination papers for the 2007 Annual Town Election, the first School Committee hopeful has come forward.

North Main Street resident Peter Richardsson pulled papers Wednesday morning, for one of the two three-year seats up for grabs on the committee, currently held by incumbents Jamie Williams and Adrienne MacCarthy. Neither current School Committee member has indicated whether they will seek reelection for their positions as of yet.

Richardsson is currently a member of the Economic Development Committee. He and others on the board have been working to increase tax revenue to the town through increasing commercial development and were proponents of forming a Transit Oriented District, which was passed at the spring Town Meeting. The EDC has also been a supporter of zoning articles, which came before Town Meeting in the fall and could come up again this spring, which would have changed the zoning for the Village to allow mixed-use development.

The EDC has also worked with the Alternative Energy Committee on money-saving ideas for the town, including harnessing the power of the wind to generate electricity, especially at the schools.

When not volunteering his time participating on the EDC, Richardsson serves as the President of LineCatcher Industries, a small marine products manufacturer and distributor. He is also the Assistant

Zoning articles ruffle planning board feathers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Economic Development Committee has submitted revised Village zoning articles to the Board of Selectmen to be brought to the spring Town Meeting. While the original articles — which would have allowed for the development of a new village business district and residential units on the second floor of buildings downtown — made their debut at the fall Special Town Meeting and were defeated, the EDC would like the town to consider them again on March 31.

While Town Meeting voted down the articles in the fall, it did approve allocating $30,000 for the Planning Board to hire a consultant to study the downtown area and the possible effects of changing zoning. Some residents expressed concern the articles did nothing to protect the "character" of the downtown area and did not ensure the town would not end up with "unintended consequences." Members of the Planning Board said this week they feel the second submittal of the articles by the EDC is not in keeping with what Town Meeting voted, as the consultant is not yet on board. Town Manager Bill Griffin has time set aside on the Monday, Jan. 22 agenda for the Board of Selectmen's meeting to discuss the EDC's proposed articles.

The EDC is charged with coming up with recommendations for the Board of Selectmen to help increase revenue coming into the town. One of the committee's interests is finding ways to add apartments to the downtown area to not only provide tax revenue for the town, but to diversify town's housing market and help increase foot traffic downtown to keep businesses viable. There has

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Felled tree hits wires, snaps pole on King Street

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Anyone traveling on 3A by the top of upper King Street at the light at Stop & Shop last Saturday afternoon or evening was certainly curious about why a cruiser was stationed there blocking the road.

As it turns out a tree that a King Street homeowner was taking down at about 3:30 p.m. apparently fell in the wrong direction and landed on wires with such force that it snapped a utility pole. The pole cracked about 3/4 of the way up.

Apparently the homeowner was clearing his lot when the mishap occurred.

The fire department, which National Grid asked to be on hand for safety reasons as its personnel worked with the pole and wires, was on the scene until midnight, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

"There were two sets of high-voltage wires at the top of the pole," Silvia said. He explained National Grid had to go through its office in Rhode Island to carefully shut down certain lines without shutting power off in the entire town. "They asked us to shut down the road," he said. "And, at their request, we stood by to provide a safety detail."

David Graves, spokesman for National Grid, said of the 405 customers affected, 300 would have only seen a momentary "blip." Ten customers on King Street were out for five minutes; 10 for 30 minutes; 10 for two hours and 10 minutes; and three for two hours and 26 minutes.

Graves explained that much of the National Grid system is computerized so it can be remotely operated and sections of the system can be isolated, sometimes without causing outages to customers. In the South Shore, Southeastern Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, the remote switching controls are in National Grid's Rhode Island center, he said.

Window broken

Police are investigating the breakage of a window at the Teen Center that was called in at about 9:30 a.m. last Monday (Jan. 8) by town facilities manager Brian Adams. Police Chief James Hussey said the window, which was splintered, appeared to have been broken by a blunt instrument. However, it appeared that no one entered the Teen Center and nothing was missing. "It could have been a case of pure vandalism," Hussey said. "We have scoured the area and have not found any witnesses."

Bridge tagged

Police have taken photos and are investigating a "tagging" [signature or symbol painted on a structure] incident under the new Rocky Lane Bridge. Chief Hussey explained the vandal had to climb down the embankment because the marking is under the bridge. "Tagging" was also found on the Greenbush green utility shed near the Spring Street crossing. Hussey said Cohasset police have had success in the past with catching the culprits who engage in this activity by working with other towns. These vandals usually have a particular style that is their "signature." Tagging is a criminal offense, he said.

Car window

Police are investigating an incident that was reported at about 9:30 a.m. last Sunday (Jan. 14) about a rock being thrown through a resident's car window. Police found a large rock in the car. Nothing was taken, however. Chief Hussey said he hopes the investigation will determine what the motive of this incident was or if it was a case of pure vandalism.

MV crash

A motorist was cited for failure to use care when entering an intersection following an accident at 10 a.m., Sunday (Jan. 14) at Sohier and King streets.

Chief Hussey said the operator of a 1997 Honda tried to make a left onto King Street (3A) from Sohier Street and collided with a 2005 jeep that was traveling northbound on 3A. "Apparently the operator of the Honda pulled out when it was not safe to do so," he said. There were no reported injuries but the Honda did have to be towed from the scene.

No break-in

A customer at the Village Greenery last Thursday (Jan. 11) at about 8:30 p.m. was concerned when she found the door open, lights on and "things all over the place." However, nothing was out of place and nothing was taken, police said.

Baby formula

Police are investigating a shoplifting incident at Stop & Shop where a six-foot tall, white male wearing a green, hooded sweatshirt took a carriage full of $840 worth of Enfamil baby formula from the supermarket without paying.

Chief Hussey said police are reviewing the store's security cameras. The store manager was able to provide a description of the vehicle as an older model Toyota Camry but did not see the plate number. The suspect headed north on Route 3A.

Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to area towns. The incident which occurred at about 12:30 p.m. on Sunday (Jan. 7) is still under investigation.

Drive-off

Driving off without paying for gasoline is becoming fairly routine in Cohasset. Recent cases would lead one to believe that the people who leave without paying have done so by mistake. Last Thursday (Jan. 11), at about 6 p.m., even the clerk, who reported a drive-off of $11.01, saw the driver talking to another person and thought she was distracted. Police tracked the motorist down and she was going to make restitution.

"We usually get a plate number," Hussey said. He explained video cameras also often pick up the type of car so there is little chance of the person getting away with larceny of gasoline.

North Main Street resident to run for School Committee

Network Director for the town of Hingham.

But at the root of Richardsson's life is his family. He and his wife Kate moved to Cohasset from Hull in 2004 and have two children, Henri, who is almost 4 years old and Ted, who is 1-1/2 years old. His children have been the driving force behind his seeking a seat on the School Committee.

"My son Henri started this fall in the integrated preschool program at the Osgood School. My son Ted will follow in 2008. As a parent, I embrace the town's goal of having our school system ranked among the top 10 in the Commonwealth," he said.

Richardsson acknowledges the fact that the town has financial realities it must accept. He said the town has the highest debt load per capita in the state, and although the EDC has worked tirelessly to increase tax revenue through commercial development, "That tree will take time to bear fruit." He noted three bitter overrides and a host of new fees have siphoned precious cooperative focus away from the schools. "While living within Prop. 2-1/2 and paying our teachers' contracted 6 percent increases might seem an impossible task, voters need to be given a demonstrable and quantifiable return on their investment in the school system before an override has any chance of succeeding," he said.

Richardsson praised the School Committee for the work it has done this year. "While the School Committee seems to have rounded the corner and charted a prudent course, we all need to be rowing in the same direction to achieve successes. Jamie Williams and Alfred Slanetz have well articulated the goals the committee would like to see achieved for the schools and more importantly, the metrics and benchmarks for achieving them. They have pushed for financial transparency and accountability that is a requisite for any successful school system, and I hope to work with Alfred to continue their good work. Steve Fusco is also ahead of the technology adoption curve, and I look forward to helping him realize his dream." Richardsson added he looks forward to helping a disciplined School Committee and solidly funded school system reach some lofty goals.

Richardsson is currently the only candidate to come forward for the School Committee. There are also two three-year open seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Ralph Dormitzer will run to retain his seat and Rob Spofford announced he will not seek reelection. Old Coach Road resident Paul Carlson has pulled papers for a seat on the Board of Selectmen.

The following residents have pulled papers to retain their seats on their respective boards: Elsa Miller for the Board of Assessors, Ralph Perroncello for the Cohasset Housing Authority, Steve Bobo for the Board of Health, and Stacey Weaver, Sarah Pease and Barbara Power for the Board of Library Trustees.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15. Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

Zoning articles ruffle planning board feathers

been a lot of turnover of businesses in the Village, and the EDC speculates if people are living downtown, it could help the town retain its downtown merchants.

In an interview Wednesday, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said he had heard "through the grapevine" the EDC had submitted the articles for the Warrant. "I have to say, I'm not terribly pleased with the way this has come forward," he said. He added the big reason he is against bringing the articles forward in the spring is due to the fact that the town voted to allocate money for the consultant and his board is "pretty unanimous that we need that information" before making any changes.

Moore also noted the town is in a very delicate situation right now, and zoning changes to the area would be permanent. He said while some may think his board is dragging its heels in bringing new zoning forward, "I think we need to be very careful," as making changes might benefit a few people, but once they're done, they're done. "I think we need to take our time," he said.

Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt echoed Moore's sentiments but said speaking for himself, "I think this is a complete end run around what Town Meeting instructed us to do. The articles are not ready for primetime and the Village has not been studied the way Town Meeting directed."

Pratt said the Planning Board has made a public commitment to bring zoning articles forward to the fall Town Meeting. By the time the fall Town Meeting comes around, the consultant will be on board and be able to weigh in with recommendations. "What has been submitted is not good for the Village. It's not good for the small business owner, there is no historical façade protection, and there is nothing about parking fees or new parking creation which would clearly be needed," he said.

However, the EDC feels in submitting the articles, it is living up to its charge of making recommendations. "Ever since January, 2006 when we presented our recommendations to the Board of Selectmen for ways to increase commercial tax revenues, it was obvious to all that the multi-use zoning in the Village District needed updating. Since then, the EDC has investigated, discussed and analyzed ideas and suggestions of its own, the Planning Board and others. We have met with and discussed our ideas with the Planning Board and the new committee composed of several boards.

"We have been publicly encouraged by the chairman of the Planning Board and the Board of Selectmen to present our suggested changes for review by all concerned. Our submission to the Board of Selectmen on Jan. 12, 2007 represents the result of this work and analysis and was presented as suggestions for their review with the Planning Board for incorporation in the Warrant for the Annual Town Meeting," said EDC Chairman Peter Brown.

Town Manager Griffin said the EDC will need either the Selectmen or Planning Board to agree to put its articles on the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, or it could choose to submit the articles as citizens' petitions, which would automatically be put on the Warrant. However, he noted proposed zoning changes must always go through a public hearing process conducted by the Planning Board. Pratt said he is currently working on the Request for Proposals for the consultant and anticipated it would be ready to be sent out by the end of this week.

The changes

The revised articles brought forward by the EDC would change the minimum lot size required from 40,000 square feet down to 6,000 square feet for occupancy by more than one family and from 4,000 square feet for each additional family down to 1,500 square feet, with a cap of no more than 10 units per lot. The lot frontage and width measurements would be changed from 20 feet to 50 feet and the lot coverage from 35 percent to 80 percent.

Another change would formally incorporate the Village Business District bylaw under the purview of Section 4.3 of the town's bylaws, which would allow residential units to be built only in conjunction with a commercial use. Units are also restricted to be built above first-floor commercial uses, and could not be built on a basement level.

The third change would change the town's parking regulations to not require parking spaces for stores, offices and other lawful uses in the vicinity of the municipal parking lot, providing they are in legal distance between the nearest designated parking space in the lot and the main pedestrian entrance of the building, not to exceed 500 feet.

'The Last Pick' is first choice

Town-wide reading program to kick-off Feb. 4

Cohasset is about to embark on a reading initiative of marathon proportions. "One Book One Cohasset" aims to foster and encourage a love of reading among all generations and to bring the Cohasset community together with a common goal.

Throughout February and March the entire town will be encouraged to read the same book and to participate in activities that reflect the primary themes of "The Last Pick" (Rodale Press 06) — the book selection for this inaugural Cohasset project. The major messages of this 256 page nonfiction book are the importance of goal setting, overcoming obstacles — both mental and physical, giving back to those in need and dreaming BIG! Activities such as the annual Read-a-thon (grades K-9), free lectures and yoga demonstrations held at the library, all aimed to help people be their personal best, are examples of how the messages of One Book will resonate throughout the community.

Sponsored by Cohasset's Paul Pratt Memorial Library, this first-time effort will kick-off at the library Open House on Sunday, Feb. 4 and will culminate on April 1 at the annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, organized by the Cohasset Rotary Club. The initiative has not formally begun, yet already people have spent countless hours preparing for the project. This includes a Project Committee comprised of members of the Friends and Trustees of the library, plus representatives of Cohasset's schools, parent/student organization representatives, clergy, town officials, the Council on Elder Affairs and local businesses. Buttonwood Books, Goodwin Graphics, the Cohasset Yoga Center, The Good Sport and the Cohasset Mariner newspaper are all working to make it a success.

Choosing the right book for a town-wide read can be the most challenging piece of the program, yet in Cohasset's case, it all just fell into place for several reasons. The idea of reading a newly published book was exciting and also meant that enough copies would be available — in fact, the publisher, Rodale, specifically scheduled a second printing of "The Last Pick" so that Cohasset would have enough inventory. The co-authors are both local to Massachusetts, and Linda Fechter is a Cohasset resident. Dave McGillivray, co-author and the subject of the book, graciously agreed to come to Cohasset several times throughout the eight-week program to meet residents, sign books and give motivational speeches, as well as participate in the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea. In another twist of fate, the book is dedicated to former Cohasset resident and Red Sox Radio Announcer, Ken Coleman. As former Director of the Jimmy Fund, it was Coleman who believed in McGillivray and gave him the chance of a lifetime, when he agreed to support McGillivray's goal of running 3,452 mile run across the country in 1978 to raise money for cancer research and treatment.

Particularly unique is the fact that 100 percent of McGillivray's book proceeds go to a charity, the DMSE Children's Fitness Foundation (www.dmse-sports.com), whose aim is to help stave off the epidemic of childhood obesity through fitness and educational programs.

Health of Cohasset Harbor still under the microscope

Bacterial monitoring providing needed data

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Cohasset has probably got one of the better watched areas in all of Massachusetts Bay."
— Christian Krahforst, Mass Bays National Estuaries Program

Cohasset is no stranger to beach closings during the summer months, but the Harbor Health Committee hopes to make closures a thing of the past. As part of the action plan to make that goal a reality, the town has been working with the Environmental Protection Agency and Coastal Zone Management. Representatives from both agencies presented preliminary findings to the HHC Tuesday.

HHC Chairman Karen Quigley said the town is very fortunate to be participating in the EPA's Clean New England Beaches Initiative. Through the program, the EPA conducts targeted bacterial monitoring at several selected freshwater and marine beaches during the summer. Bassing Beach was selected as one of the testing sites as a result of the agency's review of the Department of Public Health's historical beach data in which the beach has shown repeated bacterial incidents, resulting in 48 beach closure days from 2002-2005. To fully understand why Bassing Beach has such high levels, it was necessary to study the entire inner harbor.

EPA representatives Matthew Liebman and Michael DiBara presented the data collected so far to the HHC. DiBara explained there were 10 sample stations set up in the inner harbor, which took readings from May through September. Liebman said in testing, the two major types of bacteria the EPA was searching for were enterococci and fecal coliform. Enterococci live in the intestines of warm-blooded animals and are typically the reason for closing beaches to swimmers. Fecal coliform is usually the culprit when it comes to closed shellfish beds.

Some of the highest enterococci bacteria levels were found at the James Brook input, the Parker cut and the Parker Avenue dock. Samples taken indicated one tidal cycle is not enough to help flush bacteria out of the harbor, which is a problem. Preliminary conclusions given by the EPA indicate sediment tends to build up in the Parker cut which could be serving as a bacterial breeding ground. When the town experiences unusually high tides or significant rain events, that bacteria is freed up and flows into the harbor, which with the poor flushing of the harbor, leads to a buildup.

While the levels are high, Liebman and DiBara agreed they aren't unusual. However, Quigley quipped, "They're significant enough that you'll come back another year!"

Liebman said when his crew does return this summer the EPA will work with the DEP and the town's Center for Student Coastal Research, which has been a tremendous help thus far, to conduct follow-up investigations of several bacteria "hot spots." Researchers will use the DEP's Wall Experiment Station (WES) advanced microbial source tracking techniques, including human genetic markers, quantitative fluorescent whitening agents and caffeine to better identify pollution sources.

Christian Krahforst of the Mass Bays National Estuaries Program also presented information on his department's findings in Cohasset. His tests were conducted from June through September.

Krahforst took a look at the salinity of the water to see if the freshwater being pumped into the harbor from the town's wastewater treatment plant is adversely affecting its biological makeup. He said it was important to determine whether the town's water is well mixed, which would indicate it is flushing properly.

While representatives from the EPA would argue Cohasset's waters do not flush properly, Krahforst said he feels Cohasset's is one of the better-flushed harbors. He said tests indicate while there is more freshwater on the surface, the water does seem to be mixing the farther down samples are taken. He also said the harbor's waters are very clear, which is a good indicator of water quality and a positive sign. He noted eelgrass beds need sunlight at their roots to thrive, and the clarity of Cohasset's water is allowing sunlight to get through. However, Krahforst said it will take much more testing before the health of the harbor can be determined.

Members of the audience asked the experts if there is a "model" harbor in Massachusetts that Cohasset should aspire to be like. Krahforst said in all honesty, many harbors haven't had the scrutiny Cohasset has, and harbor health data has not been collected. "We've (the state) been remiss in a lot of our monitoring. Cohasset has probably got one of the better watched areas in all of Massachusetts Bay," he said. However, Krahforst said other beaches are on the list and in fact, data collection will begin in Scituate this summer.

Liebman said in his experience, there is no such thing as a "pristine" beach these days. However, he said in terms of bacterial counts, he would say Cohasset's is "pretty normal, but on the impaired side," compared to other towns he has studied. "There are cleaner harbor beaches," he said, and his group intends to get to the bottom of how Cohasset can get up to snuff.

Rules, regulations on building permits

The following was provided by the Building Commissioner's Office at Town Hall.

"If it is regulated, it must be permitted." That is the short answer to the question, "Do I need a building permit?"

The Massachusetts State Building Code and the Cohasset Zoning Bylaw require that a building permit be applied for and issued for any construction that is regulated by either of these documents. The permit process insures that the proposed project is reviewed and inspected for compliance with regulations.

A typical application for residential construction requires three sets of building plans. Proposed work that involves expansion of a building also requires a site plan. If the Building Commissioner's initial review indicates that the project complies with building and zoning requirements, the application is then to be forwarded to other departments, boards and commissions for review.

Typically the Fire Department reviews and approves plans for projects where smoke and carbon monoxide detectors are required; the Conservation Commission reviews plans that require excavation to insure that the project complies with the wetland protection regulations that the Conservation Commission is responsible for; the Board of Health and/or Sewer Commission review projects where the work may impact an on-site septic system or the municipal sewer system. Depending on the complexity of the proposal, there may also be the need for zoning relief from the Zoning Board of Appeals or a Site Plan Review by the Planning Board.

After review and approval by other appropriate departments, the application is returned to the Building Department for a more detailed review prior to the issuance of a building permit. Once issued, the building permit is very specific as to the limit of the work. Any expansion of the project beyond the specified limits must be further reviewed and permitted.

The licensing and registration programs are administered by the State and are designed to insure that contractors are competent and familiar with the Building Code. In addition, there is a procedure to recover damages for faulty workmanship if the work is performed by a registered home improvement contractor. A further protection is the requirement that contractors provide workers' compensation insurance for their employees. Evidence of proper insurance is required at the time a contractor applies for a permit for a specific project.

The Building Code requires that all work be performed by a licensed and registered contractor unless the property owner takes out the permit himself and supervises the construction himself.

It may not be obvious, but simpler projects such as roofing, siding, replacement windows, wood stove installations, temporary tent installation for functions, swimming pool installation, installation of new electrical appliances, furnace/boiler installation as well as many other project require a permit in that those projects are regulated by the Building Codes.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

NO COMPLAINTS

Hello Cohasset. Well, winter arrived this week in a very cold way. I hope that everyone stayed relatively warm and did not have any pipe or car issues due to the cold. I used to really love winter including the cold, snow, etc. As I get just a tiny bit older, I still love the snow but would like it to be enough for a snow day or two for the kids and, have the temps be warm. Other than that, bring on the 60's and 70's! Oh well, no complaints can really be had on our end as far as this weather goes. We have been spoiled quite a bit in comparison to other parts of the country so here's hoping that we don't see any more of the really cold temps that we had this week and move forward to a nice, dry spring.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Here is a special Birthday Wish to a wonderful and special little (ok, growing up by the minute) girl. Miss Tricia Litchfield celebrated birthday number 11 last week with family and friends and is thrilled to be moving ahead. Tricia is in the fifth-grade at the Deer Hill School. Tricia's family is so proud and happy for her. Tricia, you are loved by so many, happy birthday and enjoy this year to its fullest.

This award followed last year's ISL honorable mention for his leadership on the team's defensive line, and Coach Brian Carroll credits Chris for becoming one of the team's hardest-hitting defensive players, noting that he also scored his first touchdown with a three-yard run. The team voted Chris the most valuable offensive lineman, and his inspirational and unselfish play, enormous heart, and dedicated service as one of the team captains also earned him the Coaches' Award. Chris, who earned high academic honors for the fall term, is the son of Susan Roy-Reposa of Hingham and Peter Roy of Cohasset. Super news Chris.

Professor Hall: 'Hold up the mirror' to your lives

David Hall, professor of law at Northeastern University, speaks to those in attendance at the Martin Luther King Day Breakfast, sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Committee.

MLK Day speaker focuses on love, justice

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It was wet and dreary outside, but that didn't deter many Cohasset residents from attending the sixth annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Day Breakfast. Held this year at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. The traditional pancake breakfast was followed by at talk by Professor David Hall.

Residents of all ages were in attendance to hear Hall speak. A member of the faculty at Northeastern University School of Law, he not only spoke about the importance of trying to live life in a way that is consistent with the teachings of Dr. King, but also answered a few questions about the his new book, "The Spiritual Revitalization of the Legal Profession: A Search for Sacred Rivers."

Hall is a professor at Northeastern University, who came to Cohasset this week thanks to the Cohasset Diversity Committee. Over the years, the Diversity Committee has hosted many speakers from organizations such as Caribbean U-turn and the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute in Dorchester. This year, the message was again one of peace and living life according to King's philosophy.

"We need to create a nation and a world that is as beautiful on the inside as it is on the outside."
— Professor David Hall

The country is currently at war and Hall said in King's mind, people should only resort to war when there is nothing else that can be done. He said the best thing people can do is try to love one another. "Standing beside love is always justice," and noted in our daily lives, everyone should strive for both. "They are the true twin towers no enemy could ever destroy," he said.

He said in a country which has much wealth and privilege, sometimes its people can have a sense of entitlement and it is important for people to take a look at themselves and "hold up the mirror" to take a look at how they are really living their lives. Hall said one of his most favorite sayings is from an old fairy tale: "Mirror, mirror, on the wall, who's the fairest of them all." He said those who are the fairest do not necessarily have physical beauty, but are those who serve humanity and those who have dedicated their lives to make a change. "We need to create a nation and a world that is as beautiful on the inside as it is on the outside," he said.

Hall said his hope for the future is that there will always be people who never cease to hold up the mirror to themselves or forget the dream Dr. King had, so that one day, the nation can boldly sing, "Free at last, free at last, thank God almighty, we are free at last."

Born in Savannah, Ga., Hall holds both a doctorate of juridical science and his master of laws from Harvard Law School. He received his Juris Doctor from the University of Oklahoma in 1978, where he was also awarded a master's degree in human relations. He earned his bachelor's degree from Kansas State University in 1972. Named an "all American" at Kansas State for both his athletic abilities in basketball and his scholarly accomplishments, Hall played professionally in Italy for two years. He is married to Marilyn Braithwaite-Hall and is the father of three children, Rahsaan, Sakile and Kiamsha.

Hall lectures nationally on topics of social justice, leadership, diversity and education. He also conducts workshops on diversity and the legal professions for law firms, govrnmental organizations and legal collectives such as the Boston Lawyers Group. He is on the Board of Directors for numerous organizations for numerous organizations. In 1993 he received the Massachusetts Black Lawyers Outstanding Contribution to the Legal Profession Award. He has also been honored by the Boston Bar Association and other community-based organizations. In 1997 he was named Outstanding Dean of the Year by the National Association of Public Interest Lawyers. In 1999, he received the National Conference of Community and Justice Humanitarian Award. President George Bush appointed Professor Hall in 2003 to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the Legal Services Corporation.

School board keeping keen eye on budget requests

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee will not go for an override this spring. At its Wednesday meeting it voted to bring forward a budget figure of $13,687,626 to the town, which would provide level services to the district.

In addition, the committee agreed when it presents its budget to the Board of Selectmen, it will have a list of prioritized supplemental requests, which it would like to see funded if additional money becomes available. The committee said the Selectmen asked for such a list last year and this year they are happy to be able to provide it.

The School Committee is looking at a fiscal 2008 budget figure of $13,687,626, which would provide level services for the district. There is also a supplemental budget that would add $718,385 on top of the $13.6 figure that would move the district ahead at a faster pace if the money can be found to fund it. The School Committee still isn't sure how much of the $718,385 it might present to Selectmen, as it must go through and prioritize items. Members agreed they all felt there were items on the supplemental list that would not be coming forward this year.

To help in the decision-making process, the School Committee has been listening to proposed budget figures from school administrators and invited Facilities Manager Brian Adams, Curriculum Coordinator Nancy Myrzglod, Athletic Director Ron Ford and Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini to present at its Jan. 10 meeting. Their input has helped the Committee decide which items are the most important to fund.

The school department does not have a facilities maintenance budget. In fact, it has included a $10,000 request for maintenance in its supplemental budget, which would at least give it some emergency funds to work with. Should the schools encounter any small problems with maintenance, it does not have the money available in the regular operating budget to be able to go out and make a purchase to quickly remedy the situation — it must ask for a transfer from the town budget. The supplemental budget figure, if granted, would help avoid asking for a transfer.

Adams' requests will need to be met by the town's budget and he said he plans to ask for about $48,000 to make school building improvements.

Adams said all three schools need painting in their classrooms and corridors. He said he would be asking the town for some money for paint, but added it would not be enough paint to cover all three buildings. He noted even if the money were available to purchase enough paint, he does not have the staff necessary to get the work done. He added all the wall and floor outlets need repair district wide.

At the Osgood School, Adams said the carpet in the library needs repairing and the wood along the front foyer stairs needs refinishing. The cement sidewalk at the building's entrance also needs repair.

There are broken tiles in the corridor at the Deer Hill School that need replacing. There is an air conditioning duct in a classroom that needs to be connected to the compressor. The cement pads in the courtyard need repair to prevent door leaks and the fence around the back of the playground needs upgrading. There is also a sewer leak between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

One of the floors in a high school classroom is buckling. There is also a leak in the high school library, which will require repair to the roof/windows. Adams explained the leak is in a new area of the high school and the contractor did not put in the window flashing properly. While he had previously thought the leak was in the roof, Adams said now, it would likely cost more money in legal fees to go after the contractor than it would to fix the flashing.

Flynn said because the leak should be fixed right away, perhaps the School Committee should approach the Advisory Committee and ask for a Reserve Fund Transfer. Transfers can be made for any unexpected or unforeseen cost at any time of the year, and do not require a vote of Town Meeting.

"The first priority for me is staffing, even if money is allocated for maintenance, it means nothing if there is not adequate staff to make the repairs. I'm always putting out fires, we don't have a chance to do anything preventative."
Facilities Manager Brian Adams

Flynn said when the town agreed to build and renovate the schools it also agreed to maintain them. He said due to the fact that many things in the schools were all brand new at once, it only makes sense they will all age and need replacement at the same time, which is much too costly to do at once. "We need a rotating maintenance plan," he said, noting the police and fire departments and the schools all replace their vehicles on a rotating basis and maintenance should be handled in the same fashion.

"The first priority for me is staffing," said Adams, adding even if money is allocated for maintenance, it means nothing if there is not adequate staff to make the repairs. "I'm always putting out fires, we don't have a chance to do anything preventative," he said.

Athletics

While there had been some talk last year about eliminating junior varsity sports, Athletic Director Ron Ford said they are included in this year's budget. He said he is recommending a budget of $207,926 this year, up from $152,323 last year. Last year's budget was lower than this year's budget because it included $145,969 in offsets from user fees and booster club donations. This year, Ford said he would prefer to keep anticipated booster fees out of the budget as offsets, as he would like to be able to use them to supplement the budget, rather than count on that money to fund necessary components such as coaching salaries.

Ford put forth a supplemental request of $57,000, which would allow for three things: an increase in participation by adding another level of sports, total inclusion of the swim team in the budget, and giving a boost to the joint Cohasset/Hull track team.

Ford said with an additional $4,000, the joint Scituate/Cohasset swim team will formally become a part of the budget. Currently, it is paid for through the booster club. If the school department paid for the program, it would "legitimize" the program, he said.

Cohasset's joint track team with Hull could use a boost in participation, and Ford believes adding a cross-country team would help keep track numbers up all year round. Ford said Hull currently has a cross-country team, which is doing well in terms of participation. Hull's numbers tend to be smaller during the spring track season. Ford said if Cohasset can start up a cross-country team, it could partner with Hull for the season and make its team even stronger. Hopefully that momentum would carry on in Hull through the spring.

Ford said currently, the Deer Hill School has a great cross-country program, which has outstanding participation, thanks to physical education teacher Michael Weydt. However, once students reach the middle school level, they do not have the option of continuing it. "It's something I think would generate a lot of interest," he said.

Ford noted his figures include a $250 user fee, and he realizes his proposal is subject to School Committee approval before it goes on to the next level. However, he noted for its size, Cohasset has the number one program in eastern Massachusetts and he would like to continue moving forward in a positive direction.

Some sports currently only have a varsity level, and Ford said where the numbers allow, he would like to start up junior varsity teams. In addition, for the teams that do have junior varsity levels, he would like to add a freshmen team. "It wouldn't be for every sport every year," he said, but he said being able to increase the school's offerings should increase participation. The funds to make that possible are included in the supplemental request.

Middle High School

The middle school budget was presented by middle-high school principal Joel Antolini. He said this year he is looking for an increase of roughly $72,082 or 3.6 percent.

In addition, the middle school has a supplemental budget of $100,143, which would increase the budget by an additional 4.9 percent, for a total increase of 8.5 percent. The supplemental budget would add one math teacher, add one foreign language teacher that would expand the exploratory offerings for students and decrease class size. In addition, the school would like to purchase new English books and math lab supplies and materials, which would support the new math teacher.

There were some increases in the level services budget, including a salary increase for the technology teacher as last year the school had a long term substitute whose pay was less. There are also increases in the science textbooks and materials line item as well as the social studies textbooks and materials line item. The school is purchasing 60 new geography books, which will complete the set and allow students to take books home with them to complete homework assignments.

The high school budget is currently proposed at $4,294,956, or an increase of 5 percent over last year. A supplemental budget is also included for an additional $343,456, which would be an increase of another 8 percent, for a total increase of 13 percent.

The supplemental budget includes requests for software and texts for AP computer science and textbooks for social studies (U.S. History, Ancient History, European History and Law) and Spanish. Equipment for science and art classes, including an LCD projector, a table saw and planer, as well as digital photography software, photography enlargers and a printing press are also included.

Also included in the supplemental request is funding for out of district experiences, including travel for the debate team, drama and math league and student council outings. There is also funding to allow Cohasset to become eligible to participate in "Virtual High School," an Internet program that would allow students to take classes on the computer. In order to participate, Cohasset would need to hire a teacher which it would contribute to the program, as every school which participates in the program must supply a teacher who can teach an online class. The money would also allow the school to administer the PSAT test to all grade 11 students.

There were some increases in the level services budget including additional money for science and social studies texts and materials. Some instructional supplies line items increased this year over last because they had been paid for using grant funding and now must be included in the budget. There was also an increase in library supplies and materials to purchase software that will allow the high school to connect to the Old Colony Library Network from its computers, which will allow students to search for library books at the Cohasset library from the school.

The School Committee will hold ongoing budget discussions. For more information on meeting dates or the school budget, please visit either the town's Web site at www.townofcohasset.org or the school district's Web site at www.cohassetk12.org.

Energy efficiencies for Cohasset schools

Selectman examines ways to save money

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The utility bills for Cohasset schools aren't cheap and the middle-high school is the worst offender. In an effort to find solutions to the problem, Selectman Gary Vanderweil has begun working with Facilities Manager Brian Adams to see if there is any way to cut back on costs.

At Monday's Selectmen's meeting, Vanderweil spoke during the selectmen's comment period about the work he and Adams have been doing, and explained while it is not complete yet, it is a step in the right direction. He said he has a letter in the works, which he is going to send to the School Committee, outlining their findings.

Vanderweil said the high school was one of the last school building projects before going "green" became the norm. Currently, lighting at the high school originates at 14 electrical panels that are controlled by one master lighting control. From the master control, the on-off times for each of the roughly 80 exterior and interior lighting circuits can be manually adjusted. There are override switches in the principal's office that can override the off-cycles of the lighting control system and reactivate any of the shut down lighting.

"The backbone is there for good lighting controls," he said,

School Committee votes 'no' on fiscal 2008 override

can be made up in the budget. He said this year, the school department has made dramatic strides because it has been able to pre-purchase supplies, freeing up money in the budget to cover other expenses, and he would recommend the district start paring down what it is currently spending this year to allow the pre-purchase of materials for 2008 items using fiscal 2007 funds. When funds are left over at the end of one fiscal year, there are two things that can be done with the money: it can be used to either prepay the purchase of supplies and materials, which must arrive at the school prior to July 1, or it must be used to prepay special education tuition. Flynn noted while the district has been fortunate to avoid an override three years in a row, "It will catch up with us at some point," and an override will be necessary, potentially as soon as next year.

Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said in his opinion, there should be one budget number and the supplemental requests should be included in the bottom line. "The supplemental requests are required to move us toward achieving our district goals," he said, one of which is becoming one of the top 10 schools in the state. However, he did say some of the supplemental requests could be eliminated from the list, such as the addition of junior varsity or freshman sports programs. With supplemental funding, the teams that only have a varsity squad would add a junior varsity squad if the number of participants presents itself, and the teams with junior varsity players would add freshmen teams, in the hopes that more offerings would spark even more participation on team sports.

Slanetz noted Athletic Director Ron Ford has been before the board three times asking to allow eighth-grade students to participate on junior varsity teams because the numbers aren't there to fill out the roster, and he said spending money to add teams which don't have the participation to begin with is only taking money away from hiring more teachers.

Slanetz said in forecasting the budget for next year, he wouldn't be so conservative with the anticipated circuit breaker and Chapter 70 funds, which will both be awarded by the state. He also said it might not be a bad idea to go for a small override, perhaps in the $200,000 range. He said by increasing the estimates and possibly going for an override, more of the items in the supplemental budget could be funded, which would help the district move ahead at a faster rate.

But Flynn noted he has heard nothing positive when it comes to state funding and increasing its estimate wouldn't be prudent. He said it is better to aim a little lower than what was received this year, as all news points in that direction, and if the schools receive a little more than that, it can be decided how to spend that money at a later date. He said the last thing the district needs is to overshoot its estimate and need to come back to the town at a later date for more funding, or start making cuts after the fact.

Member Steve Fusco said he would like to avoid an override this year. "The town does not have the appetite for it," he said, adding while at some point it looks likely the district will need one, this is not the year. He also said he believes the district should prioritize its supplemental requests and noted some of the items which have been called supplemental, aren't supplemental in his eyes. "I don't care about books or paint, I care about teachers," he said.

Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said in her opinion, the school department is not asking for any "fluff" and clarified that all the items in the supplemental budget are important. However, she noted given everything that has gone on in the community, there is a sentiment out there that residents do not want to go through another override this year. She said she would like to move forward with the level services budget, and pointed out the only reason the department has the level services budget as an option is from the help of the parents who are "paying exorbitant fees."

Fusco said the funding problems being faced in Cohasset are not unique, but the town's approach needs to be. He suggested the committee think outside the box, and perhaps look into offering classes for adult education and charging a fee for the use of the building. He said while he wasn't sure of all the particulars that go along with a program like that, such as how much it would cost to hire for custodial coverage, "I do think we're going to need to look at things differently. There have to be other ways to do it."

Williams agreed and said the district should look into what it would cost to begin its own school, similar to the Landmark School, which provides special services for students. Cohasset pays tuition to send children to the Landmark School and if it could provide the service to its own students, similar to how the integrated preschool is run, as well as children from surrounding towns, not only would it help area children by reducing their commute time, the school could generate some revenue.

The School Committee agreed to bring forward the level services budget with the caveat that it has not yet firmly decided what the money will be spent on. It will also bring forward a list of supplemental requests to the Board of Selectmen, which will be prioritized, just in case additional funding becomes available.

Energy efficiencies for Cohasset schools

which is why he has recommended an electrician install a communications wire from the master panel to Adams' desk location. This, along with $1,000 worth of hardware and software he would purchase, would allow him to rapidly set the controls up from his computer. The software would allow Adams to program 365 days per year, which would accommodate lighting schedules for holidays and vacations.

Vanderweil said because the school was well designed in terms of allowing in natural light, he feels most windowed spaces do not require artificial lighting on clear days. He said many of the hallways in the school are completely lined with windows, which provide a good amount of light during the day. "We don't need so much artificial light," he said.

"The backbone is there for good lighting controls."

— Selectman Gary Vanderweil

Vanderweil pointed out any changes in lighting would need to "conform with the codes, but we should experiment and see how much we can do."

In addition to investigating the lighting plan at the high school, he and Adams have been looking at the HVAC (heating, ventilating and air conditioning) controls. He said they conducted an experiment over Christmas, turning the system on 30 minutes later than usual, and turning it off 30 minutes earlier than usual, saving an hour of energy. Vanderweil said the test showed the concrete of the building holds on to heat very well and on average, the temperature dropped six degrees overnight.

While there is still work to be done, Vanderweil said he believes it is a good start, and looks forward to sharing his ideas with the School Committee.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormtizer commended Vanderweil for his efforts. "This is some really nice work," he said, adding he thought the ideas were great. Vanderweil quipped once a complete evaluation has been done for the middle-high school and options are weighed, "Then we'll do the others."

Fiscal 2008

In the newspaper business, we can sympathize with what always seems to be a "bad news" story. Times never seem to be terrific in terms of the bottom line, either with the print business or in town and school government.

These "industries," as are most, are driven by economic factors and changing times. The goal is to focus on moving ahead even when that requires considerable creativity in terms of resources.

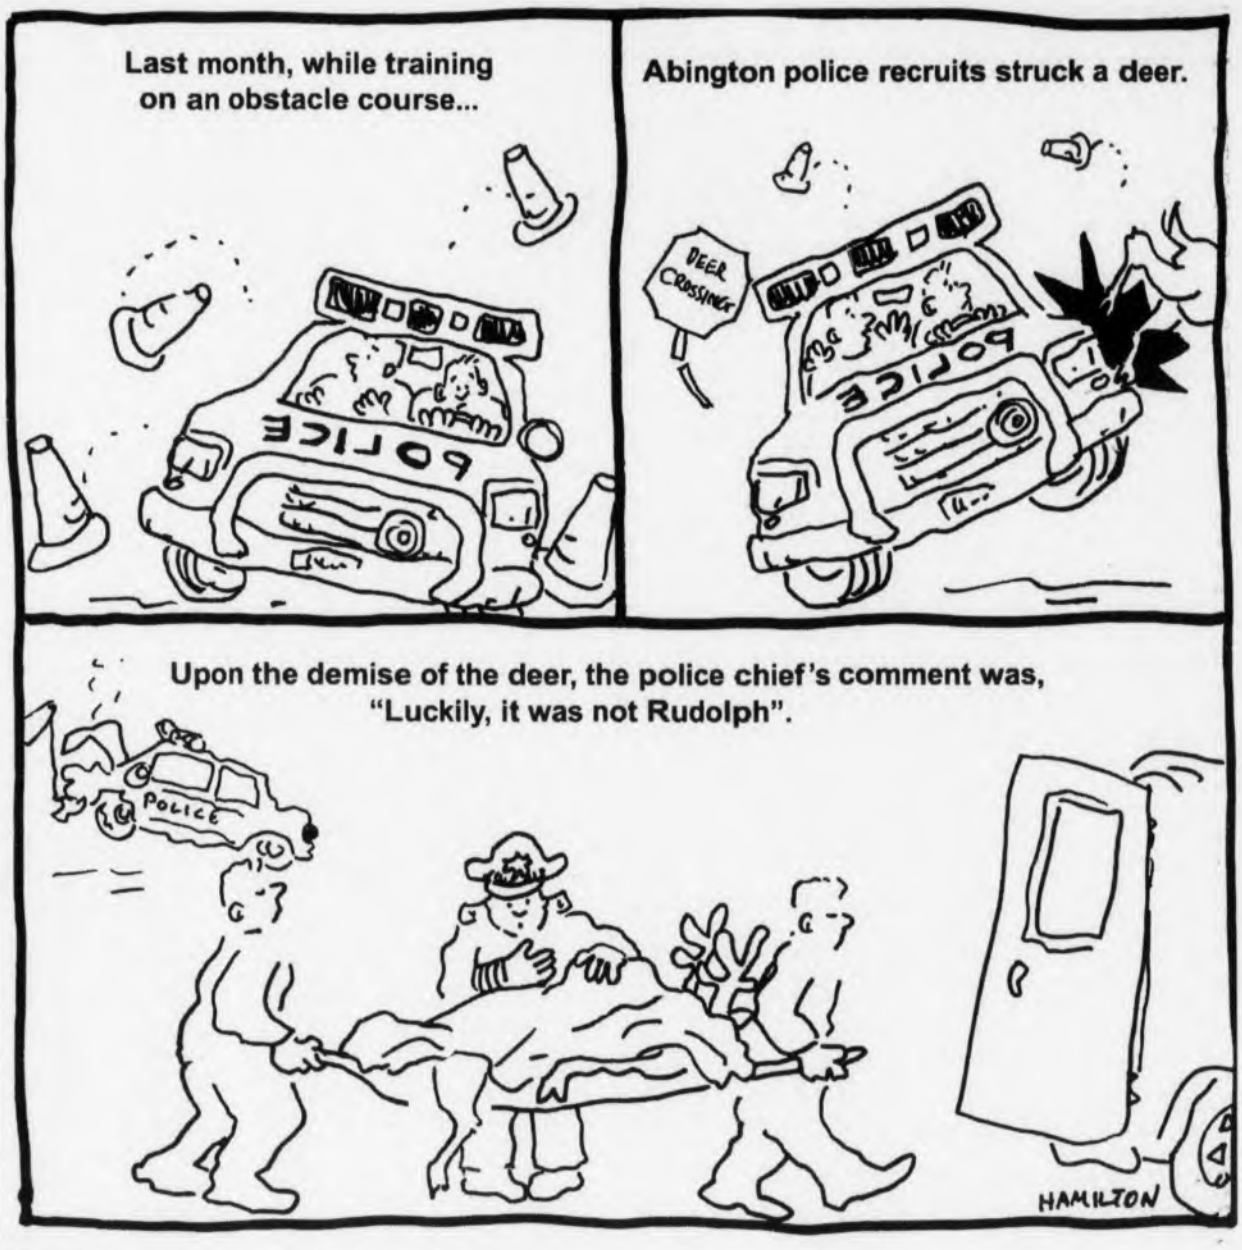
Here at the Mariner, we have found Cohasset to be one of the most interesting towns to cover for several reasons. The most obvious is its coastal location and exquisite beauty. But the true heart of the town is its people: those who grew up in town and have remained here and those who have moved in and now call the place their own.

There is considerable passion among townspeople here whether it's the budget, property taxes, or vision for the Village. At times, that passion erupts into a real dispute, pitting groups and individuals against each other. Thankfully, the acrimony usually fades and citizens again come together, united in their desire to do what is best for Cohasset.

As we approach the new fiscal year, which starts July 1, there could be storm clouds on the horizon at the state level in terms of revenue. Estimates are that the sales tax revenues will be flat and lottery revenues are "maxed out," to quote our state Sen. Robert Hedlund.

Yet even with Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps how much a municipality can raise its tax levy in a given year, local property taxes are higher than ever. That puts stress on the residential taxpayer.

Welcome news here in Cohasset is that the School Committee is working on a budget that will not require an override this spring to balance the fiscal 2008 budget. We think we can safely say – a year without an override campaign (for or against) — would be a nice respite.



Even with fewer resources, however, there is one aspect of the town cannot be overlooked: building maintenance. We report this week in a budget story on some maintenance issues at the schools that need to be addressed.

Those of us who own homes and motor vehicles know all too well what happens when maintenance is put off. The problem not only gets worse, it gets more costly. The old saying "a stitch in time, saves nine" is all too true.

What continues to astound many of our colleagues at the Mariner, however, are the resources that Cohasset has among its own citizenry. Volunteer brainpower and energy continues to come forth, willing to dive into an issue. Most recent examples, in our view, are the Harbor Health Committee, Economic Development Committee, Beechwood Ballpark Committee, and the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

In Cohasset, government for the most part is not an "us versus them" but truly a collective "we."

We feel confident that fiscal 2008 is going to be a banner year for the town in terms of coming together on a range of problems. We urge those who may have been sitting on the sidelines to consider getting involved. Call the Selectmen's office for a list of committee vacancies, or better yet, consider running for office! Nomination papers are available at the Town Clerk's Office until Feb. 15.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper. Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Letters to the Editor

Condominium location on Ripley Road not suitable

To the Editor:

A seven-unit condominium to replace the now private home at 25 Ripley Road, as proposed by the Cohasset Housing Partnership, would make two dangerous intersections more dangerous, especially for the Town's children. The intersection of Ripley Road and North Main Street and the one just a block away at Ripley Road and Sohier Street are much-traveled access roads to and from Route 3A.

Children of many ages, walking and riding bikes, as well as teenage babysitters and mothers pushing strollers constantly traverse these roads and intersections to get to the Little League, Town Pool, Paul Pratt Library, Children's Museum and playground, and Deer Hill School.

The proposed plan provides for 11 parking spaces, and, as I read the plan, it proposed putting the curb cut at the rear of the condominium on Sohier Street., across from the Library and Our World Children's Museum. Not only would there be one- to- two cars per unit coming in and out, there would be visitors, delivery trucks, trash collectors, fuel deliveries, septic pumpers, etc. Since condominiums require landscape maintenance, there would be landscapers' conveyances regularly obstructing passage and visibility. This is on the route to the main entrance of the town pool. A driveway entrance with this amount of use at the current place on Ripley Road would be similarly obstructive..

Since none of the Partnership members live in this immediate area, they would not realize all this. I commend them for devoting their time and effort in the very difficult job of trying to up our affordable housing stock. But it should be pretty evident that, for the above and other reasons expressed at the Jan. 9 neighborhood meeting, this particular location is really not suitable.

Wrestling Boosters thank sponsors

To the Editor:

The Cohasset-Hull High School Wrestling Team recently hosted its 16th annual Wrestling Tournament on Jan. 13. This year a total of 12 teams from across the region participated in the all-day event. The Cohasset-Hull Wrestling Booster Club provides concessions and T-shirts for team participants and fans at the tournament. The proceeds from these sales go to the Booster Club to purchase uniforms and equipment, as well as senior scholarships for the wrestling team.

We would like to acknowledge and thank our sponsors who generously supported us this year.

Yes or no for a late-night train?

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Late Train — Last week we published the proposed schedule for the Greenbush from Boston to the South Shore. You may remember that the last train will leave South Station at 10 p.m., arriving in Cohasset about 10:45. Subsequently, we asked you to send any comments you might have on the desirability of a later train so that one could easily attend a basketball game, baseball game, or some other event in Boston that might make it tough to make a 10 p.m. train to return home. So far, we have received 7 replies, split 4 Yes, 3 No. Certainly, more than 7 people in Town must have an opinion on this. Please let us know, either by phone or email. The appropriate contacts are at the end of this article.

Mount Cohasset – There is a huge dirt pile, readily visible from Route 3A, on the site of the New Cohasset Station. The pile looks to be nearly 50 feet high. Tongue in cheek, we refer to it as Mt. Cohasset. But, contrary to popular belief the MBTA is not preparing to add a ski lift.

We've also had people ask us whether the MBTA wants to get rid of the dirt so residents can use it for fill. But, the MBTA put it there on purpose. The whole parking lot area will be raised nearly 8 feet in height to accommodate underground drainage structures. That will take a lot of dirt. And, you're looking at it now.

Busy as beavers — Unfortunately, it is tough to get very close to all of the work going on at the intersection of Spring and Pond Streets. (The neighborhood residents surely know what's going on, since they are patiently waiting for the workman to finish and disappear from sight.)

Last week we put on our hard hats and safety vest and ventured into the fray to take the photo of Pond Street under construction. There were crews working on drainage on the Lantern Lane side of the crossing, two power company bucket trucks were rearranging the overhead power wires and the crew that laid the rubber strips between the rails at the crossing had just finished their work. There must have been 30 to 40 people working in this area. It became very evident that this is a "must finish" part of the project for Cashman and the MBTA. The truth is that this crossing must be completed so that Cashman can close the temporary crossing on Spring Street across from the Historical Society in order to make the system ready for commercial service.

Greenbush work on Pond Street.

Mt. Cohasset, the huge dirt pile, on the site of the Cohasset Station.

Certainly, more than 7 people in Town must have an opinion on this. Please let us know, either by phone or email. The appropriate contacts are at the end of this article.

As a very interesting little known fact, did you know that in the early days of Cohasset South Main Street stopped at the old library building (now the Cohasset Historical Society), and detoured onto Spring Street, only to reemerge onto South Main St. at the corner where St. Anthony's now stands? The portion of South Main Street that lies between the two ends of Spring Street was a marsh and deemed impassible. In more recent times it was fashionable to fill in areas such as this so the road way between Scituate and Cohasset could be straightened out. We suppose this wouldn't pass muster with the Conservation Commission these days.

The thumbs have it

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Previously, if you asked me about the greatest innovation in thumbs, I would have given the textbook answer: "opposable thumbs allow us to grasp tools." Or, I might have thought wistfully of the time when "thumbing it" wasn't an invitation to meet serial killers. And perhaps I'd wonder what Siskel and Ebert would have done if not for their thumbs? Yet, while I admire those among us blessed with green thumbs, I never thought I'd see the day when being "all thumbs" is a compliment.

But, we are fast becoming a thumb-centric society. Thanks to cell phones, BlackBerry's and Gameboys, our children are now coming out of the womb grabbing the world by their thumbs. It's no wonder that their first words are no longer "Mama" or "Dada", but "Mario" and "DonkeyKong;" and that their first stuffed animals come with a userid, password, and an invitation to www.webkinz.com. "Toto, I don't think we're in Kansas anymore. Now go get me some Webkinz money so I can visit the W shop."

What effect is this having on the already wacky world we live in? Last year a London study found that Generation Y rings doorbells with their thumbs. I didn't believe this as personally I'm partial to my index finger, and thought I should do my own research. I nixed my initial plan to follow some of my 20-something neighbors around. (I lived in Brookline at the time, where it's practically a faux pas to walk down the street and not be on your BlackBerry or Blue Tooth.) But I was worried that I'd be labeled as the neighborhood creepy lady. Instead I surveyed a few of my young colleagues, by email of course. Their answer? "Ring doorbells? Why do that? Wouldn't you just text them to say you're out front?" Once again, the thumbs have it. (Note to self: Do not invest money in any company that manufactures doorbells.)

...we are fast becoming a thumb-centric society. Thanks to cell phones, BlackBerry's and Gameboys, our children are now coming out of the womb grabbing the world by their thumbs.

However, there is even more fallout from all this mind-numbing thumb-centricity. The newly identified malady: "BlackBerry Thumb." No, it's not what Little Jack Horner got when he stuck his thumb in that pie. It's actually tendonitis or aggravation of underlying arthritis by the repetitive motion required by BlackBerry use. Fortunately, if you live in NYC (where else?), they have spas that now offer specific therapies for BlackBerry Thumb, Cell Phone Acne and Tech Neck, the latest technology-related injuries.

Yet, sore thumbs aren't the only BlackBerry backlash. Recent articles in The Wall Street Journal and on Forbes.com have labeled our children "BlackBerry Orphans" and even asked the question "Is Your BlackBerry Ruining Your Sex Life?" I'll admit responsibility for adding to somewhat useless, albeit amusing, blog fodder as the author of the latter. Still, I do confess that my research for that article delayed my own purchase of a BlackBerry for a few months. But now I'm BlackBerrying with the best of them, and if my child wants my attention, he can stop whining and text me.

As for the effect on my social life, I do find that with everyone's impossibly busy schedules, PDA's – Personal Digital Assistants – play a far larger role in my life than PDA's – Public Displays of Affection. So, really, how can my BlackBerry ruin what doesn't exist in the first place? In the meantime, anyone want to thumb-wrestle?

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident, the CEO of DowntownWomensClub.com and a blogger for www.womensDISH.com, who, when recently asked what five material items she could not live without, listed: hair scrunchy, BlackBerry, laptop, library card and running shoes.

HEALTH NOTES

Unsafe disposal of 'sharps' poses health hazard

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Each year, 8 million people across the country use more than 3 billion needles, syringes, and lancets — also called sharps — to manage medical conditions at home. Sharps disposal by self-injectors is not typically regulated, and self-injectors do not always know the safest disposal methods leading to haphazard disposal habits and increased community exposure to sharps.

Unsafe disposal practices present the greatest risk to sanitation and sewage treatment workers, janitors, housekeepers and children. Sharps users sometimes heedlessly throw their used needles in the trash or flush them down the toilet. Used sharps left loose among other waste at the RTF have become lodged in equipment, forcing workers to remove them by hand. Children, adults, and even pets are also at risk for needle-stick injuries when sharps are disposed of improperly at home or in public settings.

Because of the substantial risk, Cohasset has provided for convenient disposal options to sharps for users. Sharps can be disposed of at the Board of Health Office at Town Hall. All sharps must be in puncture proof containers, such as detergent bottles or metal cans with tops.

People exposed to sharps face not only the risk of a painful stick, but of contracting a life-altering disease such as HIV/AIDS or Hepatitis B or C. All needle-stick injuries are treated as if the needle were infected with a disease. Victims of sharps-related injuries face the cost of post-injury testing, disease prevention measures, and counseling, even if no infection or disease was spread. Some diseases can take a long time to appear on test results, leading to months of testing and apprehension. Reportedly one trash hauler, who was stuck by a needle during trash pickup, contracted Hepatitis C, which remained undetected for two years, despite a medical examination when he was stuck. The worker later died from the disease. Needle-stick injuries are a preventable health risk, and states and municipalities take specific actions to protect their residents from this risk

There are sharps disposal containers at the Board of Health in Town Hall, and at the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) at Cedar Street.

People use sharps to treat all sorts of medical conditions in the home, and the number treated at home with injectable medicines continues to rise. Sharps users may use lancets and/or needles and syringes to deliver medicine for conditions such as: allergies, arthritis, cancer, diabetes, hepatitis, HIV/AIDS, infertility, migraines, multiple sclerosis, osteoporosis, and psoriasis.

Perhaps the scariest thing about the sharps thing is the use by casual and recreational drug users. This group appears in studies to have the highest rate of transfer of infection because apparently if they are casual about drug use, they are also casual about needle use. And studies have shown that casual needle users are specially at risk in communities like Cohasset, where the risk of infection from diseases such as AIDS and Hepatitis C is low, precautions are more lax and the probability of transmission of a disease by those infected is substantially higher than where the risk is assumed to be great. In Massachusetts, anyone over 18 can legally purchase syringes and needles from a pharmacy without a prescription.

For any sharps user, there are a number of safe disposal options. While most of the below are not available to Cohasset sharp users, they may be available at other locales.

- Drop-off collection sites: Take the filled sharps container to appropriate collection sites, which may include doctors' office, hospitals, health clinics, pharmacies, Board of Health, Community Center, police and fire stations and medical waste facilities. These programs often give self-injectors the option of continuing to use empty household containers to collect sharps, but prevent the sharps from entering the household waste stream.
- Household hazardous waste collection sites: Self-injectors can place their used sharps in a special sharps container or, in some cases, an approved household container, take them to municipal household hazardous waste collection sites and place them in the sharps collection bins.
- Residential special waste pickup services: Self-injectors can place their used sharps in a special container, similar to a recycling container, and put it outside their home for collection by trained special waste handlers. Some programs require customers to call for pickup, while others offer regular pickup schedules.
- Mail-back programs: Used sharps are placed in special containers, which are mailed (in accordance with U.S. Postal Service requirements) to a collection site for proper disposal. Mail-back programs are available for individual use by sharps users and can also serve as a disposal method for community collection sites.

Donald or Rosie?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I was watching TV with a friend of mine the other night when they interrupted the mundane news like the war in Iraq to bring us up to date on the growing feud between Rosie O'Donnell and Donald Trump.

Not only that, but the breathless newsman at the mike asked us to pick a winner and send our choices via e-mail to an address that began with www and end with a .com, just like they do in the presidential race.

"Who do you like?" I asked my friend with my usual savoir-faire. "The guy with the weird comb-over or the fat broad?"

"I don't like either one," she said, probably speaking for the same 80 per cent of the population that thinks Britney Spears ought to go home to Louisiana and learn to make gumbo and fix crawdads.

Me, I'm enjoying every minute of it — for the same reason people slow up to watch motor vehicle accidents on I-95. It's as if Hitler had declared war on Mussolini and we got to watch the shooting from Switzerland.

In case your interest in the news has been stalled by blizzards in Colorado and missing kids in Missouri, the Rosie-Donald contretemps began when Donald pardoned Miss USA, a country girl from Kentucky, for falling into the flesh pots of New York.

Speaking as one who has sampled the fleshpots of New York, which can be an easy fall for a city boy from Boston, let alone a country girl from Kentucky.

Donald was in a position to pardon Miss USA because he owns the Miss Universe Contest of which Miss USA is part along with Trump Towers, the Trump Taj Mahal and a TV show called "The Apprentice" in which he gets to fire everybody on camera.

A new season of "The Apprentice" was about to begin against "Desperate Housewives" and you don't suppose . . . naw, it couldn't be.

But I digress . . .

Rosie, faced with a coming contract renewal on her show, "The View," detected something subversive in Donald's forgiveness of Miss USA and, combing her hair forward in approximation of Donald's do, she dissed him as "a moralist."

Incidentally, whatever it is that Donald does to his hair it is not a rug. It's his real hair, he told MSNBC, which devoted an hour show to him. It's just that his girl friend cuts it. Which should be a lesson to men everywhere: Never let a friend, no matter how intimate, cut your hair.

I missed Donald's return volley but I understand the word "pig" figured strongly in the conversation. Rosie came back with a reference to "bankruptcy." Donald countered with "third rate comedian" and yada yada yada.

Before you knew it Rosie and her boss, Barbara Walters, were taking a victory high-five right there in full view on the boob tube. Madonna was chipping in her two pence from London and TV was polling celebrities at the Golden Globes for their opinions.

Then and only then did I flip the dial to Nickelodeon to catch a rerun of "Ozzie and Harriet." Maybe there's something to be said for old time TV after all.

BRIEFLY

Town Census

The Town Census for 2007 has been mailed to each household this week. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2007. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible with a current rabies certificate although you may have recently renewed your 2006 license. If you did not receive your census, please contact the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

Selectmen happy with budget talks

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said as one of the liaisons to the School Committee, he believes this year's budget process has gotten off to a very positive start. "They're trying to come up with a balanced budget, and there is some question as to whether that's happening, but they're trying," he said.

Dormitzer and Vice Chairman Rob Spofford, who is also a liaison to the School Committee, both recently attended a school budget meeting. While Dormitzer said he hopes items will have more prioritization going forward, he was pleased with what he saw.

Dormitzer said the School Committee has set the goal of becoming one of the top 10 schools in the state. "That gave us some sense they're receptive to the concerns of the town," he said. However, he said going forward, he would like to see more of a breakdown in the budget as to how spending is going to ensure the goal is met.

Spofford said he too has had a very positive experience so far. "They're moving in the right direction. They're making a strong effort to live up to the Town Meeting request that they be more open with their budget," he said.

Spofford also noted it is important to study the school budget in the context of the entire town budget. "We don't just need to put a spotlight on the schools," he said, adding the communication lines are as good as he's seen them be during his three years on the board.

Member appointed to Housing Partnership

The Board of Selectmen appointed Debra Hines to the Housing Partnership at its Monday meeting. Hines' housing experience dates back to 1991, when she worked at a non-profit housing organization in Baltimore, Md. As a consultant, she has worked with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development over the last 10 years. She also has experience from a financial perspective as the Vice President of Global Business Services for IBM, managing a team of 600 financial management professionals.

There is still one vacancy on the Housing Partnership. Interested candidates should contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or may send a letter of interest and résumé to Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue, or via e-mail to Town Manager Bill Griffin at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org.

Stormwater Bylaw

The Stormwater Committee has submitted a proposed Stormwater Bylaw for consideration at the March 31 annual Town Meeting. The bylaw is also sponsored by the Board of Health, Water Commission and Conservation Commission.

"The Stormwater Bylaw is being proposed to help address the serious storm water flooding and pollution in Cohasset and to allow the town to comply with the requirements of the federal Clean Water Act," said John McNabb, chairman of the Stormwater Committee.

The proposed Stormwater Bylaw establishes a new Stormwater Commission and authorizes the commission to implement an annual Stormwater Improvement Program to prevent and reduce existing storm water flooding and pollution, and for a new Stormwater Permitting Program to require new development or redevelopment to reduce their storm water impacts to the greatest extent possible.

"We can still make changes to the proposed bylaw if we need to before the warrant goes to press," said McNabb, "so we urge all interested residents to please review the proposed Stormwater Bylaw and send comments and questions to us no later than Feb. 16."

The Stormwater Committee can be contacted at stormwater02025@comcast.net for residents who want to submit comments or get a copy of the proposed bylaw. A copy of the Stormwater Bylaw Warrant Article can also be downloaded from the Cohasset Water Department Web site at cohassetwater.org.

By Bob Katzen

With today's edition coverage of the 2007 Massachusetts legislative session with the weekly Beacon Hill Roll Call report will begin. This feature is a clear and concise compilation of the voting records of area state representatives and senators at the Statehouse.

Beacon Hill Roll Call provides an unbiased summary of bills and amendments, arguments from floor debate on both sides of the issue and each legislator's vote or lack of vote on the matter. This information gives readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill. Many bills are reported on in their early stages and readers often have the opportunity to contact their legislators and express an opinion prior to the measure being brought up for final action.

The feature "Also up on Beacon Hill" informs readers of other important matters at the Statehouse.

Beacon Hill Roll Call is provided by Bob Katzen who has covered the Legislature for more than 30 years. He has been providing this feature to hundreds of newspapers across the state since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week as the 2007 session gets underway.

The official list from the state treasurer's office of "per diems" collected by 157 state representatives in 2006 for "mileage, meals and lodging" expenses reveals that through December 31, these lawmakers have collected a total of $469,128. Per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse."

These per diems are paid to representatives above and beyond their annual salaries which at the beginning of this year were raised 4.8 percent from $55,569.41 to $58,236.74. The $2667.33 hike was implemented by former Gov. Mitt Romney under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income for the preceding two-year period - as ascertained by the governor. Many representatives also receive additional stipends ranging from $7,500 to $25,000 if they serve as committee chairs or in other leadership positions.

The 2006 statistics indicate that representatives received annual per diem payments ranging from $280 to $15,300 and 26 representatives have so far chosen not to apply for any money. These figures are not necessarily the final ones for 2006. State law does not establish a deadline that representatives must meet in order to collect the per diems. Critics say that some representatives will wait several more months into 2007 before they file for additional per diems from 2006 in order to avoid having their full payments appear on the initial list released by the state treasurer's office.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These payments are not taxable and range from $10 per day for representatives who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Representatives who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones who collect the highest total of annual per diems.

The Legislature approved, as part of the state budget in 2000, a provision doubling these per diems to the current amounts. Supporters of the hikes said that the per diems had not been raised for many years despite the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. Some opponents said that the hikes were excessive while others argued that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous. They noted that other state workers and most private workers are not paid additional money for commuting. The House and Senate did not hold a separate roll call vote directly on the doubling of the per diem. The hike was included as a small section of the comprehensive $21.5 billion fiscal 2001 state budget that was approved on roll call votes by both branches.

The representative who received the most money in 2006 was Rep. Daniel Bosley (D-North Adams) with $15,300. The other top ten recipients include Reps. William Pignatelli (D-Lenox) $10,890; Denis Guyer (D-Dalton) $9,676; John Binienda (D-Worcester) $8,352; Robert Correia (D-Fall River) $7,596; John Scibak (D-South Hadley) $7,320; Demetrius Atsalis (D-Barnstable) $7,250; Christopher Speranzo (D-Pittsfield) $7,020; Ellen Story (D-Amherst) $6,780 and Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport) $6,705. Six of this year's top ten recipients also made last year's top ten list including Bosley, Pignatelli, Guyer, Binienda, Scibak and Story.

Next week's report: Local senators' per diems for 2006.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' PER DIEMS FOR 2006

Here are the numbers of days that local representatives certified that they were at the Statehouse in 2006. Also included is the total amount of per diem money that the state paid the representative in 2006. A total of 26 representatives did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that these 26 representatives were never at the Statehouse in 2006. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

PATRICK RESTORES $383.6 MILLION - Gov. Deval Patrick restored $383.6 million that was cut from the state budget in November by former Gov. Romney who used his budget cutting powers to unilaterally cut $425 million from the state's $25.7 billion fiscal 2007 state budget. Romney later restored some $41.4 million. Patrick last week restored the remaining $383.6 million. Romney's cuts included funding for education, social service programs and public safety.

CREATE WORK-FAMILY COUNCIL (H 4216) - Romney "pocket vetoed" legislation creating a 16-member Massachusetts Work-Family Council to focus on work-family issues facing employers and employees with families. The council would conduct public hearings to identify these issues and recommend solutions and public and private workplace practices that support the well-being of both employers and families. A pocket veto occurs when the Legislature approves a bill and then adjourns for the year. If the governor does not act on the measure within 10 days, it is considered to be vetoed. Romney said that since he was leaving office and the Legislature approved the bill at the last minute, he did not have the time for a complete legal review of the proposal and decided to pocket veto it.

cut deals with the legislative leadership."

With Romney, Hedlund – who was friends with Romney's former Chief of Staff – could literally just walk into the corner office. That has changed, however it's not going to faze Hedlund, a self-described "independent thinker."

But he also realizes that over the past few years when the Boston media wanted the Republican view on an issue, Romney, Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey, or former state Treasurer Joe Malone were the "go-to" people. "We'll now be more visible in that sense," says Hedlund about Republican leadership on Beacon Hill. Hedlund was recently promoted to Minority Whip, which carries new responsibilities. The Minority Whip assists the Minority Leader in coordinating the party caucuses in response to legislation and other matters.

Republican representation in the Legislature is at an all-time low. A fact, Hedlund readily acknowledges.

A mere five GOP senators out of 40 make up the GOP voice in the Senate and Republicans can only call 19 out of 160 representatives in the House their own.

"We are at an historic low since the Civil War, as far back as records were kept," Hedlund says. But he points out the "silver lining" could be a renewed Republican focus, not on the governor's office, but on getting more Republicans elected to the Legislature. "The tragedy is that we have had great candidates through the years that we did not focus on because we had the corner office," Hedlund explained. "We argued that that was the true 'check.'"

Hedlund says former Lt. Gov. Healey, who ran against Patrick, made the case for the need for more checks and balances in state government better than anyone. He blames her loss on a poorly run campaign.

"We have nowhere to go but up," he says about the Massachusetts Republican Party. "We had a misguided focus to put GOP resources at the top of the ticket. "We are going to have to be like Avis – we try harder because we have to, or like Alamo, we have to try triple harder."

Hedlund sees himself as the most independent person in the Senate. It's a trait that has held him in good stead in the district. Apart from the 1992 race against former Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald, voters have returned Hedlund to office seven times; his closest race being the McDonald rematch in 1994, which he won by some 600 votes. In November, Hedlund easily beat Democratic candidate Stephen A. Lynch of Marshfield in a landslide.

"I have never looked at an issue along partisan lines," Hedlund says. He recalls voting to override a Weld veto at a time when the Legislature was cutting welfare and state employee benefits. Sustaining the veto would have meant raises for Weld's cabinet secretaries. Weld even called Hedlund at his home to twist his arm.

"I looked at the issue on its merits," he recalls. "My blue collar sensibilities and independent outlook wouldn't let me do it.

"I've taken that approach over time and it has served me well."

Hedlund, who owned a truck repair business when he got into politics, has taken courses at Quincy College, UMass Boston, and Wentworth. He has not finished college. That alone is unusual in the Legislature, which is primarily "lawyer-driven." Hedlund says a key to his success is that he is a full-time Legislator. He said many legislators are making considerable money with their active outside employment.

In the next session, Hedlund's bills that are drawing attention include pension reform that would cap individual pension benefits; limit benefits based on actual compensation; and would prevent abuse between different retirement groups. Hedlund's proposed pension reforms have also been included in the recently released Republican caucus package.

Hedlund has also taken the lead on a legislative immigration package that would deal with employers who hire illegal aliens; would require a Massachusetts driver's license in order to register a motor vehicle; and would keep illegals out of public housing.

He says he is "tormented" about the gay marriage issue. Hedlund voted to put the question of amending the state Constitution to define marriage as between a man and a woman before the voters. However, he is undecided on how he will vote in the second Constitutional Convention which is required to put the question on the ballot in 2008.

"I've met a lot of good people on both sides of the issue, who have weighed in quite strongly," he says.

In 2007, Hedlund sees the biggest issues as "budget stuff, affordability and property taxes."

He anticipates $175 million more Big Dig costs with maintenance of the tunnels. All state employee contracts are up in the coming year except for State Police and correction officers. Liabilities totaling $300 million in healthcare reform are also expected to have huge budget impacts. This is all coupled with expected flat revenues from the sales tax and "maxed out" lottery revenues.

"There is going to be less growth in revenue than we have had," Hedlund said.

The Plymouth-Norfolk District includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Hedlund can be reached at the State House at 617-722-1646. Hedlund's email is:

Gymnasts win two in a row

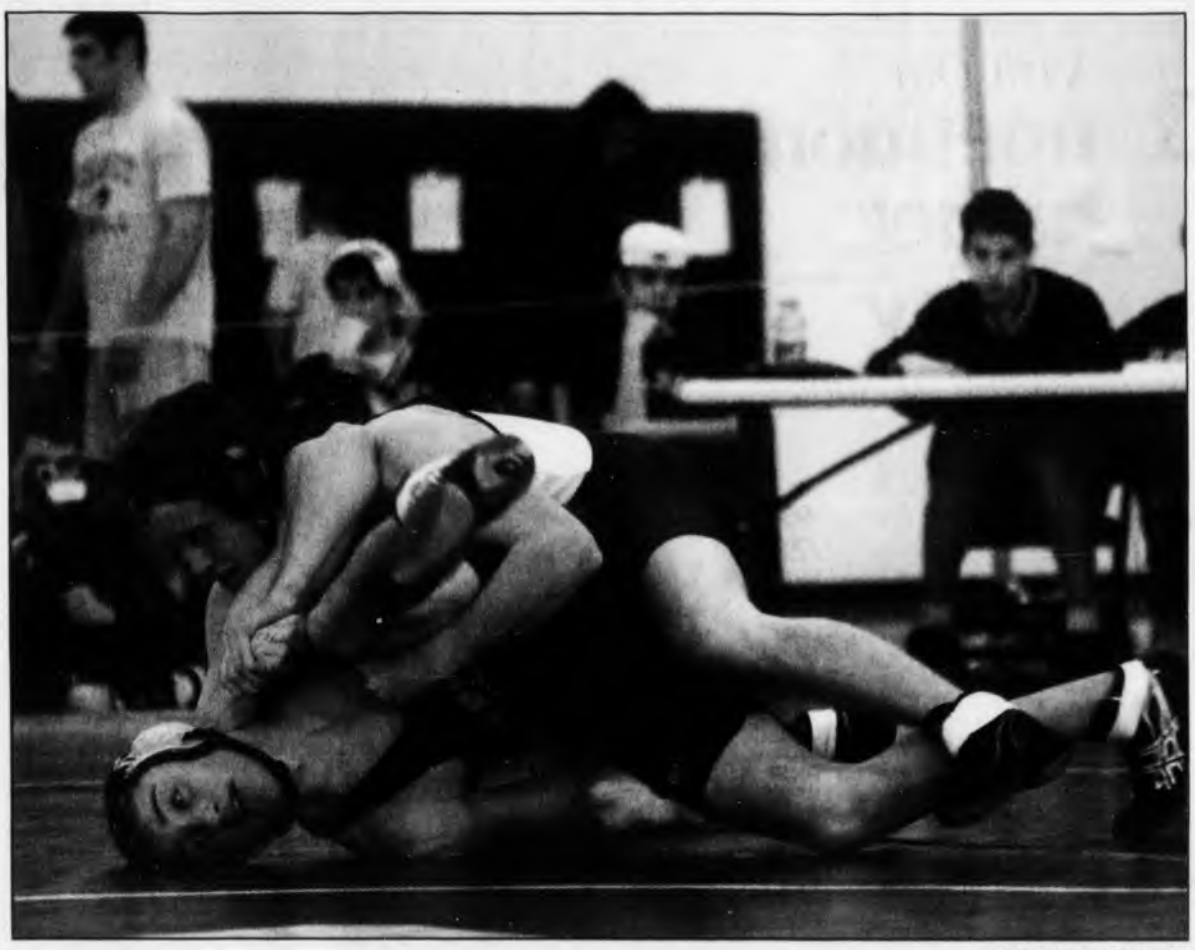
By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset/Norwell gymnasts recent picked up their first two wins of the year against Nantucket and Plymouth South.

The girls made their long trip to the island last Saturday worth their while with a 118.4-111.5 win over the host Whalers. Several good performances in the floor exercise event helped pave the way to victory.

Melissa Murphy had the team's score with an 8.7, followed closely by Corinna Durham (8.6), Cassie Pacella (8.4), Kiersten Shontz (8.2) and Liz Clapp (7.5). Durham and Murphy placed second and third, respectively, in the all-around with a 30.7 and 30.5. Durham also posted a solid 8.1 on the vault.

Both girls improved their all-around scores Tuesday against Plymouth South, and they had to, as Cohasset/Norwell edged out Plymouth South, 119.65-118.5. Durham earned a 31.3 and Murphy a 30.9, again finishing second and third in the all-around.



On the vault, Shontz finished right with Durham and Murphy with a 7.9, followed by Vanessa Durham (7.85), Jamie Nichols (7.75) and Clapp (7.6). Pacella (7.3) and Nichols (7.0) also had solid scores on the beam to help the winning cause.

Cohasset/Norwell travels to Attleboro this Saturday for a 5 p.m. meet, and hosts Marshfield Monday night at 7.

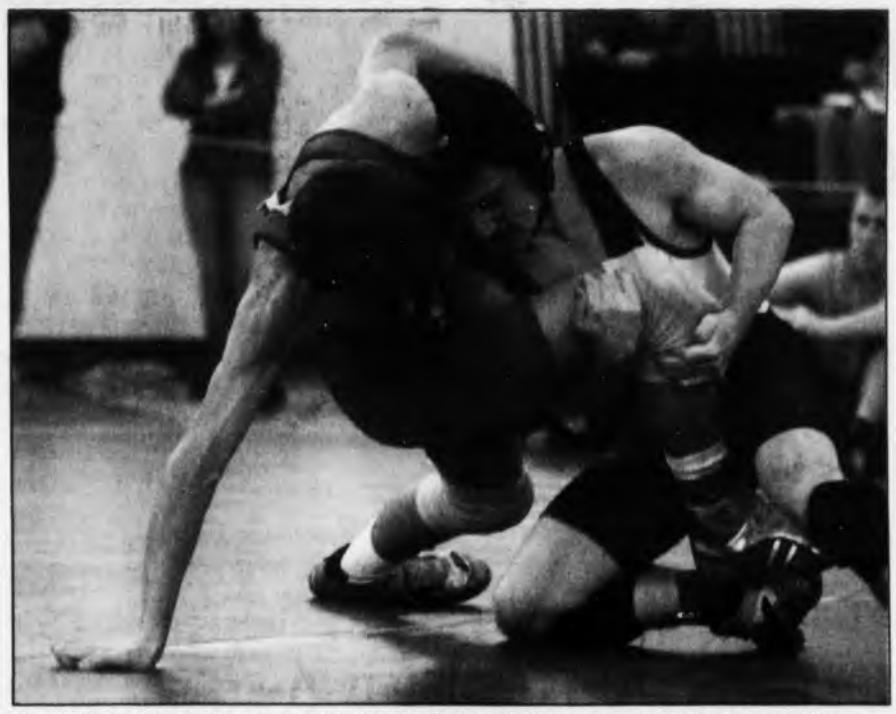
Nail-biting win over Carver puts CHS wrestling in driver's seat

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM



A couple weeks ago, Cohasset High wrestling coach Torin Sweeney said the South Shore/Mayflower League would come down to Wednesday's match with Carver.

The match lived up to the hype and came right down to the wire, and it was the Skippers that pulled out a 45-36 lead.

Cohasset led 39-36 going into the final bout, with Cohasset's Tim Toomey squaring off against Carver's Eric Collins. The two faced one another at the Marshfield tournament last month, with Toomey winning a wild 13-11 decision.

Late run does in lady hoopsters

MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In what was a tight game throughout, all it took to make the difference was 90 seconds of sublime basketball.

In Tuesday's South Shore League girls basketball tussle between Cohasset and Norwell, it was the visiting Clippers who made it happen, using a lightning-quick 7-0 run to break a 40-40 tie and eventually come away with a 51-44 victory.

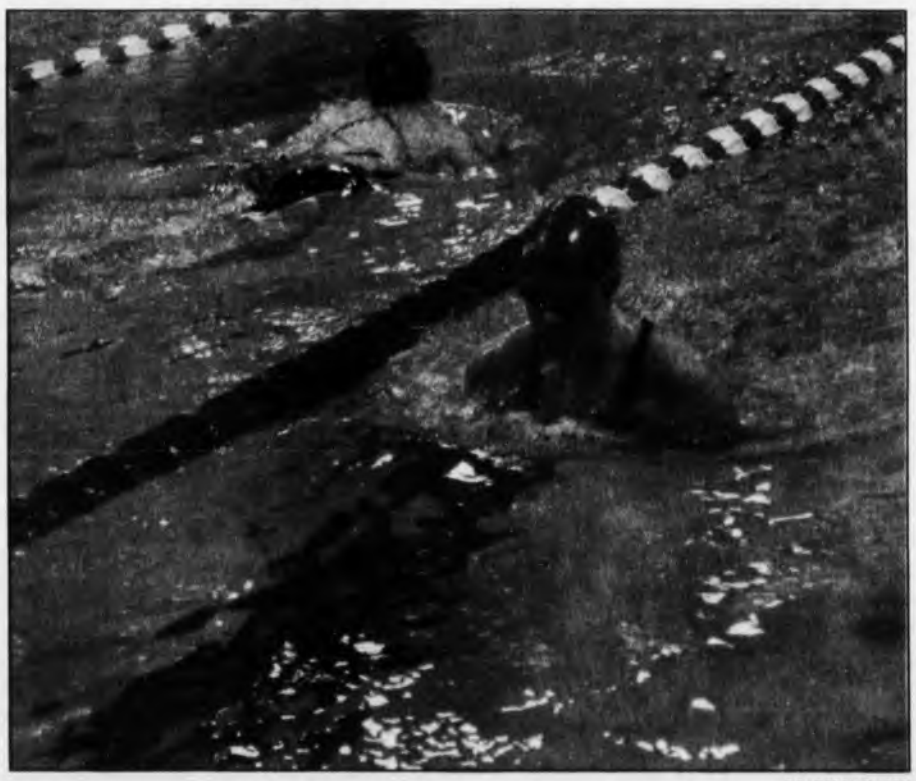
After Cohasset senior forward Lacey Richardson (12 points) knocked home a pair of free throws with 3:59 left to tie the game, it was all Norwell. Clippers senior forward Katelyn Stravinsky hit a three on the ensuing possession, and the girls in blue didn't look back.

The Clippers' defense came up with a stop at the other end, followed by a good drive into the lane by senior guard Liz Ropi (nine points, six assists), who found Stravinsky for an open 12-foot jumper on the baseline that hit nothing but net.

After another stop, a terrific outlet pass from Ropi found fellow senior Kristin Capaldo all alone for a lay-up, and Capaldo converted for two of her 11 points on the night. Cohasset called timeout after Capaldo's basket, but the damage had already been done.

Stravinsky went 4-for-4 from the line in the last 1:20 to put away the win. Stravinsky finished with a game-high 24 points (20 in the second half), to go with five rebounds, five blocks and five steals.

The defensive energy from Ropi and sophomore Taylor Aizenstadt in the second half also proved instrumental for Norwell (6-3 overall, 5-1 league). Ropi's pressure defense at halfcourt disrupted several Skippers possessions, while Aizenstadt had a pair of blocked shots that sparked the entire team, including one critical block with six minutes to go on what appeared to be a sure two points for Cohasset sophomore Kayla Farren.



The Skippers (4-5, 2-4) tried to neutralize Norwell's quickness advantage with their strength in the frontcourt. Sophomore center Sam Lehr was a major presence all night in the paint, and finished with team-highs of 13 points and 11 rebounds.

Sci-Coh swimmers breeze past Hingham

Scituate sophomore Allison Costa competes in a recent meet for the Sci-Coh swim team.

The Scituate/Cohasset swim team continued its winning streak last Tuesday as it easily defeated Hingham in Quincy.

The girls swam hard against their Hingham competitors and finished with a meet score of 95-80. Hingham proved to be no match for the boys either as they won, 80-45.

Freshman Megan Little swam an excellent meet. In the 200-yard Individual Medley, Little's time of 2:31.94 came within a mere half-second away from beating the old team record set by captain Mamme Daley last year.

Little also picked up two other first-place finishes. She won the 100-yard Freestyle with a time of 1:01.87, and her 400-yard Freestyle Relay team won with a time of 4:10.75. Ashley Scott, Sheelah Scott and Caitlin Mahoney joined Little on the relay team.

"I am very impressed with Megan's effort," coach Jon Fortin said. "She is only a freshman and she has never before swam the 200 I.M. before. Her performance was amazing."

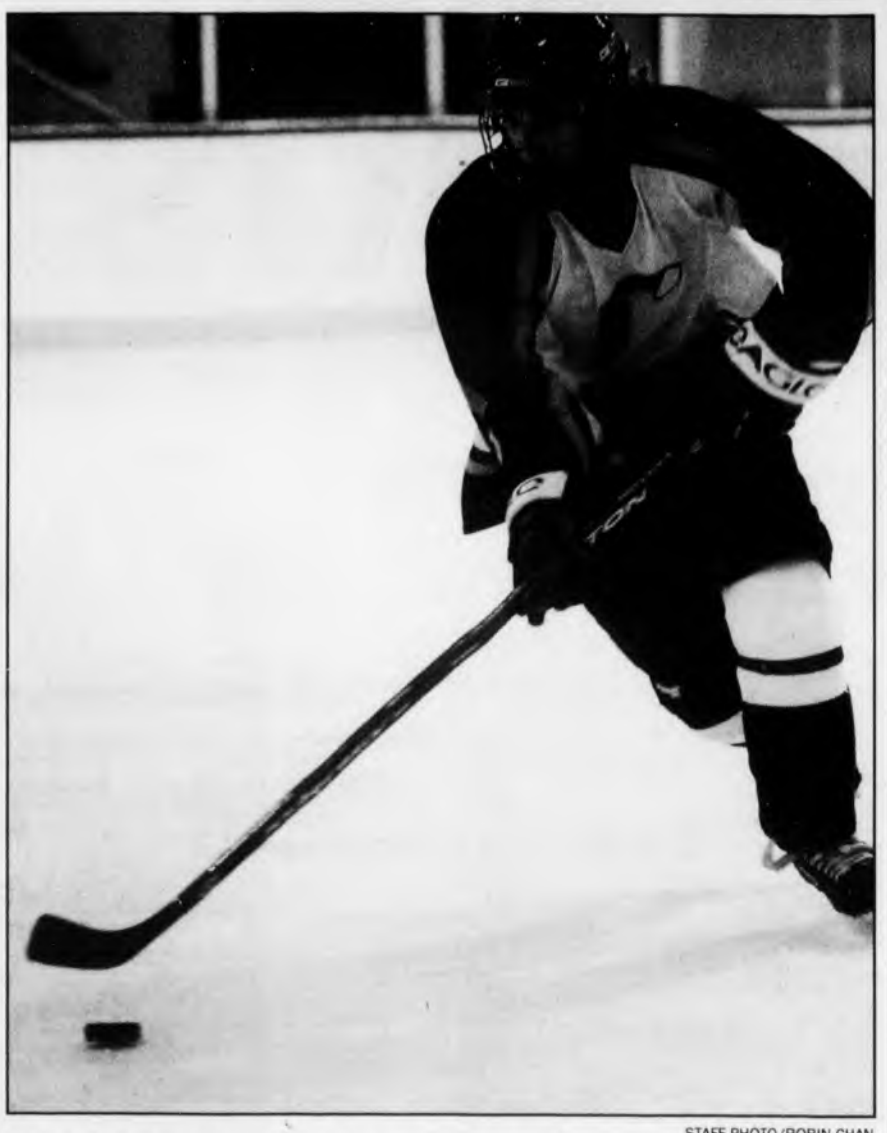
Cohasset sophomore Torey Hart broke her old team record in the 100-yard breaststroke as she placed first with a time of 1:18.94. Hart also finished first as part of the 200-yard freestyle relay team. Alyssa McCarthy, Katelyn Ryan, Alyssa Rogers and Hart wrapped up first place with a time of 1:58.47.

"In time, Hart will become one of the best breaststrokers in the league," Fortin said.

Three other girls also finished in the top two spots. In the 100-yard fly, Mahoney won with a time of 1:12.38, while Emily Mulcahy came in second with a time of 1:12.63. Mimi Mahoney took home first place in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 1:11.28.

On the boys side, three individuals and two relay teams turned in state final qualifying times. Brian McGuiness blazed past the field for first place in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:51.90. McGuiness also came in first in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 5:01.66. Jonny Drybanski secured first place in the 200-yard Individual Medley with a time of 2:09.61.

Rob Lilly took home first in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle races with times of 23.43 and 51.41 respectively. The 200-yard medley relay team of McGuiness, Mike Wall, Drybanski and Lilly finished first with a time of 1:51.90. The 400-yard freestyle relay team of Drybanski, Colin Conway, Lilly and McGuiness came in first with a time of 3:31.28.



Drybanski also picked up a first-place finish in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:03.37.

Senior co-captain Justin Damaso swam remarkably at Tuesday's meet. He finished first in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:14.31 and his 200-yard medley relay team picked up second with a time of 1:55.43. Damaso's time in the 100-yard breaststroke is only three seconds away from qualifying for sectionals. Sean Crowley, Conway and Brent Daley teamed with Damaso in the 200-yard medley relay race.

The performances of the divers, Scituate's Kate Seelig and Cohasset's Betsy Crawford, should not go unnoted. Crawford finished with 153.15 points and Seelig with 121.20. Both must score 160 points at least twice to qualify for state sectionals.

"Our team goals are simple: have fun and swim fast," Fortin said. "The one thing I am most proud of is the team's unity. There is no division amongst the schools. Win or lose I could care less. What matters most to me is that we remain a class act of responsible and respectful athletes that work together to reach for common goals. Our team displays this each day and I couldn't be more proud."

The squad travels to Pembroke today for a 3:30 p.m. meet. Next Tuesday, the team is on the road again as it heads to Randolph for a meet. Time is yet to be announced for the meet against the Blue Devils.

Senior forward Haley Haracz played well for Cohasset, and freshman forward Meredith Kelley played well off the bench and came up with a couple key baskets in the second half. Sophomore guard Carly Salerno also finished with five points and four assists.

The Clippers faced a challenged Wednesday night after the Mariner went to press, traveling to Hanover to take on an Indians team that was 8-2 heading into this week's action. The teams have already faced each other once this season, as Hanover earned a 69-65 win in the consolation game of the Lapels Holiday Classic over the winter break. Norwell hosts a much-improved Hull squad this Friday night at 6:30.

The Skippers, meanwhile, are on a five-game losing streak and hope to get back on track Friday night when they host Mashpee. That will be the second of a four-game homestand, with Cohasset hosting East Bridgewater next Tuesday and Abington next Friday.

Toomey shot in for a takedown and nearly got it, but Collins caught Toomey in a scramble and put the Cohasset sophomore on his back for a brief moment and a gave the Skippers a big scare. Collins managed to get the takedown, but Toomey reversed him quickly.

At this point, Toomey went for the victory and put Collins on his back for a pin at 1:35 seconds in the first period.

Sweeney called it the most intense league match the program has been a part of since it upset Rockland for the league championship in 2002.

"One of our big goals this year was to win the league championship," said Sweeney. "This team has worked really well together. Every match, it's someone different stepping up in a tight situation."

Carver kicked off the evening with a pin at 171, but Cohasset senior Nick Cambi came right back with a pin at 189. Cambi improved his record for the season to 22-2 with the victory.

The Crusaders came back with a pin at 215, but Cohasset answered again with Steve Hurlbut pinning Dan Confar with one second left in the second period of the 285-pound match. Hurlbut, wrestling up from his usual 215, tied the match at 12-all.

The Walsh twins of Carver, Matt and Nathan, both pinned their Skipper opponents at 103 and 112 as the visitors took a 24-12 lead. Cohasset senior Ryan McLellan than pinned Nate Szcepanek in a battle of two of the best Div. 3 119-pounders.

Carver went back on top, 30-18, with a pin at 125, but the home team closed the gap again with David Toomey's inspiring third period pin with the match score tied 4-4.

Carver got a pin at 135, but that would be the Crusaders' last points of the evening. At 140, Cohasset's Adam Smith overpowered his opponent en route to a second period pin. At 145, sophomore Mike Froio earned three team points with a 6-4 decision in a competitive bout.

At 152, Gannon Dorion got a first period pin, giving the Skippers their first lead of the night and setting the stage for the deciding Toomey-Collins showdown.

Sweeney said afterwards the matches involving McLellan, Hurlbut, Froio and the Toomeys all could have gone either way, and that those wins were the biggest factor in Cohasset being able to come out on top.

Cohasset (10-6 overall, 5-0 league) can win the SSL-Mayflower outright with a win Wednesday at Southeastern Regional. Before then, the Skippers host Wayland, Durfee and Whitman-Hanson for a 10 a.m. Saturday quad meet. Wayland is one of the state's best teams and will surely provide a major challenge for Cohasset.

Cohasset Tournament

The Skippers hosted their annual tournament last Saturday and finished fourth out of 10 teams. Marshfield edged out Duxbury for first, with Rockland, Cohasset and Scituate all very close to one another in spots 3-5.

Cohasset had three weight class champions on the day: McLellan (119), Smith (145) and Cambi (189). The wins for McLellan were especially significant, as they gave him 100 for his high school career. McLellan became only the 13th wrestler in the program's history to reach the 100-win mark.

Sweeney said 189 was the tournament's best division, and Cambi handled everything that came his way, including a tough 3-0 decision over Marshfield's Wendall Chipman in the semifinals.

Hurlbut finished second at 215, while Dorion and Tim Toomey took third at 152 and 160, respectively.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

5th grade Travel B runs into the Green Wave

Fresh off their week-old victory, the fifth grade boys squared off against a formidable Abington team Saturday night at the Weymouth Air Force Base. The last time these teams met, Cohasset was handed a sizeable defeat in a physical game that showcased Abington's strong passing and shooting skills.

This contest turned out to be another slugfest that went down to the wire. Ryan McKeon put Cohasset quickly ahead with a hot hand and ultimately led the team in the scoring with six points. After lighting it up early, McKeon began to draw a crowd, which allowed him to dish it out for some inside points by his teammates.

Doug Fitzgerald had a great night on both sides of the ball with a timely steal and two points, including a nice "Statue of Liberty" pick to set up Jack Stanganelli to drive to the hoop and pick up a shooting foul. Jack drained a clean free throw to put Cohasset ahead 9-4 with a minute left in the first half.

Jack Leffel made some great rebounds and terrific shots from the perimeter throughout the half. Big man Mark Rattenbury played well all night in a physical game to pick up three rebounds (and a foul or so). Mark finished the half on the highlight reel with a full court pass to McKeon for smooth lay-up to put Cohasset ahead 11-6.

The pressure picked up in the second half as the Green Wave gained some momentum. The referee's whistle was a blowin' throughout the half as both teams picked up close to a dozen fouls each. Timmy Cavanaro had a busy night to lead the team with seven rebounds and some great quick release passes to break the Abington press attack.

Clark Indek played well with some strong offensive rebounds to maintain possession and drain one of his own. Zach Coggins put on his arm extenders to lead the team in steals and picked up three rebounds and an assist. Chris Cohen was his usual disruptive force to cause turnovers and make Abington earn every point. Chris had two points and assist from his heroic hustle.

But the Wave kept rolling in and finally crashed on Cohasset shores with two minutes left in the game. It began with a collision with one of Abington's stout forwards on his way to the basket sending the Abington player out with a knee injury. The good news was that the injured player appeared to be ok on the sideline – the bad news was that Abington sent their transfer student from Hoosierville, Indiana to the line.

With Cohasset in front 13-12, Hoosierboy drained his two shots without a breaking a sweat to put the Wave ahead for good. Cohasset fought hard to the end and sent their opponent home with another level of respect for the kids from the coast.

Pembroke at Cohasset HS - Patriot League

On Sunday, the grade seven boys hosted Pembroke in a hard-fought game that saw Pembroke come all the way back from an early 12-point deficit to defeat Cohasset.

The boys were firing on all cylinders early in the first half, as they ran the floor and pressured Pembroke numerous turnovers and low-percentage shots. Cohasset built a 14-2 lead and maintained it through much of the first half. Christian Allard was the catalyst, as he ran the floor and drove the paint. Allard's penetration led to baskets for himself and several assists as he fed forwards Jamie Faber, Jay Salerno, Robbie Mahoney and Kyrel Jaundoo.

The front line did a good job early on of rebounding and contesting shots on the defensive end. Pat Kearney and Patrick MacCormack also contributed to the fast start. Kearney drove hard to the basket to get to the free throw line, and MacCormack also drove the lane to score once and dish off nicely to Morgan McCarthy for a foul-induced basket.

Pembroke began to solve the Cohasset running game near the end of the first half. They began to cover the passing lanes and pick up the Cohasset guards closer to half court, which led to less open scoring chances. Pembroke gradually took advantage of deft ball-movement and passing at the point guard position to find open shots in their half-court offense.

Chris Carpenter kept pace with a beautiful inside move, taking advantage of his quickness to get to the free-throw line and score. The guard play of Chris Lunde, Allard, Kearney and Carpenter kept Cohasset tied at halftime, 28-28.

Pembroke continued its good passing and they turned up the pressure defense to open the second half. They took over the lead, but Cohasset continued to play tough defensively. Pembroke maintained a 4-6 point lead for most of the remainder, and their solid defensive sets prevented the host from cutting into the lead.

5th graders travel to Abington

On Saturday night, the Cohasset grade five travel basketball team met Abington for the second time this season, hoping for a win this time.

Cohasset hit the court prepared and confident, jumping out to an early lead. Utilizing an aggressive zone defense, and a highly confident offense, Mark Brown led the rally with six easy points. Commanded by Brendan O'Connell and Mark McKinnon, Cohasset passed the ball crisply and frequently, looking like a well-coached orchestrated team.

Joe Buckley worked the inside to pull down rebound after rebound, with the defensive help of Connor Greene and Stephen Marr, all doing a superb job at boxing out the opponent. The first half ended with Cohasset leading 10-9.

Abington pulled ahead quickly in the second half to snap off seven unanswered points in the first three minutes; then never looked back. Abington ripped through Cohasset's zone defensive maze, forcing Coach O'Connell to transition to man-to-man coverage.

Cohasset struggled to regain its dominance with shot after shot, though nothing seemed to locate the hoop, finding themselves pointless for more than 11 minutes into the second half. Finally the bashing ended when Rocco Laugelle hit a free throw after being fouled.

Halfway through the second half, Chris Haggerty fell to the floor with a teammate-induced Charlie horse, only to find himself the cause of a 3-second violation while the referee ignored his injury. Late game efforts by Matt McCormack and Liam Burke weren't enough, with Liam fouling out with only nine seconds left in the game.

Final score 15–26, with Brown scoring eight points, Burke, O'Connell and McCormack with two points each, and one from Laugelle.

Struggles continue for CHS boys

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset was entering last Friday's game against Hull very confident and looking to avenge the heartbreaking double overtime loss in the Holiday Tournament.

Unfortunately, things were just not going the Skippers' way this night, as they lost 63-52 to their South Shore League rival.

Cohasset allowed three Hull players to score in double digits, including Corey Martin, who put up a game-high 18 points for the Pirates. Cohasset themselves had two double digit scorers, senior co-captain Justin Alexander (17 points) and junior Dave Snowdale, who had his season high with 10 points.

Although the Skippers trailed Hull by only five at the half, the Pirates were able to execute better down the stretch and hit big shots that forced Cohasset to start fouling early in order to try and climb back into the game.

Following the game, Skippers head coach Dorian Bryant said, "Our guys are figuring out our league is a good league; it's a very good Division 3 and 4 league."

The Skippers once again saw how good this South Shore League is after Tuesday's loss, 55-43, against the Norwell Clippers. Luckily for Cohasset, junior co-captain Pat McCarthy was able to play through his recent eye surgery and make yet another large contribution, leading the team with 19 points.

Right from the gun, Cohasset came out with fire in its eyes and hustling up and down the court. Unfortunately, Norwell just overpowered the Skippers and after the first five minutes, the Clippers were up 10-0 over Cohasset. Cohasset didn't even make a field goal until they had already given up 13 points.

As the half rolled down, Cohasset seemed to be getting it together, going on a little run of their own and pulling the game to within eight. Again, Norwell just overpowered Cohasset and at the half, they led 32-18.

As the game continued, nothing really changed and both teams were playing like they had all game and Norwell was still dominating. It wasn't until McCarthy nailed a three-pointer with 3:30 left in the game that Cohasset finally gained some confidence. Directly after, Alexander was able to power himself inside for a lay-up and suddenly Cohasset only trailed the Clippers by six points.

Despite playing very well on offense, Cohasset appeared to forget they had to rebound and in the end, they just gave up too many offensive rebounds, giving Norwell second chances and eventually allowing them to pull away for good.

Once again, Alexander had another big game for his team scoring 16 points. James Long of Norwell led all scorers with 26 points. Afterwards McCarthy said effort isn't the Skippers' problem, saying, "Everyone is doing their job; they're doing all they can for us out there."

Combined, McCarthy and Alexander contributed for 35 out of the teams 43 points against Norwell. About this, Bryant said, "We're trying to get that third scorer, but it just seems to be always only two scorers in double digits. We need more than just two double digit scorers a game and the team knows that."

Although this Skippers team looked like they were going to have a much different season than the past two, recently the team has struggled to find their groove. Both Bryant and McCarthy mentioned that they were hitting the tough part of the schedule with the Hull, Carver and Norwell, but that when they play these teams again their team will be ready.

This readiness will eventually lead to wins as long as the players are willing to do the work, said Bryant. Hopefully this is true for the Skippers, as they are falling farther and farther below a .500 record each loss. Tonight (Jan. 19) at 7, Cohasset will have another tough league game against Mashpee, in which the team travels all the way down to the Cape.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming spring baseball and softball season from now through Feb. 15.

Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, Jan. 20,, from 9 a.m. to noon, in the upper lobby of the High School gymnasium. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than Feb. 15.

Registration forms are available on the website: CYBSA.net or at Town Hall. Registrations that are received or postmarked after Feb. 15 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made on Feb. 15. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

The registration is for boys aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of April 30, 2007. The registration is for the girls softball aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of Dec. 31, 2006. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Junior league baseball and softball programs will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100.

The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the Farm league instructional division (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65.

Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please also be advised that effective the 2008 season, 12-year olds boys/girls must play at least one year in the American League to be an automatic selection for the Major League Baseball division. (This does not pertain to softball).

Also note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the Farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about player eligibility.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)383-1897.

Pan-Mass Challenge

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge opens through the PMC Web site, pmc.org, Tuesday, Jan. 16, at 9 a.m. Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5.

The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. This year's goal is to raise $27 million for the Jimmy Fund, which supports cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. To date, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for the world-renowned cancer research center.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route. Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. More than 200 PMC cyclists and volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more. For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this…

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you…you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

ADVERTISEMENT

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST…
YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES…

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS…

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING…BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

Back to earth after California college visit

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

It's 7:30 on Wednesday morning, and my Dad drops me off at school directly from Logan Airport. We spent the past few days visiting schools in California, where it's just a little bit warmer than it is here. Our flight landed at roughly 6:30 a.m., and I entered the building with nothing save the clothes on my back, a pen, and a winning smile. Luckily, I'm an insomniac so the time change didn't faze me. The trip was a success, especially since it was planned last Wednesday and we flew out Thursday night.

We spotted a few celebrities, including Rob Corddry, a Weymouth native and Daily Show alum, Lukas Haas and Tara Reid. Now that I'm back in school I need to stop stargazing and start getting caught up. The end of the semester is nigh! It's much easier to make statements of admonition than it is to take my own advice. Thanks to DVR I have one less excuse to avoid completing assignments, cutting the grand total of reasons I invent not to do my work down to two or three hundred. I'm extremely fond of a cartoon I saw in The New Yorker last year, with the caption: "No one's last words were 'I wish I'd done more homework.'" Even though most people of sound mind and body would agree with this statement, it doesn't change the fact that not doing homework hurts your grades.

Moving right along, here is this week's news.

- Congratulations to the following CHS students who were published in Teen Ink Magazine! Paul St. Pierre, Jeremy Simms, Lara Novak, Kyle Dattola-Harris, and Robert Silvia were all immortalized in print in the latest issue of this national publication.
- The Drama Club has begun rehearsing for this year's Drama Festival, a statewide competition. Last year the Drama Club progressed to the Semi-finals. This year's performance piece is "No Exit" by Jean-Paul Sartre.
- Tuesday morning the Superintendent's Administration Council met
- After school Tuesday High School faculty met in the library.
- Wednesday after school the Safe Schools Initiative — Bully Policy met in the Main Office.
- Wednesday night a Relay For Life meeting was held in the library.
- The School Committee met Wednesday night.
- Thursday after school the NEASC Follow Up Committee met.
- Tonight the Middle School Spelling Bee is in the Auditorium at 7 p.m.

The weekend is finally here, and some of us have the good fortune of sleeping in tomorrow. If you don't have that privilege, take some time out of your day tomorrow to compensate. I know I'll probably be doing both.

PAC to meet Feb. 6

"Autism Spectrum Disorders: Overview of the Newest Research in the Field," will be the topic of presenter Lesley Maxwell, on Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m., at Osgood School, behind Deer Hill School, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset. The workshop, sponsored by PSO/PAC, is free.

Autism is a field of research that is advancing rapidly. There are many new findings as researchers, doctors and educators work with families to find the cause of autism and to understand how best to assist individuals with autism and their families. This talk will offer a practical overview of current research and findings in the field of autism spectrum disorders for families and educators.

Cohasset Parents Advisory Council has joined with the South Shore PAC Network to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. For information, visit southshorepac@comcast.net.

Applications should be returned to the Student Services office, 143 Pond St., no later than Friday, Feb. 16. The lottery will take place Monday, Feb. 26, and families will be notified by mail that week. A deposit of $75 is required to hold the space. Tuition is currently $1,500 for the year – four days of 2.5-hour sessions each school week – but is subject to change by the School Committee.

Home schoolers for science

South Shore Home Learners begin their third Monday Fun Day session Jan. 22, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset.

Monday Fun Day activities include the Mad Science hands-on workshop, Discovering the Masters art class, Chess Club, Games Club and Story Time Arts and Crafts. Home schooling children and their parents are encouraged to spend time exploring the Museum, Library and the playground with their friends. The Museum is a wonderful multi-age space with something for everyone to enjoy.

Mad Science is the newest addition to the Monday Fun Day schedule. Bugs, inventions, optical illusions and space will be among the topics explored in this session.

Monday Fun Day Session 3 will run from Jan. 22 to March 5.

For information about Monday Fun Day or home education on the South Shore, contact southshorehomelearners@comcast.net. You can also join the South Shore Home Learners Yahoo Group or attend their meetings every third Thursday of the month. Contact SSHL for time and place.

South Shore Home Learners is a not-for-profit organization committed to strengthening and encouraging homeschooling families on the South Shore.

Inly School celebrates Montessori Centennial

Throughout the month of January, Montessori schools around the world are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Montessori education movement and its founder. On Jan. 6, 1907, Dr. Maria Montessori opened the first "Casa dei Bambini" (Children's House) in an inner-city neighborhood in Rome. Today Montessori is the fastest growing education philosophy in the Western world. Roughly one million families send their children to Montessori schools in North America, with some 100,000 new enrollments annually.

Inly School in Scituate marked the occasion with a school-wide assembly to honor the legacy and teachings of Dr. Montessori.

Inly School in Scituate marked the occasion with a school-wide assembly to honor the legacy and teachings of Dr. Montessori. An independent school with a progressive, Montessori-based curriculum, Inly's mission is "to inspire and nurture children to become global citizens by embracing the philosophy and methods of Dr. Maria Montessori, in harmony with other compatible and innovative practices."

A slide presentation on the history of the education movement juxtaposed black-and-white photos of early Montessori classrooms in Nigeria and Lithuania with Inly classrooms today. Remarkably, it showed students using the same time-tested Montessori manipulative and materials. In addition, Children's House (ages 3—6) students sang a song about Dr. Montessori, Lower Elementary (grades 1-3) students read from books they created themselves about their school, and Middle Schoolers (grades 7—8) performed a skit about the importance of inclusion. Children's House students also held a special ceremony to dedicate their flower and vegetable garden to Dr. Montessori, and to pledge their stewardship of the Earth.

Hallways throughout the school are decorated this month with children's pictures illustrating "Peace and Friendship" as well as "Freedom and Responsibility."

Peace Studies — Many Montessori schools have a substantial peace studies program; in others, like Inly, it is incorporated into an integrated curriculum. The peace studies component teaches children how to resolve conflict and develop compassion and tolerance for others, including those of other cultures, races, and backgrounds. Many Children's House classrooms also feature a "peace table," a designated place where children can go to work out their differences. These traditions carry on in the name of Dr. Montessori, who was nominated three times for the Nobel Peace Prize.

For more information about Inly School, see www.inlyschool.org. To learn more about Montessori schools, visit the Montessori Foundation at www.montessori.org or the American Montessori Society at www.amshq.org.

OBITUARIES

Phoebe M. Sceery

Gifted artist and adventurer

Phoebe Malmfeldt Sceery, 86, died January 5, 2007, at home.

Raised in West Hartford, Conn., she was the daughter of architect, Carl Malmfeldt and granddaughter of a Swedish cabinet maker who emigrated to Connecticut from Malmo. Her mother, Louine Ford, came from a long line of sea captains and their hearty wives who sailed from Searsport, Maine. Mrs. Sceery was educated at Colby Sawyer College in New London, N.H. and Katherine Gibbs School in Boston. A gifted artist with a great knack for design, she took classes in painting and sculpture at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts throughout her life.

Mrs. Sceery was among the first women trained as a draftsman during World War II. Later, she held a number of jobs as a medical secretary and medical artist including her work for the first psychoanalyst in Hartford and for the founder of the Retina Foundation in Boston. Modest, she reported that she wasn't much of a secretary. Rather, as she had a helpful and energetic nature, she told more often of her adventures as a beloved personal assistant to her employers and their families.

She married Robert T. Sceery, MD, a pediatrician, Aug. 6, 1949. In 1953 they moved to Cohasset, where they raised their six children and grandparented 17 more. They lived happily in Cohasset until their deaths.

Devoted to their family and committed to their community, they had a large circle of friends. A lively hostess and caring friend, Mrs. Sceery was known for her quiet strength, for her generosity and kindness, her ardent, freely shared opinions and her curiosity and willingness to embrace new people.

She had an adventurous spirit. At 70, caught without a ride, she hitchhiked across Nova Scotia to join friends for a sailing trip down east. Widowed at age 84, after 55 years of marriage, she was no longer able to enjoy her own adventures but still delighted in those of her grandchildren and friends.

She was the wife of the late Dr. Robert Sceery. She leaves her daughters, Lucy Clode, Beth Rockoff and her husband Mark, of Hingham, Katie Trumper and her husband Mark, of Edmonds, Wash., Amy Sceery and her husband, Neil Crane of Woodbridge, Conn., and Mara Morris and her husband, Greg of Winnetka Ill; her son, Michael Sceery and his wife, Helene of Cohasset; her sister, Eleanora Church of Rochester, N.Y.; her brothers, John Malmfeldt of Seattle, Wash., and James Malmfeldt of Devens; and 17 grandchildren ranging in age from 4 to 27 years.

Interment will be private. A service celebrating her life will be held at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, Friday, Feb. 9, at 2 p.m.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Landmine Survivors Network, 1420 K Street NW, Suite 650, Washington, D.C., 20005.

Tiger Cub Scouts help needy children

Deliver supplies and volunteer at Cradles to Crayons

Jon Arnold, left, and Melissa Tierney, right, along with other parents, got into the volunteer spirit at Cradles to Crayons while making sure the puzzles and games had all their pieces before being sent to needy children.

During a tour of the warehouse, Jim Stevens, left, president of Cradles to Crayons in Quincy, holds up a toy while explaining to the Cub Scouts that the average age of a homeless person is eight-years-old. One in seven children go to bed hungry; one in five lives in poverty; and there are 25,000 homeless children in Massachusetts.

Staff photos by Robin Chan

Josh Rosen of Cub Scout Pack 38 washes some of the toys and supplies so they would look like new at Cradles to Crayons, a nonprofit that helps needy children. The scouts also delivered and unloaded the supplies and helped sort.

Alexander Arnold, who helped spearhead the toy and supplies collection for Cradles to Crayons with his family, helps transfer toys from one of the seven cars that brought the donated goods to the organization.

'Venus' rising

Venus (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Valerie (Vanessa Redgrave) spends a happy visit with her ex, Maurice (Peter O'Toole).

Seven-time Academy Award nominee Peter O'Toole, whose performance in "Lawrence of Arabia" (1962) may be responsible for my career, proves genius is, if not eternal, lifelong. At 74, he's being touted as a Best Actor Academy Award nominee again for his performance in "Venus." Take that, Clint.

O'Toole is Maurice, an aged, once-"beautiful" British leading man of stage and screen. A cancer survivor, Maurice is at the stage in life when various ailments are vying to kill him. His marriage fell apart ages ago, and he and his ex-wife (Vanessa Redgrave) behave more like siblings. His children are grown and gone. His life is a flat, dull routine between prostate exams. But he still has a keen eye for the ladies.

Maurice helps care for his old friend and colleague Ian (veteran actor Leslie Phillips), a fellow actor terrorized by a vulgar, voracious grandniece named Jessie (newcomer Jodie Whittaker), who has moved in with him.

Jessie, a cockney Lolita in pink sweatpants, consumes Ian's food and booze, but otherwise ignores him. Randy Maurice takes an interest in her, in large part because he is still attracted to those two absolutes of human existence: youth and beauty.

In a comic variation on a theme of Death and the Maiden, Maurice takes Jessie, whom he nicknames Venus in reference to the goddess of love, out for drinks. Afterward, he gropes her in the cab. Maurice's medication may have made him impotent, but he's game.

"I am a scientist of the female heart," he declares. He's also the engineer of a variety of other parts.

Svengali-esque Maurice then takes Jessie to the National Portrait Gallery and gets her a job as a life model for a painting class. He buys her clothes and falls in love with her in spite of the gaping difference in their ages.

"Love leads to foolishness and despair," he observes. But it's glorious, still.

Written by Hanif Kureishi and directed by Roger Michell ("The Mother"), "Venus" is a marvelous showcase for O'Toole, whose reputation as "a carouser" and whose performance in a legendary 1980 production of "Macbeth" are attributed to Maurice. Maurice rails against "bloody Peter Hall" — the legendary English stage director — and the Hydra-headed humiliations of old age. As an elderly TV actor, he has "cornered the market on corpses." Near the film's end, Maurice and Ian visit St. James Covent Garden Church, the "Actors Church," in a fitting tribute to their thespian predecessors.

If you cannot resist films in which great actors play actors — consider Laurence Olivier in "The Entertainer," Ronald Colman in "A Double Life," or Albert Finney in "The Dresser" — you cannot resist "Venus" or O'Toole. He is glorious, still.

"Venus" contains profanity and sexual situations.

Theater review

'The Cherry Orchard' is vintage Huntington

By R. Scott Reedy

Lopakin (Will LeBow) appeals to Madame Ranevskaya (Kate Burton) to consider a way out of debt in the Huntington Theatre Company's brand-new production of "The Cherry Orchard" directed by Nicholas Martin. "The Cherry Orchard" runs through Feb. 4, at the Huntington's mainstage, the Boston University Theatre.

As the Huntington Theatre Company's current production of Anton Chekhov's "The Cherry Orchard" opens, Russian aristocrat Madame Lyubov Andreevna Ranevskaya is returning to her Moscow estate from Paris, where she has been living a freewheeling life of extravagance in an attempt to escape the sadness that engulfed her after the drowning of her young son. Back home - her daughter Anya and governess, Carlotta, in tow - Ranevskaya soon sees firsthand that her brother, Gaev, adopted daughter, Varya, and the household staff are losing their struggle to maintain the once-grand mansion that has been mortgaged to the hilt to support Ranevskaya's lavish lifestyle.

Ranevskaya's homecoming is heralded by family and friends alike and with the luminous Kate Burton in the role, it is easy to understand their happiness. Some of the finest actresses of the 20th century have played this part on stage and film, including Uta Hagen, Irene Worth, Helen Hayes, Eva LeGalliene, and Judi Dench, and Burton proves their worthy successor. Memorable as the title character in the Huntington's "Hedda Gabler" in Boston and later on Broadway just a few seasons back, Burton once again commands the stage. As the owner of the play's titular cherry orchard, Burton deftly captures her character's blend of gracious charm and heedlessness. Ranevskaya is a complex woman, whom perhaps even those closest to her will never really understand. While they may never truly know her, they are also unable to look away from her. She is the center of their world, all elegance and grandeur even as everything around her has begun to crumble.

With options to save the estate laid out before them, the family proceeds to do nothing and ultimately the estate is sold and they leave to the sounds of the grand old house being shuttered and the beloved cherry orchard cleared. Written in 1904, the same year that Chekhov died of tuberculosis at 44, the story explores the futile attempts of the aristocracy to maintain its status and the related missteps of the rising bourgeoisie as it struggles to find its footing on a shifting playing field.

As it always does, time is marching on whether Ranevskaya is ready or not. When the ambitious, successful merchant Lopakin - the son of a serf who once worked the land and now perhaps the wealthiest character in the piece - presents a plan for selling the cherry orchard in ordèr to save the remainder of the estate, Ranevskaya's decision to ignore the plan represents a turning point from which there is no turning back. Perfectly played by respected Boston actor Will Lebow, Lopakin is just the kind of newly minted Russian success story who can no longer be ignored by the lumbering landowners whose vast acres of property often isolate them from reality.

Chekhov wrote "The Cherry Orchard" as a comedy. Konstantin Stanislavski directed the Moscow Art Theatre premiere as a tragedy, however, and subsequent productions have combined elements of comedy and tragedy. In choosing to direct this Chekhov classic for the Huntington's 25th anniversary season, Artistic Director Nicholas Martin turned to Tony Award-winning playwright Richard Nelson ("James Joyce's The Dead") for a new translation that captures the comedy and tragedy that infuses the play with its particular sanguine sadness.

Joining Burton and Lebow are a talented company of New York stage veterans including Mark Blum, Joyce Van Patten, and Dick Latessa, Boston favorite Jeremiah Kissel, and also Robert Bonotto, Jessica Dickey, Jeremy Beck, Sarah Hudnut, Gene Farber, Patrick Lynch, and Enver Gjokaj.

Latessa, a Tony Award winner for "Hairspray," is particularly affecting as the octogenarian servant who finds himself alone in the boarded-up mansion as the sound of cherry trees being chopped down is heard in the distance. Time does indeed march on with some people simply left behind.

The beautiful scenic design by Ralph Funicello, Robert Morgan's handsome costuming, and atmospheric lighting by Donald Holder, round out this top-shelf production that is as vintage Huntington as it gets.

(The Huntington Theatre Company will present "The Cherry Orchard" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Feb. 4. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.)

All reviews by James Verniere, unless otherwise noted

Artist and writer Beatrix Potter (Renee Zellweger) happily gets just the right brush stroke for one of her paintings in 'Miss Potter'.

CHILDREN OF MEN (A-)

"Children of Men" is a terrific and haunting example of the end-of-the-world tales. It's 2027, and human beings have ceased to reproduce. In Britain, where the story is set, TV viewers mourn the news of the murder of "Baby Diego," the youngest person on earth. Theodore Faron (Clive Owen), a Scotch-soaked journalist with connections in high places, gets involved with a resistance movement at the behest of the mysterious femme fatale Julian (Julianne Moore). In these bleak, war-torn times, "Children of Men" might be the most relevant film of the year outside of the several documentaries about the fighting in Iraq. (Rated R)

DREAMGIRLS (B)

Like everyone else who's seen this colorful screen version of the 1980s stage musical, I can say that a star is born in the film, and her name is Jennifer Hudson. "Dreamgirls" tells the bewigged and sequin-drenched story of a 1960s-era girl group resembling The Supremes. It features Beyonce Knowles as the Diana Ross-like Deena Jones; Hudson in the show-stopping role of big-boned singer Effie White; and Jamie Foxx as a Berry Gordy-like enterpreneur who turns a Cadillac dealership into a Motor City-based, Motown-ish industry. The film has many of the same weaknesses critics identified in the stage version. But Hudson's rendition of "And I Am Telling You I Am Not Going" caused an outbreak of spontaneous applause at the screening I attended. Knowles is not upstaged entirely by Hudson and has her own spotlight moment belting out the tune "Listen." (Rated PG-13)

ERAGON (B)

"Eragon," or "Lord of the Wings," is to "Lord of the Rings" what tofu is to red meat. It's not the same by a long shot, but it's not bad and can be surprisingly tasty. Based on a 2003 novel by the now 23-year-old Christopher Paolini, the film boasts four screenwriters and is a weirdly Teutonic mix of Tolkien, "Star Wars" and "The Wizard of Oz." The "only hope" for the future is Eragon (18-year-old, English-born posterboy Edward Speleers), an "ordinary farmboy" who is, unknown to himself, a Dragon Rider. A mysterious opalescent, ovoid "stone" Eragon finds in the woods turns out to be an egg, out of which comes the soon full-grown, blue dragon Saphira (voice of Rachel Weisz). Eragon must get himself and Saphira to the rebels and join them in their resistance. "Eragon" features spectacular Alpine scenery, impressive flying and battle sequences and generally looks fabulous. If you're in the mood for a heaping helping of "Lord of the Rings" hash, you could do a lot worse than "Eragon." (Rated PG)

FREEDOM WRITERS (B+)

As Erin Gruwell, a middle class teacher trying to capture the attention of her gangbanger students, Hilary Swank is downright luminous and amazing. She is a rebel in lipstick and tasteful pumps. She never lets her fear dissuade her from her self-appointed mission to teach. Gruwell has her charges write diaries, which they read to the class. Published in 1999 as "The Freedom Writers Diary" with Gruwell as editor, these personal testaments are effectively used. Bring four hankies. You're going to need them. (Rated PG-13) — Stephen Schaefer

MISS POTTER (A-)

From the quintessentially British Bridget Jones to the quintessentially British Beatrix Potter, Texas-born Renee Zellweger is colonizing Great Britain in reverse. "Miss Potter" is a delightful look at the life of early 20th century children's book author and feminist role-model extraordinaire Beatrix Potter (Zellweger). Unlike many films about artists, "Miss Potter" depicts Potter at work. We see her sharpen her pencil, prepare her paper, paint brushes and watercolors and get down to it. A surprise to her publishers, Potter's work becomes a sensation at a time when it was thought disreputable for a respectable woman to work at all and when an unmarried woman was expected to fade into the William Morris wallpaper. Viewers will fall in love with "Miss Potter." (Rated PG)

THE DEPARTED (A)

A great Boston-set crime drama and a "GoodFellas"-like return to form for Martin Scorsese, "The Departed" is a wonderful example of genre filmmaking and another triumph for Jack Nicholson in the Whitey Bulger-like role of gang lord Francis Costello. Sent by Costello to the police academy to be his mole, Colin (Matt Damon) is promoted to Boston's elite anti-crime unit. At the same time, troubled Billy Costigan (Leonardo DiCaprio) has chosen to become a policeman in spite of his family's many felons. What's great about "The Departed" is its riotously profane dialogue, fabulous cast and writer William Monahan's relevant references to the city's

Sampling the delights of Malta

A CNC reporter travels farther afield

By Stephanie Foster
SFOSTER@CNC.COM

Malta is a find. Azure blue skies are filled with puffy clouds. Roads are lined with flowers, pine trees and palms. The Mediterranean water is clear enough to scuba dive in; breezes are light and shores sandy. It is truly an enchanted island.

But few people are aware of it. The reason may be that Malta is rarely in the news. I didn't know much about Malta until my friend, Joan, and I made reservations with Grand Circle Travel for a 15-day tour in December.

We soon discovered Malta was an independent republic with its own currency and language. Fortunately just about everyone speaks English and is polite and helpful.

When I was at a bank to change dollars to Maltese money, a native tipped me off to a better rate down the street. But don't expect any bargains in Malta. The exchange rate is dismal – $1,000 gets you 333 Maltese lira (called pounds). I found it hard to get it through my head that a one-lira coin represents $3.30, not $1. But I learned quickly after over-tipping a few times.

After paying almost $30 each for lunch in a cafeteria, Joan and I economized by smuggling fruit, cheese and bread from the breakfast buffet at our hotel. We justified our shameful behavior by noting we weren't the only ones trying to avoid an expensive lunch.

Our group of 15 came from all over. Most were middle-aged couples. But there were also three people traveling alone and a pair of cousins we nicknamed "the guys." Joan and I were called "the girls."

STAFF PHOTOS BY STEPHANIE FOSTER

Fishing is an important industry for the Maltese, who maintain colorful boats called luzzu ships decorated with the Eye of Isis to ward off evil.

Buildings, walls and walkways are made of native limestone giving a characteristic appearance to the villages. Laundry is often hung out to dry on balconies or roofs.

Our step-aboard guide was a native and shared her passion for all things Maltese. She seemed to know the history of every town, church and work of art, and that is saying a lot, considering how many times Malta was invaded and conquered. Plus, its history dates to before Stonehenge in England, and some of the megalithic structures are older than the Pyramids.

We traveled in a large comfortable bus, and explored the cities by foot. We saw medieval citadels, walled cities, Roman town houses, ancient palaces, and magnificent churches. There is even an armory filled with real armor from the Knights of St. John.

The Maltese appear to live comfortably. There are no children begging in the streets and no apparent crime. One can travel about freely. But I did have one moment of anxiety. I was in a restroom in a deserted area and couldn't get the lock on the stall to unlatch. The stall wall was floor to ceiling so I couldn't scale it. I was locked in. My group was boarding the bus and there was no one around. My hands began to sweat. I rattled the door over and over. Then tried to calm myself. Finally, after endless minutes, I got it open.

One day, we divided into three groups and had a home hosted lunch. Our group enjoyed the hospitality of a retired banker. We toured the home, met the family and ate a home-cooked meal. They were curious about us as well and asked us to point out our hometown on a map of the states.

The vegetable soup was full of flavor and served with local bread. (Always order the soup in Malta.) A salad of fresh tomatoes, olives, capers, lettuce and cheese was also served, and wine liberally poured. Then, the main course arrived – a rolled beef dish with cabbage and potatoes.

Everyone complimented the chef. Meanwhile, the food had a hauntingly familiar fragrance. It reminded me of something I couldn't put my finger on. It was from my childhood, a time when I had a dog. It reminded me of dog food. Yum turned to yuk. I took a wee taste. Not that I've ever eaten dog food. I laughed at the thought. But I couldn't get another morsel down. My throat was cranked shut. Everyone else's plates were polished clean. I pushed the food around trying to make it look smaller.

It got worse. The dessert consisted of cake, Jell-O, whipped cream, canned peaches, pineapple, green maraschino cherries and custard. This was followed by rich, black coffee and a cannoli stuffed with ricotta cheese. I was able to wrap the pastry in my napkin and stuff it into my pocket. I couldn't bear to insult them by leaving more food behind. We rolled out of there. The next day I read a list of local specialties and the word "stallion" jumped out at me. Horsemeat. I had eaten Old Nelly for lunch.

Mostly, the food is Italian with Spanish, Greek, British, Sicilian and Moorish overtones. When in doubt, have the pasta, a wonderful experience in itself. The pizza, too, is fabulous with a delicious crust covered with fresh olives, capers, artichokes and vegetables. No canned tomato sauce here.

Cats are everywhere. Fishermen feed them minnows; residents put out food and water. They are working cats but some are privileged to live indoors as pets. One devotee in a little town created a cat park, a small green area outfitted with cat beds, perches and toys. About 15 cats seemed to live there peacefully. A sign told us donations for their welfare could be left in a mailbox across the street.

On the nearby island of Gozo, where we spent a night, every room seemed to come with a cat. One couple carelessly opened their door and ended up with a feline sleeping on their bed.

The highlight of the trip was a festa on the last weekend. The Feast of the Immaculate Conception was celebrated in the little town of Cospicua with few tourists around. We got there just as the glittering statue of "the Lady" was carried through the streets. A searchlight followed the procession.

The men of the village carried her on their shoulders, swaying from side to side under the weight. Her face was beautifully carved and full of compassion as she looked down on the singing crowd.

Bells rang. Fireworks exploded. Men in the street stretched their arms up, imploring and giving thanks. For the first time, I didn't have my camera with me. But the vision will remain forever.

The nearby island of Gozo, which can be reached by ferry, has two Neolithic temples that date to 4000 B.C.

At a glance: Republic of Malta

Topography: Mediterranean island, mostly hilly farmland, 316 square kilometers (about double the size of Washington, D.C.)
Capital: Valletta
Religion: Overwhelmingly Roman Catholic
Population: 400,000
Language: Maltese
History: Megalithic temples date to 3200 B.C. but most people know Malta as home to the ancient Knights of the Order of St. John. The Holy Roman Emperor offered Malta to the knights in 1565 for an annual payment of one Maltese falcon. The knights prospered, building Valletta, one of the first planned cities in Europe. The island was protected by the knights until Napoleon drove them out in 1798.

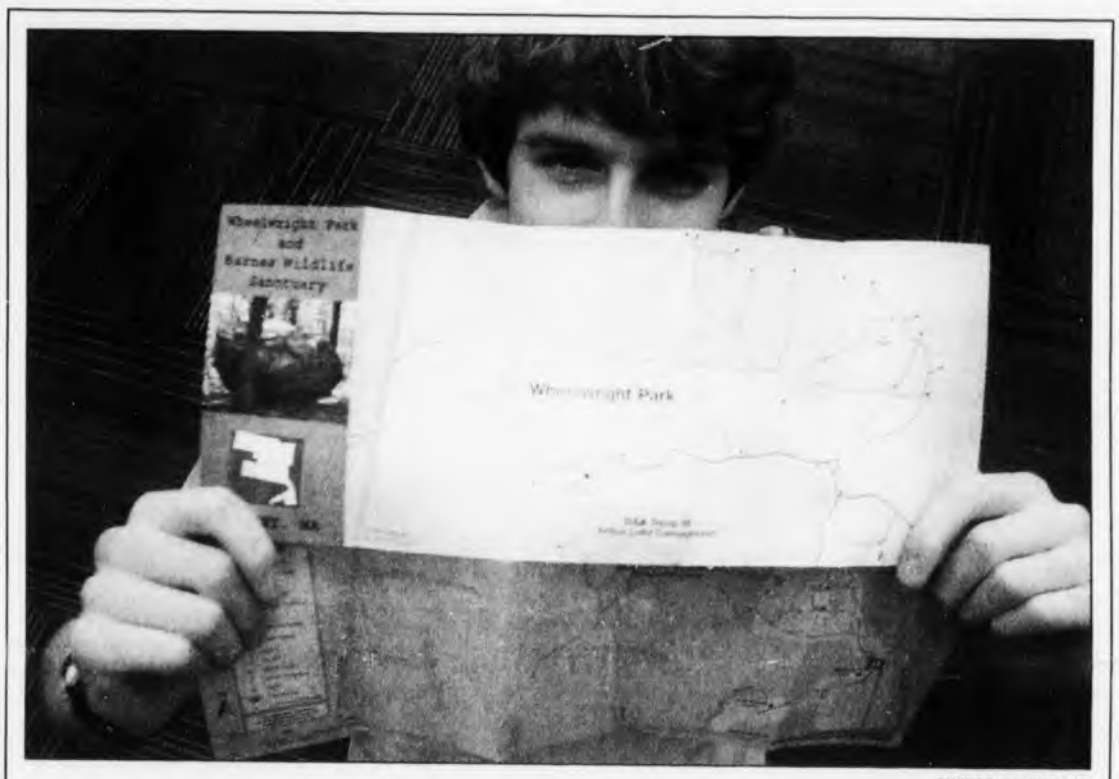
Avalon clears appeals court hurdle

But developer still seeking sewer hookup

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The 200-unit Avalon apartment complex planned for off Route 3A (across from Good Sport) may have cleared a major hurdle.

The Appeals Court has affirmed the decision of the Land Court that the Cohasset Water Commission does not have "standing" to challenge the comprehensive permit for the project.



Standing is a legal term meaning having the right to initiate a lawsuit.

The decision on the appeal was issued Jan. 19, nearly 18 months after the legal process with Avalon and the Water Commission started and more than three years after the ZBA voted to grant the project a comprehensive permit which included plans for an on-site wastewater treatment system.

The Water Commission said the project would contribute to groundwater pollutants and adversely impact water quality in Lily Pond, the town's water supply and would likely increase the cost of supplying water to Cohasset residents.

However, the Appeals Court did not address the pollution issue, only that the Water Commission is not a "person

Eagle soars in Wheelwright Park

CHS sophomore uses GPS to track points

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

August Oddleifson is blazing a new trail in the town of Cohasset — literally. Over the past year, he spent many days in the uncharted woods at Wheelwright Park, and has come out with a new detailed trail map of the area for everyone to enjoy.

August completed the map as his Eagle Scout project, which is the highest honor a Boy Scout can receive. Now 16 years old and a sophomore at Cohasset High School, August has participated in Scouts since he was very young, and with this project will become an Eagle Scout for life. Scouts must complete their Eagle Scout projects before they turn 18 and August is way ahead of the curve.

Copies of the map are available at both entrances to Wheelwright Park, off North Main Street and Forest Avenue. In addition, August and fellow members of Troop 28 cleared a new path, which is now also included on the map, and provides one more trail to explore.

August used a Global Positioning System (GPS) device to track the points in the park. He explained as he walked, the equipment communicated with a satellite, which orbits the earth and was able to triangulate his location. He was then able to upload the data to his home computer.

"I had to walk each trail several times," he said, and then record the average of all the signals, to ensure the most accurate map. He said every time he walked the routes, there were slightly different coordinates given. He added he borrowed the mapping software from the Center for Student Coastal Research, which made his project possible.

Team leaders

Sports captains play by new set of rules

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Being the captain of a high school sports team is a big responsibility. Athletic Director Ron Ford would like to drive that point home with a new selection process that will have students nominated by peers, then interviewed to be sure they have what it takes to be a leader.

Ford said he has been working on forming a set of standards for captains that ensure those leading their teammates are solid role models. He said he has formed a "Captain's Council" which includes both adults and students, which compiled a rough draft of the standards for captains. The draft was sent to the coaches, which made revisions, then school administrators, who also made revisions, and finally to the School Improvement Council. "It's been through many reviews," Ford said.

Ford said while captains used to be named at the end-of-season banquet, he feels the anticipation of who will be captain followed by disappointment by those not named captain took away from the celebration. He said through the new process, the position would be turned into one "of honor and not a popularity contest."

"At the end of every season, I would like students to bring forward their recommendations for captain and they will be brought before the Captain's Council," Ford said, which will include him, other coaches, teachers and some students. The process will not be taken lightly, as it will span for roughly one month and each candidate will be carefully considered.

Cohasset Village articles won't be on the spring Warrant

Proposed zoning changes to wait for consultant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen has decided not to bring forward a set of articles to the March 31 Annual Town Meeting that could change zoning in the downtown area.

The articles were submitted by the Economic Development Committee as a revised version of articles presented to and defeated by the fall Special Town Meeting. They would allow for the development of a new village business district with residential units on the second floor of downtown buildings, which the EDC believes could both increase tax revenue to the town and help keep the downtown area viable.

Due to opposition by the Planning Board, both the Planning Board and the EDC were invited to meet with the Board of Selectmen Monday. At times the conversation was heated, with Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer wielding the gavel on Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt, who is passionate about following the direction given by Town Meeting to hire a consultant to study the downtown area before making permanent zoning changes. By the end of the meeting the Selectmen agreed with the Planning Board that now is not the time to bring the articles forward.

By the end of the meeting the Selectmen agreed with the Planning Board that now is not the time to bring the articles forward.

The EDC cannot put articles on the Warrant itself and would either need the Planning Board or Board of Selectmen to do it for them. However, the EDC could have collected resident signatures and brought the matter forward as a citizens' petition, which must be placed on the Warrant.

The EDC is charged with coming up with recommendations for the Board of Selectmen to help increase revenue coming into the town. EDC Chairman Peter Brown explained the articles were submitted again solely as an idea to be considered. He said at this time last year, the EDC brought forth 20 recommendations and generated six articles for the Town Meeting Warrant.

Brown said his committee had not intended to "ruffle anyone's feathers," but thought it was an honest effort to do something positive for the downtown area. He said even though he understands the Planning Board was not happy with the submittal, if there is

Resident reports debit card fraud

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Our detectives have been in touch with the on-line companies to determine where the items were sent and ID a suspect."
— Chief James Hussey

A Cohasset resident went to the police station at about 8 p.m. Tuesday (Jan. 16) to report that his debit card number had been stolen and was being used to make purchases over the Internet.

Chief Hussey said the man's card was not stolen but someone had apparently obtained access to the card number to make multiple purchases totaling about $3,000 over a three-day period.

"Our detectives have been in touch with the on-line companies to determine where the items were sent and ID a suspect," Hussey said.

Hussey said, while this may not have been the case with this incident, people should make sure they shred or destroy debit and credit card receipts in such a manner to make it impossible for someone to obtain the card number from the receipt. He explained with the Internet, it is not necessary to have the actual card for someone's account to be used fraudulently — only the card number and expiration date are required.

No forced entry

Police are investigating an apparent burglary at Mulaney's fish market on Route 3A was reported at about 9:15 a.m., Monday (Jan. 15). Chief James Hussey said there were no signs of forced entry but a large amount of cash was taken from the store. The matter in under investigation by Cohasset police detectives, he said. Hussey did not provide further details citing the ongoing nature of the investigation.

Hit in driveway

A local octogenarian was not severely injured when an open car door hit him in his driveway, Chief Hussey said. Hussey said the driver of the car was apparently looking over her shoulder to back out and did not see him. The door on the passenger side struck the man who is 86. He was taken to the hospital with non-life threatening injuries, Hussey said. The incident occurred at 6:10 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 16).

Parking lot crash

Police were called to the scene of a parking lot collision at about 9:30 a.m. on Thursday (Jan. 18) at 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. The operator of a 1998 Ford backed out of a parking space and apparently turned in such a way that she hit the rear of a 1998 Honda that had no one inside at the time. There was minor damage and the parties exchanged papers, Chief Hussey said. The operator of the Ford also asked to police to look into damage on her car that had occurred sometime previously. However, she could not confirm where the mishap had occurred. From the spot on the car, it appeared that a larger vehicle had hit hers, police said. Police made a report about both incidents.

AAA calls police

AAA called police after receiving a call from an elderly female who said she had hit the curb along S. Main Street near St. Anthony's at about 2:30 p.m., Thursday (Jan. 18). . The curb along the roadway is more like a berm. She called it in because she was not sure if the car was drivable. AAA wanted to be sure she was OK, Chief Hussey said.

As it turned out the elderly woman was able to drive to McBrien's on South Main Street to have her car checked out. She was not injured in the incident.

Boy takes no chances

An 11-year-old boy called police at about 3:40 p.m. Friday (Jan. 19) to report that someone that he did not recognize was banging on the door and then got into a gold-colored car and drove away. Thinking the incident was an attempted breaking and entering, police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to area towns with a description of the car.

In talking to the boy, the officer was able to get the contact information for the boy's father, who said the car sounded familiar and that it could have been a "buddy of mine coming by to see me," police said. Police contacted the man's friend who said he had stopped by. The BOLO was cancelled.

Learner's permit

Police stopped a 16-year-old driver, who could only produce a learner's permit, after observing the car going slowly and crossing the double yellow lines on North Main Street near the town common. The officer pulled the car over and the young man, who had a valid learner's permit, said he had taken the road test and had his license. However, the registry did not have him listed has being licensed.

The teen is being summons to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle. He was also cited for marked lanes violation.

Following the traffic stop, the boy who was alone in the car was released to his father, Chief Hussey said.

Pacini's Italian Eatery coming to 3A

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's out with the Mexican and in with the Italian for the restaurant located at 154-156 King St. Known for years as the KoKo Island restaurant, the site was revamped and transformed into Acapulcos Mexican restaurant for roughly one year until it closed its doors last month.

Now, Pacini's Italian Eatery is gearing up to take over and its liquor license was approved by the Board of Selectmen Monday. The restaurant's manager Antonis Petrakis, a Cohasset resident, attended the meeting to answer questions about his latest business venture.

Petrakis has lived in Cohasset for the past 15 years. He said the Pacini's restaurant he will open in Cohasset would be his third in the area. He also has restaurants in Hanover and Whitman. "This is a good opportunity, it's near my house and a lot of people are excited we've chosen to come here," he said.

The restaurant will have a similar menu to the other two Pacini's restaurants he owns, which include traditional Italian dishes of pasta, chicken and veal, but he will also have steak and seafood items on the menu to accommodate more customers' tastes. He said the restaurant would also offer a takeout menu.

Roger Hill, owner of the Good Sport plaza located next door to Pacini's, said he is concerned about what will happen to his businesses when the restaurant opens. He said when Acapulco's opened its doors, customers for the restaurant were taking up the parking spaces in front of his building which was deterring patrons from coming into his shops. "It completely closed the Pizza Zone," he said. At Monday's meeting the liquor license for the Pizza Zone was transferred to new owners who will reopen the restaurant with the same name, and Hill said he is going to make sure the new restaurant succeeds.

Hill said when a restaurant first opens, it is typically packed for the first three or so weeks, then the novelty wears off and things begin to slow down, which is exactly what he experienced with the opening of Acapulcos. This time around, he said he has installed signs on his property that indicate the parking in front of his building is only for his customers and all others will be towed. Hill said while he would be happy for Pacini's to have so many customers that it fills up his lot, which is located in the rear of the restaurant, at the same time he doesn't want to lose business on his end.

Petrakis said he intends on offering valet parking, which will stop the parking in Hill's plaza. He said he would also be willing to hire a police detail to keep an eye on the parking situation, as Hill had suggested.

Selectman Rob Spofford said if there isn't enough parking on the site, it should be addressed by the Planning Board, which approved the site plan for the building.

The board approved the beer and wine license for the premises after hearing from Town Manager Bill Griffin that all background checks came back clear without any complaints.

Bill Griffin provides legal fees update

Town Manager Bill Griffin provided the Board of Selectmen with a document tracking legal fees for litigation, which was discussed Monday. Griffin, who has been tracking legal fees since he began working for the town in January 2005,said he looks at the fees on a case-by-case basis every month. He also compares figures between fiscal years to see if the town is making any progress controlling expenditures. Each bill is organized as either: a real estate matter, labor related matter, Board of Appeals case, Planning Board case, Conservation Commission Case, Board of Health case, or general litigation.

Griffin has received the litigation bills from Deutsch Williams through Dec. 31, 2006, which are in addition to the annual retainer fee of $54,000. Not counting the retainer, for the first half of fiscal 2007, the town spent $66,605, compared to $76,927 in fiscal 2006. The charges in fiscal 2005 were $80,139.

The bulk of the charges have been for Board of Appeals and Planning Board cases, which total $20,388 and $22,592, respectively. Real estate matters come in at $4,095, labor matters totaled $5,101, Conservation Commission matters totaled $4,925, the Board of Health totaled $340, and general litigation totaled $9,162.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said due to the fact that the majority of the fees are related to the Board of Appeals and Planning Board, perhaps fees associated with building permits should be increased to help cover the litigation costs.

Griffin presents FY08 budget message

Makes cuts from department requests

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin unveiled his fiscal 2008 budget message to the Board of Selectmen Monday. With a recommended figure of $34,910,725, Griffin said he made roughly $800,000 in cuts from the requests brought forward by department heads in order to present a number that stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2.

Griffin's proposed budget does not include an override. Overrides allow voters to increase taxes above the limit of 2-1/2 percent set by the state to increase revenue to the town. The town has tried to pass overrides for the past two years in a row, but all have failed at the ballot box.

Griffin said if there was suddenly more money available for the town, he has a list of priorities he would fund.

Griffin said when building the budget, certain assumptions had to be made, such as the level of new growth revenue that will come in, the level of state aid that will be given to the town, and the revenue brought in from local receipts.

The budget assumes $500,000 in revenue from new growth, which is money collected from new construction. "This is what we've been averaging for the past five years," said Griffin.

Until the Governor's budget is released, Griffin assumes level state aid in fiscal 2008 and also assumes a $155,000 increase in local receipts, due to increased fees and interest earnings on school construction surplus funds.

Griffin has also included using school construction surplus funds to smooth a spike in exempt debt. The town borrowed money for the school construction projects and received a higher level of reimbursement, sooner than it had anticipated. The surplus revenue and its interest will be used to ease the burden on taxpayers.

The proposed budget would have an increase of $1,736,022 or 5.23 percent over the fiscal 2007 budget. The general government budget would see an increase of $226,286 or 2.79 percent. Of that increase, $74,000 is for the facilities management department for the town and the schools. The net increase in the general government budget is $151,000, or 1.87 percent.

Griffin is not recommending a net increase in staffing. He said there is a part-time volunteer coordinator position at the Council on Elder Affairs for which the town will provide some funding, but the rest will be paid for by grants. However, Griffin added hours would be cut from a position in the Town Manager's office as a tradeoff for paying for some of the hours at the CEA.

Griffin is recommending a school budget of $13,389,714, an increase of $475,000 or 3.68 percent. That figure is a difference of $297,912 from the budget the school department is proposing of $13,687,626.

Griffin said if there was suddenly more money available for the town, he has a list of priorities he would fund. First on the list would be $300,000 to bridge the gap between what the school department says it needs and what the town can currently afford to spend. Next would be additional funding for the school department to address its supplemental needs, which have not yet been prioritized but total in the $700,000 range. Griffin said once the School Committee goes through its list and sets priorities, he will have a better understanding of how money would be spent should it become available and how much the school department would need.

Griffin would like to be able to give the facilities management department $96,069 for additional staffing. He would also like to allocate $50,000 for engineering and grant writing services for the town. Next on his list would be allocating $45,000 for a school resource officer to be shared by the police department and the schools and another $65,000 for a town planner. However, at this point in time, the funds are not available and do not look forthcoming.

Griffin's Power Point presentation on the budget can be found at www.townofcohasset.org. A full copy of his fiscal 2008 budget message will be online soon.

The Cohasset Fire Department is changing the procedure for obtaining a burning permit in the Town of Cohasset. Permits will not be issued over the phone as in past years. Anyone wishing to obtain a permit must apply at Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St. Permits will be issued for individual addresses and will be good for the entire burning season, Jan. 15 to May 1.

What are the limits on open burning in Massachusetts? The Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP) and the Cohasset Fire Department limit open burning for public health and safety reasons. Open burning pollutes the air and can make it difficult for people with respiratory problems to breathe. When the air is stagnant, open burning can pose smoke and odor nuisances - and health risks - to nearby residents, particularly in densely populated areas. Open burning can also pose a safety risk when it is not adequately controlled.

What can be burned, when, and under what conditions? You may burn, with limits: brush, cane, driftwood, forestry debris, tree prunings, dead raspberry stalks, blueberry patches and infected beehives. You may not legally burn grass, hay, leaves, stumps or tires.

In most of the state's towns and cities, homeowners are allowed to burn brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris - not including grass, hay, leaves or stumps - between Jan. 15 and May 1, so long as the open burning takes place:

- with the permission of the local fire department;
- between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.;
- when the air is circulating well but winds are light;
- no less than 75 feet away from all dwellings; and
- on your own property and as close as possible to the source of material(s) to be burned.

What types of open burning are not allowed? There are no circumstances under which it is legal to burn grass, hay, leaves, stumps or tires. They simply do not burn as "cleanly" as those materials that may legally be burned. All of them produce acrid smoke that causes nuisance conditions and threatens people's health. When tires are burned they produce noxious gases and petroleum residue, both of which can be harmful to people and the environment.

Open Burning Guidelines:

First things first: Contact your local fire department for information on obtaining an open burning permit.

Starting the fire: Remove all grass from the area where you will be burning.

Try to start the fire with natural "kindling" - never with gasoline or charcoal lighter fluid. If you must use an artificial helper, kerosene is probably safest.

While burning: Never add brush that is green or wet. It will reduce the efficiency of the fire and produce thick smoke.

Someone must attend the fire until it's completely out. You will need a hose or other supply of water and a shovel or rake for controlling the fire.

Putting the fire out: Burn the fire down to the coals, drown them with water, spread them out, then drown them again.

MacCarthy pulls papers for School Committee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There are now two candidates for the School Committee as current Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy pulled papers this week to run for a second three-year term. She joins North Main Street resident Peter Richardsson in the hopes of securing one of the two open, three-year seats on the committee.

"Boosted by the calls for me to continue to serve by many of my constituents; the choice to run again actually wasn't a difficult one. Our school district has made many positive changes under the current administration and I am proud to have been a part of those changes. This is a pivotal time for the Cohasset Public Schools and I want to continue to be an advocate for our schools and our children," she said.

MacCarthy lives at 85 Doane St., with her husband John and their three sons, who all attend Cohasset schools. Prior to serving on the School Committee, MacCarthy served on the School Facility/Building Committee for eight years and was involved with overseeing two of the largest school projects ever undertaken by the town — the $10 million Osgood School and the $42 million Deer Hill and middle high school projects.

She has also served as PSO president and spearheaded a grassroots committee called "The Friends of the Cohasset Public School Playgrounds," which fundraised, purchased and installed the playgrounds at the Osgood School and at the Deer Hill School.

Should the School Committee election heat up with more people seeking the seats, MacCarthy should be well prepared. She is no stranger to races. In 2001, MacCarthy ran in a three-way race for two seats on the School committee against incumbents Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin and lost to Martin by just two votes.

"Boosted by the calls for me to continue to serve by many of my constituents; the choice to run again actually wasn't a difficult one."

— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

In the fall of 2003, Jane Pescatore stepped down from her seat, leaving one year remaining on her term, and MacCarthy was in the running to fill that position. However, a combined board of the School Committee and Board of Selectmen appointed Rick Shea to the seat. MacCarthy got her chance on the board when she campaigned against Martin again — who was hoping to win a third term on the School Committee — and Scott O'Grady and Jamie Williams. MacCarthy and Williams were elected in a four-way race for the two seats.

Williams has not announced whether she will be seeking a second term.

In addition to the seats on the School Committee, there are also two three-year open seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Ralph Dormitzer will run to retain his seat and Rob Spofford announced he will not seek reelection. Old Coach Road resident Paul Carlson has pulled papers for a seat on the Board of Selectmen as well.

The following residents have pulled papers to retain their seats on their respective boards: Elsa Miller for the Board of Assessors, Ralph Perroncello for the Cohasset Housing Authority, Steve Bobo for the Board of Health, Stacey Weaver, Sarah Pease and Barbara Power for the Board of Library Trustees, Lillian Curley for the Recreation Commission, Nathanial Palmer for the Water Commission, and Al Moore for the Planning Board.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15. Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

New science class at CHS

Starting second semester (which begins in two weeks), a new introduction to environmental research: watershed studies class will be offered at the high school. Teachers Jack Buckley and David Magnussen will teach the class.. The hope is that the class will help bridge the gap between the school year and the Summer Institute Watershed Study at the Center for Student Coastal Research.

Principal Joel Antolini said the program will not cost the school anything in terms of materials, as the equipment at the CSCR and the lab equipment at the school will be sufficient.

CHS teacher Newkirk resigns

The School Committee formally accepted the resignation of longtime social studies teacher Scott Newkirk at its Jan. 17 meeting. His resignation became effective Wednesday, Jan. 10.

School Committee Vice Chairman asked why Newkirk had resigned and where he will be going. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she could only tell him what was included in Newkirk's resignation letter, which states "personal reasons."

Slanetz said he got to know Newkirk as part of the curriculum committee and thought he was a "stellar" teacher. "He really thought outside the box. He was a really solid teacher and we wish him well wherever he is going," he said.

WARM AND FUZZY

As I write the column this week, I read one of the letters that had been sent to me and really feel "warm and fuzzy" while I am taking it all in. The families involved are a part of our community and to share and work with children from here to help children who are not as fortunate is wonderful. Make sure to read and if you have any thoughts, ideas or suggestions on how to continue these types of programs and others in our community, don't hesitate to send it along. I received a wonderful letter here about a program happening in our community that has been shared a bit in the paper and now, thank you's are being given out.

"Our community IS making a BIG difference: thanks! Thanks to EVERYONE who was involved in the holiday drive that the Tiger Cub Group put together for Cradles to Crayons. This was a phenomenal example of the Cohasset community working together to make a difference in the lives of the many underprivileged children in Massachusetts, who the organization Cradles to Crayons help serve. Seven carloads packed with toys, clothes, shoes, school supplies and baby supplies were delivered to the Cradles to Crayons warehouse in Quincy on Jan.13, where the Tiger Cubs and their families helped unload, clean and sort supplies. Not only has this initiative helped those less fortunate than ourselves, but it has also helped "open the eyes" of our children as to how lucky they are, and how at even a young age they can help others and make a difference: hopefully this will be an experience that influences them throughout their lives. Thanks to everyone involved, in particular: Janet Sheehan, at Osgood School, and Colette Wood and BethWheatley-Dyson at St Stephen's Church, for their support, enthusiasm, passion and energy in making this happen! Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner for helping publicize the initiative. All the Tiger Cubs and their families who helped make this a success. And of course, EVERYONE who donated anything, however big or small. We plan to do this again this Holiday Season, so please start saving all your "stuff"!!! If you also have any ideas on how to make this a bigger and better initiative this year, please let us know! In the meantime check out Cradles to Crayons website to discover why this work is so VERY important and what you can do to help! www.cradlestocrayons.org"

Appeals court rules in Avalon's favor; apartment project set to move ahead

aggrieved" by the ZBA's decision. The decision states the Water Commission is a municipal board and cannot be considered a "person" for the purposes of determining standing.

The Water Commission is not surprised by the Appeals Court decision

"We knew it was an uphill battle against the precedent of the Hingham Campus decision which ruled that local boards had no standing in 40B cases," said Water Commissioner John McNabb. "We have tried everything we can, from making our case unsuccessfully before the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals in 2002-2003 to make our case that the proposed 200-unit Avalon development will potentially contaminate Lily Pond, our drinking water supply.

"We never had our day in court to appeal the ZBA decision because the Land Court, and now the Appeals Court, have denied us that right based on the narrowest of legal issues," he said. "Significantly, neither of these Courts have ruled that we don't have a legitimate concern overprotection of the water supply."

"From our perspective, there was little doubt about the final outcome of the Water Commissioners' appeal. This decision brings us one step closer to the commencement of construction."
— Scott Dale, Avalon Bay

(The Hingham Campus decision involved the Hingham Planning Board challenging the issuance of the comprehensive permit by the Hingham ZBA for the Linden Ponds complex).

Scott Dale, vice president of development for Avalon Bay, said Avalon was pleased but not surprised by the decision.

"From our perspective, there was little doubt about the final outcome of the Water Commissioners' appeal. This decision brings us one step closer to the commencement of construction," he said, adding Avalon could break ground as early as this summer.

Dale said Avalon is proceeding with its efforts to obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for an on-site wastewater treatment system. The DEP is reviewing the system designed by Avalon for the proposed complex.

However, Avalon is also continuing to pursue connecting to Cohasset municipal sewer system. That matter is currently before the state Housing Appeals Committee, which handles 40-B issues. Avalon is not seeking a hookup to the Hull sewer, Dale said.

"We will break ground as soon as the sewer issue is resolved," Dale said. "This is the last issue to be resolved prior to construction."

Dale said Avalon is committed to the Cohasset project. "In January of 2006, we took ownership of the land, so we are not going anywhere," he said. "We are confident that we will ultimately build this project whether six months, a year or several years from now."

Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units – affordable and market rate – would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory.

McNabb said the Water Commission would meet tomorrow (Saturday) with its attorneys to review the decision and consider options.

"A possible next step is to request an appeal before the Supreme Judicial Court, however they only consider about 5 percent of those requests," he said. "We also need to review the status of the cleanup of the hazardous waste at that site and make sure, if construction is going forward there, that all the hazardous materials are removed so they will not be a threat to the water supply."

CHS sports captains will play by a new set of rules, Ford says

Member Steve Fusco asked whether academic standing would have an effect on candidates' eligibility to become captain. Ford said while student athletes must abide by the MIAA rules for academics, everyone involved in the process agreed National Honor Society honors those who excel in academics, and "Sometimes athletes are good leaders, but are not as strong in the classroom, so they aren't recognized that way." He noted obviously students who are on the verge of not being able to participate due to academic probation will not be considered, but everyone, especially the students, felt captains need not be chosen based on academic performance.

"It's good to have standards and hold to the standards. Kids that are doing the right thing should be recognized."
— Rick Flynn, School Committee

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy noted many of Cohasset's coaches are also teachers, which makes it easy to ensure all the school's athletes are performing at high standards on and off the field. Ford added at the beginning of each sports season, he requires every coach send out the sports rosters to the teachers. "Academics do come first here," he said.

Member Rick Flynn said he thought the idea was great. "It's good to have standards and hold to the standards. Kids that are doing the right thing should be recognized," he said.

School Committee member Jamie Williams said she loved the idea as well. "It sets the standard and provides a role model for everyone on the team," she said.

Ford said he anticipates there will be between one and four captain candidates for each sport. Upon accepting their position, they will automatically be expected to uphold the standards in place, which for fall sports captains means maintaining exemplary behavior from the spring, through the summer months, and into the fall. Ford said he would like to have the new process in place before February, when this year's fall captains will be chosen.

Once the set of standards is finalized, it will become part of the Cohasset High School handbook, which will be voted upon by the School Committee.

ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

ADVERTISEMENT

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this…

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you…you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

tension, "that's not necessarily a bad thing. This debate is a healthy debate."

Brown said the changes being proposed would change the minimum lot size required to build apartments and open up the village to developers looking to build mixed-use housing. He said currently, only the Red Lion Inn property, the Post Office and another private piece of land have the necessary square footage to make it happen. "The law prohibits any development from happening and we're trying to fix the flaws," he said.

The other changes to the bylaw would ensure residential units are not built on the first floor level because that would remain retail space. In addition, parking would not be required for buildings within 500 feet of the municipal parking lot or the Pleasant Street lot.

"We realize the Planning Board disagrees with changing the minimum lot size," said Brown, and acknowledged he knows the Planning Board needs to make sure things are done right in the village. "We agree," he said, but added the time is now to move development forward because it is getting hard for businesses to keep going downtown.

However, Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford said the town committed to hiring a consultant at Town Meeting and by bringing the articles forward before the consultant is hired, "I think we're a little early here." However, he noted unfortunately, the RFP for the consultant has not yet gone out which is a separate issue.

But in an interview early Thursday morning, Pratt said his board had thoroughly gone over the RFP at its Wednesday meeting and approved it with changes. He said Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's procurement officer, would have the amended copy on his desk Monday morning, ready to be sent out.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said having the articles "left in our lap has created a dilemma for us." He said it is not up to the Board of Selectmen to determine the town's zoning bylaws. He said what he does know is that there are many groups currently working to maintain the vitality of the downtown and there are many ideas as to how that should be done, and the question is: what can be done in both the short and long term to make that happen.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy said he would agree that his board is trying to promote the viability of the downtown area. "If not, we can kiss a lot of tax revenue goodbye," he said. Sturdy said he would like an impartial consultant to help the town decide how best to move forward.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said when zoning gets to this level it becomes very complicated. "You change one thing and you get a spider web effect," he said. Moore added the consultant needs to be on board prior to any articles being brought forward. "Maybe the answer is more apartments, maybe it's not," he said, and the consultant will help figure that out. "The EDC could be right, but, our board hardly ever walks in lock step and we're pretty unanimous in this."

Pratt said the theory of having housing above retail shops is "en vogue" right now, and the town should remember how building 55-plus housing was the fad a few years ago. "We have Cedarmere and Cook to show for it," he said.

However, Brown noted the town doesn't want to study things so much that it ends up in "analysis paralysis," in which case nothing positive happens.

Nomination papers at Town Clerk's Office

Nomination papers are available at the Town Clerk's Office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15. Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

OPINION

Courteous drivers

OK, we realize the headline has become a non sequitur. With rare exceptions people behind the wheel of a motor vehicle are not courteous.

Something overcomes many of us when we are driving. Sometimes, we do not allow enough time to reach our destination so we are pressured and a slow driver in front of us can send us over the edge. Other times we are on a cell phone and are not paying attention, whether that occurs when we are exiting a parking lot, rounding a corner, or starting up at a red light.

Let's face it – we are all guilty, some more so than others. That is why road rage incidents are on the rise and it is also a big reason why more traffic signals and controls are needed.

When we polled members of our Readers Advisory Network in Hingham recently about their first reaction to the new traffic lights on Hingham's historic Main Street (Route 228) at its intersection with High and Free streets – some respondents said the signals would not have been needed if motorists were more courteous.

Yet years of accidents and countless "near misses" had proved the only way to make the intersection safer was to install a traffic light on what Eleanor Roosevelt described as "the most beautiful street in America." (The First Lady, who was writing the text for a book depicting American life, visited Hingham in 1941).

Personally, we are tired of irked drivers waving at us annoyingly when we are trying to be courteous at an intersection or four-way stop. We also do not like it when a driver's courtesy is misplaced and he stops on a busy, main road and waves for us to pull out from a side street to make the left. All too often, a not-so-courteous driver coming up from behind skirts around the courteous one and almost nails us.

So what is the point? We think civilization here — whether in Cohasset, Hingham or Massachusetts as a whole — would be greatly advanced if we all follow the rules of the road, allow enough time to get places, don't use cell phones or other electronic devices while driving.

After all patience is a virtue.

According to Random House Dictionary of Popular Proverbs and Sayings" by Gregory Y. Titelman (Random House, New York, 1996): "Patience is a virtue. The ability to wait for something without excessive frustration is a valuable character trait. The proverb has been traced back to 'Piers Plowman' (1377) by William Langland and is similar to the Latin, Maxima enim..patientia virtus (Patience is the greatest virtue) and the French, Patience est une grant vertu. (Patience is a great value.)…"

Wouldn't it be great for patience to make a comeback?

Character counts

We applaud Athletic Director Ron Ford's and the school department's plan to have serving as a team captain more than a popularity contest.

We want to be clear, however, that over the years there have been a lot of great Cohasset captains elected solely by their peers.

But, nevertheless, under a new selection process recognizing the inherent responsibility in the role of a true captain will take center stage.

Once the new standards are finalized, students nominated by their peers for the post will undergo review before the Captain's Council. The council will include the athletic director, other coaches, teachers and some students.

The process will be taken seriously and each candidate will be carefully considered, Ford told the School Committee last week.

Ford explained upon accepting the position of captain, the student will be expected to uphold certain standards.

Student leaders, whether on the field or in the classroom, can be good role models. We often hear about the dangers of "peer pressure" when it comes to underage drinking and other substance abuse.

In our society, rightly or wrongly, we admire athletes. Helping athletes to recognize their responsibility as positive role models and to live up to certain standards can be a good thing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Casino Night was great time for all!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters, I would like to thank the entire Cohasset community for its generous support of our annual Casino Night last Saturday.

Nearly 120 people attended the fundraiser. A great time was had by all, particularly at the roulette wheel and blackjack tables.

We would like to give special thanks to Joe Campbell and Atlantica Restaurant, which hosted the event, to Curt Mills and MaxLax Lacrosse, which donated our raffle prizes, and to the Cohasset Mariner, which publicized Casino Night.

We greatly appreciate all who donated their winnings to Cohasset Lacrosse at the end of the night and our many special benefactors who insured that the night would be a great success.

Finally, we acknowledge our numerous volunteers, particularly Lyn Previte, whose organizational effort made Casino Night possible. All of the support will keep the Cohasset Lacrosse program strong and insure the continuation of the boys' and girls' JV lacrosse programs at the high school. Hopefully, our student athletes will reward us with another state championship in the near future!

'Green schools' help the bottom line

TO THE EDITOR:

Kudos to Selectman Gary Vanderweil for taking the lead in doing something constructive regarding the excessive energy consumption in our schools. After denying requests for years to conserve energy, it has finally become fashionable in Cohasset.

At the time that our school renovations were taking place, efficient, sustainable, low-maintenance schools were an innovative, state-of-the art idea emerging on the scene. Unfortunately, many engineers and builders in the community were unable to convince the building committee to go down this path. Instead as Selectman Rob Spofford and School Committee Chair Adrienne MacCarthy constantly remind us, as recently as the Nov. 13, 2006 STM, their main goal as the driving force on the School Building Committee was to bring the schools in 'on time and on budget'. This tunnel vision has plunged the taxpayers into excessive debt and disproportionately high property taxes (see Boston Globe 1/11/07) compared to neighboring towns plus has negatively impacted education programs.

A new national report, "Greening America's Schools," produced by Capital E and co-sponsored by The American Institute of Architects (AIA), reveals that building energy-efficient schools results in lower operating costs, improved test scores and enhanced student health. This report demonstrates that green schools are extremely cost-effective with the financial benefits outweighing the costs 20 to 1. The startling conclusion of this report, indicates that schools designed to be environmentally friendly would save an average of $100,000 each year — enough to hire two additional full-time teachers or one more administrator.

At this time I think it would be prudent to exert some commonsense and rather than using education dollars to expand overhead we should make our top priority retrofitting energy efficiency and low maintenance projects that will save us future funds for classroom enhancement.

New budget approval format needed

COMMENTARY

PAT WATERS AND TUCKER GLAVIN

This article is written by Pat Waters of Aaron River Road and Tucker Glavin of Nichols Road. "We are writing this article as two fiscally concerned residents of Cohasset, not as two Advisory Board members. We firmly believe that it would greatly benefit all of the residents of Cohasset to begin thinking of our towns financial budgeting process in a new manner based solely on the agreed upon and absolute priorities of Cohasset"

It's budget season. You may recall that last year our Selectmen, Advisory Board and Town Manager agreed that the annual budget should be presented to the residents of Cohasset at Town Meeting as a balanced budget. Proposed overrides, if any, are subject to a separate approval apart from the primary budget. With this fundamental change, it is critical that Cohasset's priorities are funded first in the budget.

In prior years, the override provided the residents of Cohasset a means to express Cohasset's priorities. Budgeting of Cohasset's priorities in this way became routine, especially when the prospect of the override passing was equally routine. Well, times have changed.

So, who decides how Cohasset's priorities are represented in the budget? Well, the Selectmen request the Town Manager to put together a budget based on the prior year's budget for the review and approval of the Selectman. The Selectmen may then reallocate or modify the budget before submitting the budget to the residents of Cohasset at Town Meeting for approval.

Under the current process, the residents of Cohasset are limited at Town Meeting to merely voting the proposed balanced budget up or down. This method does not sufficiently express our personal and community priorities. What is needed is a new format for the residents of Cohasset to approve the budget at Town Meeting to correspond with Cohasset's new budget presentation policy.

Our proposal is relatively simple. Give the residents of Cohasset a choice at Town Meeting between several balanced budgets that present varying priorities in funding. The Selectmen need simply direct the Town Manager to put together at least two balanced budgets (more if necessary) to present at Town Meeting. Allowing the residents of Cohasset a choice at Town Meeting in setting Cohasset's priorities in funding is good policy and good government.

Everyone needs to ask themselves if their priorities are being accurately reflected in the budget. If you support having a greater voice in establishing the priorities reflected in the annual budget, please call your Selectmen and ask that they provide the residents of Cohasset a choice at Town Meeting of two or more balanced budget proposals.

—Patrick Waters, Aaron River Road, and Tucker Glavin, Nichols Road.

Last chance to weigh in on 'late train'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More on the Greenbush late train— This is the third week we've mentioned the survey on whether the MBTA ought to consider adding a "late" train to the Greenbush schedule. Of course, a late train would be a train that would leave South Station after the presently scheduled last train which departs South Station at 10 p.m. Since last week, we have had a good response from Cohasset residents after a rather weak response during the first week. It never ceases to amaze us how few responses arrive about an issue until that issue is about to be implemented. Then, comments come out of the woodwork with lots and lots of opinions, when it may be too late. We are rather surprised that few of the abutting residents have expressed their opinions. So, we are going to hold the survey open for another week to make sure that each of you has a fair chance to voice your opinion.

Thus far, we have received a total of 41 replies (about 1.25 percent of the households). Of these 31 favor a late train and 10 "NOs". These votes are not without comment. Some think that a late train should be run only on weekends. Others are concerned that the train schedule will not support those working at Boston hospitals, which have very early start times and quitting times. Please consider responding, either by phone or email if you'd like to add your voice to this survey.

Around the Greenbush in Cohasset – We continue to get lots of calls about the unfinished crossings at Lower King Street and Sohier Street. We'd like to assure you that we continue to press the MBTA and their contractor for completion of these crossings. So, what is going on? Several things ... First, as we've mentioned before at Sohier Street, the utility services had to be relocated. This, it turns out is very difficult. Trying to organize the various utility suppliers, as someone once said, is like trying to teach a pig to sing. It wastes your time and annoys the pig! Well, after about four months the utility services are all relocated and only the old poles need to be removed. The other thing at play at Sohier Street is the weather. The MBTA's contractor was reluctant to start the new sidewalk in the wintertime with the strong possibility of bad weather, resulting in a giant mess in the road, which serves two of our schools. Of course, with our impeccable 20-20 hindsight we can say that the weather has been very favorable. But, the odds of that happening were very poor, so we can understand why Sohier Street construction was delayed. As we get into February and March, we do expect construction to pick up and the crossing completion started. Most recently, we have been assured that final paving at the unfinished crossings will be completed this spring.

What should you expect at Sohier Street? In addition to the railroad crossing completion, there will be sidewalks on either side of Sohier Street. On the school-side, sidewalk will be constructed from the Music Circus driveway, closest to the railroad crossing, to Ripley Road at the Paul Pratt Library. The opposite side of Sohier Street will have sidewalk added across the tracks. This sidewalk will ultimately be continuous from the traffic lights at Ripley Road to the schools and then up to Fairoaks Lane.

The Lower King Street crossing is similar. And, keep in mind that as a part of the Lower King Street crossing, North Main Street and Forest Avenue will be reconfigured and a traffic light added. Sidewalk will be added from North Main Street to Laugelle Lane. (A recent grant will add sidewalk from Laugelle Lane to Route 3A and then down Route 3A to the Greenbush Station.). Again, look for work here to pick up in the spring.

About "no whistle or horns" – When we appeared before the Selectmen at their Jan. 8th meeting we were asked about the no horn situation. Specifically, the Selectmen asked whether there definitely would be no horn on the train as it proceeds through the Town. Technically, the answer we gave was correct. We could not say that there is a permit to operate the Greenbush with out horns. The Mariner picked up on this discussion and in the Friday, Jan. 12th paper reported that the "no horn" is not a "done" deal.

However, that's far from the whole story. Let us explain. The FRA (Federal Railroad Administration) has special rules for whether a specific railroad system can or cannot be hornless. A permit for a hornless or "Quiet Zone" cannot be applied for until the subject railroad system is complete or nearly complete. So, an application cannot be submitted until the system is very near completion. Thus, the Quiet Zone permit for us becomes an issue of timing. At the appropriate time, the five towns of the Greenbush must make application to the FRA for a Quiet Zone system. (Note that it is the towns that actually make this application, not the MBTA.) This application will be made jointly by the five towns, with the MBTA's help, this spring.

After the application is made, the FRA will make a detailed safety assessment of the Greenbush design. A score will be developed from their analysis. If the score is above a certain threshold, then the FRA will issue a Quiet Zone permit. You might ask, "What happens if our score is not high enough?" That's where the deck is stacked in our favor. The MBTA, knowing how the scoring system works, has designed the Greenbush so that it will score high enough to have the Quiet Zone system permit granted. In fact, the MBTA has made this commitment in their FEIR (Final Environmental Impact Report) to the Commonwealth Department of Environmental Affairs. The whole FEIR and environmental impact is predicated on a Quiet Zone system. If a Quiet Zone permit were not granted, the environmental noise impact analysis of the FEIR would be incorrect and would need to be redone. And, a new or revised Environmental Impact Report generated and a new environmental hearing held. The resulting delay would probably be measured in years, not months. Essentially, there would be no Greenbush.

So, the real answer is that there is no Quiet Zone permit yet, but the reason is not that there won't be one, but it is just too early. And, when the application is made the Quiet Zone permit will be issued.

Thinking about presidential run

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Forgive me if I take this opportunity to announce that I am forming an exploratory committee to determine if I should run for president.

What the hell, everybody else is.

I don't know what reasons Hillary and Barak and the rest of them have for announcing 22 months in advance but for me it's a matter of survival. At four score and two, I'm not sure I'll be around in November, 2008.

I suppose, now that I have made my intentions known, Governor Bill and Congressman Dennis and the rest of them will have their dirty tricks departments pawing through my past for any innocent peccadilloes the media can blow out of proportion.

For one thing, I'm for the war in Iraq, as long as we're winning. I'm against it if we're losing.

So I might as well explain my side of them and get them out of the way early.

That trip to Havana. As they will find out when they go through my Visa receipts for the motel overlooking the Morro Castle, that was before Castro came to power. Besides, the girl assured me she was over 18.

Those funny cigarettes at the party at Babs. It was research for a story I was doing on brand names for cigarettes. How was I to know that Acapulco Golds also came in Chesterfield packages if I left a stone unturned?

That housekeeper I hired from Mexico. Just because she was soaking wet when I met her on the banks of the Rio Grande didn't mean she just swam the river. Maybe it was raining out. Besides, she assured me she had a green card.

Now that I have convinced potential voters that those things they plan to say about me are all lies, let's go on to my platform, which you will find is virtually identical to those of the other candidates only more so.

For one thing, I'm for the war in Iraq, as long as we're winning. I'm against it if we're losing. I think we should "surge" our forces in Iraq by another 100,000 men and withdraw if the war is not over in a week. Our forces should be redeployed to Grenada, in case they should threaten us again.

I think we should close the border to Mexico and build a wall from Texas to California but allow undocumented immigrants to sneak over on weekends because our economy would collapse without them. The ones that make it would be called "guest workers," or "illegal aliens," depending on your perspective.

I think everyone in the country should have health care, except those who can't afford it. Pharmaceutical companies should be subsidized by the government so they would be able to give free drugs to everyone, unless they can think of something better to do with their money.

I am definitely for continuing recent tax cuts. As far as I can determine, we've been fighting two wars and cutting taxes at the same time for the past six years. Who is the candidate that is foolish enough to campaign against that?

And speaking of campaigning, I'm told that the cost of a serious campaign for just the presidential nomination, not the election, is going to be about $100 million.

I'd better get crackin'

Complying with 'BCGs' at the office

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

One of the comforts of working for a huge multinational corporation is knowing you're unlikely to be the biggest moron in the company. My suspicions are confirmed every year at this time when I'm required to certify that I understand and comply with our Business Conduct Guidelines. The BCGs are ethical rules of thumb so obvious to any human who has lived above ground for the last 10 years, the mere fact the company feels obligated to remind us of them is proof it has a secret monkey division hidden somewhere, probably in charge of drafting our Business Conduct Guidelines.

Certifying compliance with the BCGs involves taking a short on-line course.

It's a lot like watching a film in science class. You can sleep through 90 percent of it and get exactly the same educational benefit as the alert girl taking notes in the desk to your left. The multi-media presentation consists of a series of scenarios. First, bad actors act out the Wrong Way to behave in a certain situation. For instance a man playing a sales manager might walk into the cubicle of a female subordinate, compliment her on her "nice gams", and then throw feces at her. A narrator then helpfully explains, to those of us who didn't quite pick up on which actions were inappropriate, what exactly went wrong. "Tom's focus on Leslie's appearance was disrespectful," he'll say in a slow, deliberate tone. Then the two actors will play the scene again to show the Right Way, with Tom restricting his conversation to business matters at hand while Leslie pelts him with feces.

I never actually applied to work at this company.

I never actually applied to work at this company. They sent me a letter one day telling me I worked for them and I didn't really feel like arguing.

They sent me a letter one day telling me I worked for them and I didn't really feel like arguing. What happened was, 10 years ago I worked for a medium-size software company. Things were going along great until our CEO, who later became the inspiration for the concept of Business Conduct Guidelines, tried to fool Wall Street into thinking our revenue was a billion dollars when in fact we had made less than a hundred dollars, even counting our Christmas tips. The company imploded, then sank, then hit bottom and exploded. It then bobbed to the surface, struck a mine, sank again, collapsed in on itself and became a white dwarf. Laughing in the wings and watching the whole fiasco was one of our largest competitors, who had a well-earned reputation for tight-fistedness. Once our company had cooled and shrunk a bit further into a neutron star, they felt we were just about ready to be acquired. Fortunately for us they waited only another four years before making their move. By then we were a singularity so I don't know how on earth they found us, but they did.

Six years later it still feels odd to be such a small cog in the wheel. Our earnings report reads like a speech from the U.S. treasury secretary. "Overall revenue grew from 4.23 octillion dollars for fiscal 2005 to 1.85 nonillion dollars this year. We remain hopeful that our stock price will reflect these results once investors are convinced that 'octillion' and 'nonillion' are real mathematical terms."

You might think a company this wealthy would live extravagantly, but you wouldn't believe how frugal this operation is. I used to go on boondoggles all over the world with my previous company — you know, the one with all the financial problems — and now I have to justify every three-martini lunch I expense. In truth I admire how well they keep costs down, because I'm a big fan of that at home. At this time of year one of my favorite pastimes is regulating the heat in various rooms. We have seven zones in our house and I'm on top of every one at all times. No one upstairs at the moment? Those three zones go off, click click click. An hour till bedtime? All the downstairs zones go off. Occasionally I'll forget to turn a zone on, but I pride myself on never forgetting to turn one off. My kids call our house "The Penguin Petting Zoo", but I just pull my wool turtleneck up over my ears and continue my rounds.

I'm so good at it that I've become a legend at the oil company. They've got formulas and computer programs running day and night down there, trying to figure out how it is that every time they come to our house expecting to deliver 180 gallons of oil, we only need ten. "How do you do it Mr. Lengyel?" they ask. "You got your own derrick out back?" "Sorry to disappoint you boys!" I call from the window. And we all have a good laugh. They drive back and adjust their models and restart the programs, but it only spurs me on to greater heights of frugality.

This year my company began a program where they pay cash bonuses for good cost-cutting suggestions. So why didn't I pass mine along and spend the money on fuel to keep my family warm? Well, I have to be honest. I'd miss the penguins.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, on a property that for some reason seems to lose one old-growth tree every winter.

'Have dog in the village zoning fight'

COMMENTARY

JIM WATSON

If you have not been following the events surrounding the zoning issues facing the downtown village district, I would suggest going on to the next person's two cents worth. I have a couple of observations, as one who has a dog in the fight, and a solution or two, something I feel one should have if they intend to weigh in at all.

We seem to have a couple of camps or actually more than a couple of camps who keep referring to a common goal, and I guess our building downtown is one of the objects of their debate. We have the Board of Selectman, the best board we have had in years, the Planning Board, who clearly sees a need for change and the public. We also have a very small portion of the public who own buildings downtown who would like very much to upgrade and beautify their buildings. I have "laid around and played around" this old town (not long enough) and am very interested in keeping intact the appearance of the village. We presently have an incredibly talented guy on the board helping us figure out exactly how to go about our renovation. Current zoning prohibits that from going forward. We hope that will actually change.

The Economic Development Committee comes before the Boards with new numbers punched into square footage requirements for old zoning by laws to go before Town Meeting and says "Try this." This makes everyone nervous and understandably so. These new suggestions continue to exclude 80 percent of the pre-existing non-conforming buildings from doing anything.

The planning board is proposing to change a bylaw that should have never been in place — talking about doing something by right back to a special permit, thinking that will give pre-existing owners a green light. No so, Mass law permits changing square footage requirements to grant special permits. Hence, the proposed bylaw change for spring Town meeting does nothing (except to further prevent progress.)

I would like to remind the citizens of Cohasset how much it helps the downtown businesses if they come in and spend 10 bucks once in awhile.

The solution? Not mine, that is coming in the last paragraph, but the Town's solution, the ultimate showstopper, hire a consultant. I am sure the consultant will have never been to Cohasset and please make sure they know no one from the Waterfield Design Group. I'll never forget the night the then chairman of the Board of Selectmen reprimanded my sister, Tina, to stop harassing one of the Waterfield people as they stood before them time and time again costing the town. We howled with laughter about it, but I'm afraid the half million-dollar joke was on us all.

I could go on here. Writing this stuff is such fun, but I have to get back to my clearance sale. It has been nice seeing certain people the last few days at my sale that I haven't seen in the past 10 years. I would like to thank the people who have supported our business over the years; people like Sam Pease who would spend at least an hour in our store every Saturday morning of his life. I thank you. I would like to remind the citizens of Cohasset how much it helps the downtown businesses if they come in and spend 10 bucks once in awhile.

Back to zoning problems and solutions: so we have a consultant; let's make sure the upcoming meetings to address this issue are more than adequately posted. At this juncture, we need to thank the E.D.C. for their input and tell them that we do not need more of it right now. I'm sure they can keep themselves busy up at the T.O.D. development. The punch line is we have to separate pre-existing non-conforming buildings as they sit on their footprints downtown from lots with much more development possibilities, such as Wayne's and John's. I have no problem with what either of these guys want to do, but in trying to figure out accommodations for their projects by square footage requirement, you are eliminating possibilities for the rest of the building down there. This provision obviously must be made. Parts of the village are so beautiful the historic buildings and actually all parts of Elm Street and the beautiful little strip of stores that Sean Cunning has created from Stagecoach Way to Hernan's and what a nice job Tracy has done with the liquor store. My heart would not be broken however, if the Coldwell office changed or if the French Memories upper building looked a bit different. We have not felt great about the appearance over the last few years of our building but wanted a game plan in place before moving ahead. We now have that and hope very much that we will be able to continue as local owners who love Cohasset. Each night I walk my dog through downtown and think what fun it is to be part of such a beautiful and unique little corner of the world. Go Skippers!

As the late, great James Brown would say, "Please, Please, Please."

Candidates Corner

Richardsson announces candidacy for School Committee

Peter Richardsson of 498 North Main St. announces his candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee. He is a committed parent, looking forward to helping a disciplined school committee and solidly funded school reach some lofty goals.

Peter Richardsson

"Last spring my wife and I evaluated the local pre-school options for our son," said Richardsson. They chose the integrated preschool program at the Osgood School. "We initially chose the program based on value, however we could not be more pleased with the experience and results," said Kate and Peter. Henri has excelled in this program, and his parents love the real curriculum that develops learning skills and the facilities that allow the students to both play physically and learn together or individually. "We have become passionate about the Cohasset School System and I am devoted to keeping the schools always achieving their high goals," said the candidate.

As a committed parent, Richardsson embraces the goal of having the school system consistently ranked among the top 10 in the Commonwealth by several different metrics. To reach this goal, the town needs to come together, accept its financial limitations, and leverage technology and best practices to make the most out of its educational resources. One best practice is to demand that every dollar spent be accountable for reaching the goal and budgeting should be done on a goals rather than needs basis.

With the highest debt load per capita in the Commonwealth, more leverage is out of the question, especially with the Little Harbor sewer project scheduled to commence. The Economic Development Committee has worked tirelessly to increase tax revenues through commercial development, and Richardsson is very proud of the success that committee has enjoyed in getting two zoning articles passed at Town Meeting. Unfortunately these successes will take time to bear financial fruit.

Most importantly, three bitter overrides and a host of new fees have siphoned precious cooperative focus away from our schools. The candidate is experienced with financial planning and budgeting and is committed to the proposition that accountability and transparency are the promise of financial stewardship. "The current school committee has done some heavy budgetary lifting already," said Peter, "and I think it was also prudent to bring forward a 2008 budget that does not require a tax increase."

While living within Prop. 2-1/2 and paying our teachers contracted 6 percent increases might seem an impossible task, voters need to be given a demonstrable and quantifiable return on their investment in the school system before an override has any chance of succeeding. "I really hope to leverage my experience as a member of the town's EDC to develop and support new ideas and offsets that might negate or reduce the need for future overrides," said Richardsson. He would model the successful pre-school program to explore the viability of other revenue opportunities like:

- a top notch SPED magnet school
- a distance learning program
- a regional language, music, arts, and AP cooperative or magnet program
- a university extension partnership program.

These programs would raise offsets and/or reduce the exposure to out-of-district tuition and transportation costs. Plus many of them would enhance the overall quality of the education offered in Cohasset. Again, the candidate is a committed parent, looking forward to helping a disciplined school committee and solidly funded school reach some lofty goals.

Mr. Richardsson and his wife Kate moved to Cohasset from Hull in 2004. They have two children, Henri (almost 4) and Ted (1-1/2). Peter serves as the President of LineCatcher Industries, a small marine products manufacturer and distributor. Kate is the Assistant IT Director for the Town of Hingham. Peter attended the University of Maine and received a Bachelor of Science, Finance/Marketing in 1988. He serves on the Cohasset Economic Development Committee (2005-pres.), the Sail Nantasket Development Board (2006-pres.), and as Secretary of the Hull Yacht Club (2002-pres.) He is a Wellspring Volunteer (2003-pres) and former member of the Board of Trustees of The Deck House School (1988-2001).

Health Notes

What you should know about head injuries

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In Cohasset, our emergency response personnel receive far more calls about accidents and injuries than robberies and fires. They are very well trained to render such aid.

Frequently, our active life style results in a careless moment when one receives an unsuspected injury, sometimes to the head. Frequently these injuries seem minor and without harm, involving only symptoms of being "dazed" or brief loss of consciousness. At times, although minor, they may result in headaches, blurring of vision or nausea, symptoms of something more serious, called traumatic brain injury (TBI) requiring specialized care. The line between a hit on the head and TBI is a very thin one, often requiring expert diagnosis.

Skull fractures may occur with head injuries. Although the skull is tough, resilient and provides excellent protection for the brain, a severe impact or blow can result in fracture of the skull. It may be accompanied by injury to the brain. Skull fractures are common in children and result from accidents (the majority are automobile or auto/bike accidents) or abuse.

The statistics of traumatic brain injuries are: of the 1.4 million who sustain a TBI each year in the United States 50,000 die, 235,000 are hospitalized and 1.1 million are treated and released from an emergency department. The number of people with TBI who are not seen in an emergency department or who receive no care is unknown.

Causes: In adults in the United States such injuries commonly result from motor vehicle accidents, assaults and falls. In children, falls are the most common cause followed by recreational activities such as biking, skating or skateboarding.

The results: Severe blunt head trauma involves a loss of consciousness lasting from several minutes to many days or longer. Seizures may result. The person may suffer from severe and sometimes permanent neurological deficits. Neurological deficits from head trauma resemble those seen in stroke and include paralysis, seizures, difficulty speaking, seeing, hearing, walking or understanding.

When to seek medical care: Emergency personnel should immediately attend to all potentially serious head injuries or call the doctor for his advice. Look for obvious signs of loss of consciousness, vomiting more than once, confusion drowsiness weakness or inability to walk, severe headache, any indentation or bloody drainage from the ear immediately after the fracture occurred. "Battle's" sign is a skin darkening behind the ear several days following a basilar skull fracture.

Act quickly — In Cohasset, our emergency response personnel receive far more calls about accidents and injuries than robberies and fires. They are very well trained to render such aid. And one of the basic tenets of emergency medicine is that there is a 'golden hour' when treatment saves most lives, the first sixty minutes after trauma occurs; not a strict deadline, but a recognition that many deaths which could have been prevented by appropriate care, occur a relatively short time after injury. After a brief diagnosis, they will offer to take the patient to the emergency room by ambulance if the symptoms appear serious. People with less severe injuries may be taken by car, but be prepared to sign a release for the emergency personnel.

Until the medics arrive: Assess the patient. Be ready to tell the emergency staff about the accident, for example, severe head trauma or a fall of a few feet or a fall to a hard surface.

Prevent movement of the neck in severe head injury or if the injured person has any neck pain. If the person needs to vomit, carefully roll them onto their side without turning the head.

You do not need to keep a child or other head injury victim awake.

Specialized Assessment techniques — At the hospital, for moderate to severe cases, the standard imaging test is a computed tomography (CT) scan, which creates a series of cross sectional X-ray images of the head and brain and can show bone fractures as well as the presence of hemorrhage, hematomas, contusions, brain tissue swelling, and tumors. Magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) may also be used after the initial assessment and treatment of the TBI patient. MRI uses magnetic fields to detect subtle changes in brain tissue content and can show more detail than X-rays or CT.

Actually, it's better to try not to fall.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Sustainable Cohasset looks at environmental films

The following was provided by Sustainable Cohasset.

Progress continues to be made both in breadth and in depth for Sustainable Cohasset. The group has set a date for the showing of their first film, "An Inconvenient Truth," which will be shown Thursday, Feb. 8, at 7 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

They then previewed "Who Killed the Electric Car?" This provocative film, released in Nov. 2006, details the life cycle of the EV1, a very successful prototype developed by GM Saturn's division to comply with California's 1990 Clean Air mandate. Tom Hanks, Phyllis Diller and Mel Gibson were among its enthusiasts. The cars were only available by lease from GM.

Mysteriously and methodically, the EV1 fleet disappeared from California's landscape. The Goliaths, who engineered the scarily systematic removal of the EV1 fleet, are cited as included, but were not limited, to the government, the oil industry and automobile and battery manufacturers. S. David Freeman, Energy Adviser for the Carter Administration, concludes that more Davids are needed to represent public and environmental interests and to withstand these all too powerful Goliaths. Subsequent discussion revealed a variety of opinions regarding the points of view expressed in the film.

At the December meeting, Sustainable Cohasset previewed the "The Community," which deals with how Cuba survived the oil embargo after the collapse of the Soviet Union. When oil supplies ran out, the Cuban people did what they had to do. They did not take up weapons and fight for remaining supplies; instead they took up their trowels and shovels and grew food in their back yards, in pots and pans and washbasins in city plots without 40 pounds of chemical fertilizers per plot. Soils regained their natural tilth, which is the physical condition of soil in relation to plant growth. The average per person weight loss was twenty pounds and basic social skills were redeveloped as the communities solved the problems of getting children to school and workers to work without petroleum.

In addition to their film series, Sustainable Cohasset, which is part of Sustainable South Shore, hopes to develop its own Web site within the year. In addition to education and support for alternative energy sources, the group hopes to identify and seize the opportunities to reduce greenhouse gases within their own homes as well as in the community.

At the state level, Speaker of the House, Salvatore Di Masi, has just proposed the Green Communities Act, which will give incentives to both towns and individuals to reduce carbon emissions and build alternative sources of energy.

Governor Deval Patrick will create a cabinet-level position for Energy Management and he is expected to return MA to RGGI, the Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative, which is a multi-state pact for energy producer to reduce carbon emissions.

All are welcome to join Sustainable Cohasset in this important effort. Their next three meetings will be in Room 156 North, on the first floor of Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m., - note new meeting time - on the following dates: Tuesday, Feb. 13 and Wednesday, March 7.

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart shows the amount of interest that Cohasset paid on its outstanding debt in 2004 as a percent of its overall budget. This provides a gauge for how much of each year's budget Cohasset must devote to pay for its debt. Communities generally use debt to finance large capital projects like school or sewer construction. By comparing Cohasset with the median of its Benchmark Peer Group, one can get a sense for how it has decided to finance its spending as compared to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Hearing on proposed storm water bylaw announced

The Storm water Committee will hold a public hearing on the proposed storm water bylaw Tuesday, Feb. 13, at 7:30 p.m., in the basement meeting room in Town Hall. The storm water bylaw will be considered at the March 31 Annual Town Meeting and is also sponsored by the Board of Health, Water Commission and Conservation Commission.

At the public hearing, the Committee will give short presentation on the existing storm water problems in Cohasset and then will take comments and questions from the audience.

"We urge all interested Cohasset residents to review the proposed storm-water bylaw and to come to the public hearing" said John McNabb, Chairman of the Storm water Committee. "This bylaw is being proposed to help address the serious storm-water flooding and pollution problems in Cohasset and for the town to comply with the Clean Water Act."

"We urge all interested Cohasset residents to review the proposed storm-water bylaw and to come to the public hearing."
— John McNabb, Storm water Committee

"We can still make changes to the proposed bylaw if we need to before the warrant goes to press," said McNabb, "so we urge all interested residents to review the proposed storm water bylaw and send comments and questions to us no later than Friday, Feb. 16."

The Storm water Committee can be contacted at stormwater02025@comcast.net to get a copy of the proposed Bylaw or to submit comments.

A copy of the storm water bylaw warrant article can also be downloaded from the town of Cohasset Web site at townofcohasset.org or from the Cohasset Water Dept. Web site at cohassetwater.org. Comments or questions may also be posted on the committees blog at stormwatercohasset.blogspot.com/.

The proposed storm water bylaw establishes a new storm water commission and authorizes the commission to implement an annual storm water improvement program to prevent and reduce existing storm water flooding and pollution, and for a new storm water permitting program to require new development or redevelopment to reduce their storm water impacts to the greatest extent possible.

First league win, loss to SSVT in back-to-back days

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With young teams comes the major challenge of stringing together quality games.

One night after the Cohasset High boys basketball team posted its first South Shore League win in three years – a 37-35 nipping of East Bridgewater Tuesday night – the Skippers took the floor against South Shore Voke, a team Cohasset had beaten by 23 points earlier this season.

"Over the last two years, every team in our league except us has made the tournament. We always hope to try to raise our level of play, and not rely on other teams losing kids to graduation or dropping off."
head coach Dorian Bryant

Cohasset's Marcus Charles takes it to the rack against Abington earlier this season. The two teams face each other again tonight (Jan. 26) at Abington High School.

The score was almost completely reversed this time around, with SSVT handling Cohasset on its home floor, 59-43.

"We had a letdown," said head coach Dorian Bryant. "We played well [Tuesday night], and then [Wednesday night] we just weren't as active as they were, and that was the difference. Give credit to them (SSVT), they played well and they played hard.

"For some reason, we didn't play as intense as they did."

Finding consistent scoring from multiple sources continues to be an issue for Cohasset. Junior guard Pat McCarthy scored 24 points, but no one else had more than six.

Scoring was a problem

Wins over Mashpee, EB snap 5-game losing streak

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It has been a season of streaks so far for the Cohasset High girls basketball team.

After starting the season with four straight wins, five consecutive losses dropped the Skippers' record under .500.

With victories in their last two games against Mashpee and East Bridgewater, the girls and head coach John Levangie are hoping a new streak is manifesting itself.

"They have a half-season under their belts, and their nerves are starting to go away," said Levangie of his young team. "They're just going out and playing. They've worked as hard as you can expect them to."

Cohasset improved to 6-5 (4-4 in South Shore League play) with Tuesday's 51-29 win over East Bridgewater. Sophomore Kayla Farren had one of the best games of her high school career with a game-high 17 points, and senior forward Lacey Richardson added 13.

Richardson (15 points) and Farren (13) were also key in last Friday's 70-29 drubbing of Mashpee, as was freshman Meredith Kelley, who scored 15 points of her own.

Kelley is one of the top players coming off a bench that Levangie said has been contributing a lot in recent games. The coach also praised sophomore center Tori Lehr, junior guard Anna Haggerty and sophomore guard Sarah Coggins for their play in support of the starting five.

With the majority of his team being freshmen or sophomores, Levangie said of the biggest challenges for those young players is adjusting to the speed of the high school game.

"It's a much faster game at the varsity level, and it affects every phase of the game," the coach said Wednesday. "Your passes have to be crisper, you have to meet the passes. There's more pressure to everything you do."

Levangie said his players are making that adjustment, and he will hoping that trend continues as the Skippers embark on a critical stretch of league games. Tonight (Jan. 26), the girls host Abington, whom Cohasset beat by seven points earlier this season.

Tuesday, Cohasset travels to take on unbeaten league leader Carver, followed by a Friday road trip to Harwich. Both the Crusaders and the Rough Riders defeated the Skippers in the first go-round of the league schedule.

Swim teams cruise past Pembroke and Middleboro

By Alyssa Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

The combined Scituate-Cohasset swim team inched closer to a Patriot League title last week as it defeated Pembroke and Middleboro. With the victories both squads improved to 4-0 setting up a much-anticipated showdown with Duxbury next week.

The girls left no doubt which team wanted it more Thursday as they swam past Pembroke, 86-77.

Freshman Megan Little and Sheelah Scott each picked up two first place finishes. Little swam a state-qualifying time of 26.69 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle. She also won the 100-yard freestyle race in state sectional qualifying time of 59.50 seconds. Scott came out on top of the 200-yard freestyle race as she crossed the finish line in state sectional qualifying time of 2:17.96. She also finished first in the 500-yard freestyle event with a time of 6:20.13.

Individually teammates junior Ashley Scott, Alison Costa, Caitlin Mahoney, Mimi Mahoney and Torey Hart also performed well. Scott, the team's sprinter, discovered a new talent as she not only swam in the 500-yard freestyle event for the first time, but she also qualified for sectionals with her time of 6:10.03. Costa (2:35.53, 200-indiviudal medley), Caitlin Mahoney (state section qualifying time of 1:08.97, 100-yard freestyle), Mimi Mahoney (state sectional qualifying time of 1:11.31, 100-yard backstroke) and Hart (1:18.13, 100-yard breaststroke) also picked up first-place finishes. Hart's time broke her previous team record.

The girls completed the sweep of the events against the Titans as they won the three relay races as well. Mimi Mahoney, Hart, Caitlin Mahoney and Little combined to win the 200-individual medley relay with a state final qualifying time of 2:05.60. Alyssa McCarthy, Caitlin Mahoney, Hart and Alyssa Rogers took home first place in the 200-yard freestyle relay with a time of 1:57.72. Ashley Scott, Caitlin Mahoney, Sheelah Scott and Little won the 400-yard freestyle relay with a state sectional qualifying time of 4:14.28.

The boys turned in an equally impressive performance against the Titans as they won, 74-54.

Jonny Drybanski, Colin Conway, Rob Lilly and Brain McGuiness stole the show as they combined to break the league record in the 400-yard freestyle relay race by almost two seconds with a state final qualifying time of 3:29.63. Duxbury held the previous record with a time of 3:31.02.

The Sci-Cohs other two relay teams also brought home first place finishes. McGuiness, Mike Wall, Drybanski and Lilly won the 200-yard individual medley relay with a state final qualifying time of 1:51.81. Brent Daley, Conway, Justin Damaso and McGuiness won the 200-yard freestyle relay with a state sectional qualifying time of 1:42.87.

Individually, eight boys picked up first or second place finishes. McGuiness (state final qualifying time of 1:49.47, 200-yard freestyle), Wall (2:27.22, 200-yard individual medley), Daley (24.31, 50-yard freestyle), Conway (1:02.16, 100-yard freestyle), Lilly (state final quali-

Skaters get back to .500

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Following three straight lopsided losses, the Cohasset High hockey team was due for something good to happen.

The right opponent came along at the right time Wednesday night, as the Skippers earned a 5-0 win over winless Carver-Sacred Heart, getting their record back to .500 (5-5-2) with seven games left in the season.

There were a few different names in the scorebook, as head coach Bob Walsh played all five of his lines regularly throughout the game. Freshman goalie Andy McKenna also got his first ever start, making 16 saves for the shutout.

Cohasset dominated throughout, finishing with 46 shots on net, despite not playing at full strength. Walsh said all six of his defensemen are playing through various illnesses, and the team is without regular senior forwards Austin Lanzillotti and TJ Kennedy.

Still, Walsh's expectations for his team haven't diminished.

"I expect them to win every game," he said. "They've worked extremely hard in practice, so I know their preparation is good."

The Skippers will have to at least break even over their last seven games to qualify for the state tournament. Cohasset has already played all of those teams once already, going 4-2-1.

Cohasset travels to Falmouth Ice Arena this Sunday night at 6:50 to take on Mashpee, and will host Hull Wednesday night at 7:40.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The boys Grade 5 travel A team met Norwell on Saturday and came away with an impressive 31-17 win.

The boys played well in all phases of the game, and they continue to show improvement on a weekly basis. This win was the result of their best all-around team play in all areas of the game.

The boys set the tone early with solid defensive play. The early guard play of Mark McKenna and Rocco Laugelle and the interior play of Connor Green, Mark Brown, and Joe Buckley led to contested shots and few rebounding chances for Norwell on offense. Green was particularly active defensively, and he has shown great anticipation and timing in the passing lanes and under the boards. His active play was contagious.

McKenna and Laugelle complemented each other's game, as McKenna played solid positional defense and Laugelle attacked the ball when the opportunities were presented.

Buckley got the offense going with a nice drive in the lane leading to foul shots, and Green contributed a nice jump shot following a rebound. Liam Burke continued to be a spark with his hustle to the ball on defense and his nice jumper for a basket from the elbow.

Dakota Achin dove for loose balls and drove the basket for a hoop, and he ran the floor well with Chris Haggerty and Steven Maher. Matthew MacCormack handled the ball well and showed his improving passing ability in the half court. He also hit Laugelle in stride for a fast break opportunity. The boys maintained a comfortable 4-6 point lead through the entire first half.

The second half was an opportunity for Cohasset to pressure Norwell with their press and man-to-man defense. The quickness of Maher, Haggerty, Achin and Burke led to turnovers and their largest lead as the final horn sounded.

Coach Terry Green said, "The boys hustled and they played great team basketball. They saw the floor well and they were very unselfish. This was a nice win."

Hanson at Cohasset HS - Patriot League

In a game where the Cohasset boys did everything but score, they went down to defeat to Hanson on Sunday.

Hanson has become a force in the Patriot League in the past year, as they possess a growing front line and offense-minded guards. The boys played a gritty game, however, and they were within striking distance throughout the first half.

After Cohasset scored to make it 6-4 in favor of Hanson early in the first half, they went on a scoring drought for the remainder of the half. With Hanson holding an 11-6 lead, Cohasset was playing step for step. On the defensive end, Robbie Mahoney, Jay Salerno, and Kyrel Jaundoo were contesting every Hanson shot and getting good position under the boards.

Pat Kearney, Patrick MacCormack and Chris Lunde were fighting through Hanson's pressure defense and press, allowing Cohasset to run the floor with several 3-on-2 breaks, with Chris Murphy, Jaundoo, and Salerno running the floor well. Still, the team could not get open shots to drop, and they struggled at the free throw line. Eventually, Hanson took advantage of the drought and was able to stretch the lead at halftime.

Hanson opened the second half by playing its half-court offense and pressing Cohasset at the other end. They opened the lead to 15 points.

Midway through, Cohasset got a spark from Jamie Faber, who played center, power forward and shooting guard in one five-minute stretch. His hustle led to rebounds, turnovers, and nice baskets. Lunde again handled the ball very well, and with his crisp passing and athleticism, Cohasset chipped away at the lead. Morgan McCarthy continued to rebound well and to pick up loose balls, and Kearney maintained his solid defensive presence at guard.

Coach Rob Mahoney said, "We played with intensity, and I liked our hustle. However, we did not take advantage of our opportunities on offense in the first half, and that really hurt us against this good team."

Scores climbing for gymnasts

MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team topped the 120-point mark in consecutive meets against Attleboro (Saturday) and Marshfield (Monday).

Saturday's 120.3-point showing wasn't enough to top Attleboro, one of the best teams in the state. The team had its best showing on the vault, however, thanks to strong performances by Melissa Murphy, Corinna Durham, Kiersten Shontz, Vanessa Durham and Jamie Nichols. Murphy (31.1) and Corinna Durham (30.6) again turned in solid all-around meets.

The all-around duo took the top two spots in Monday's 121.1-110.3 win over the Rams. Murphy won it with a 31.2, highlighted by an 8.3 on the floor exercise, while a team-best 7.9 on the vault helped Durham finished second in the all-around with a 30.4.

Behind Murphy in an impressive display on the floor were Durham (8.0), Cassie Pacella (8.0), Shontz (7.7), Jessica Davies (7.4) and Juliette Karp (7.3). Murphy and Shontz both earned a 7.8 on the vault, while Pacella (7.4 on bars) and Nichols (7.4 on beam) also contributed in multiple events for the victory.

The team is in action Friday night at 7 against Barnstable. This is the team's last home meet at the Massachusetts Gymnastics Center in Hingham (located next to Pilgrim Ice Arena). Coh-Nor then travels to Somerset (Tuesday).

fying time of 51.56, 100-yard freestyle), John McGuiness (6:17.35, 500-yard freestyle), Drybanski (state sectional qualifying time of 1:02.81, 100-yard backstroke) and Damaso (1:13.10, 100-yard breaststroke) all picked up first place finishes. Lilly (state sectional qualifying time of 1:58.69, 200-yard freestyle) and Brian McGuiness (state final qualifying time of 50.19, 100-yard freestyle) took home second place finishes.

"As far as I'm concerned, getting one swimmer to qualify for state sectionals or having a relay team chase down a league record is a team effort," coach Jon Fortin said. "We are all at practice every day, we all sit on the bus for hours, we all swim the same sets and we all wear the same uniform. So as a team, boys and girls, we celebrate our success together."

Earlier last week the boys defeated Middleboro, 85-73.

Brian McGuiness (1:50.77 and 4:56.27 in the 200-yard freestyle and 500-yard freestyle), Drybanski (2:11.58 and 59.80 in the 200-yard individual and 100-yard fly) and Lilly (23.44 and 51.06 in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle) all turned in state final qualifying times en route to picking up two wins apiece. Sean Crowley also picked up a first place finish in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 1:07.37. McGuiness' time in the 500-yard race shattered the team's and league's previous marks.

Brian McGuiness, Wall, Drybanski and Lilly made Sci-Coh history with a record-breaking and state final qualifying time of 1:50.32 in the 200-yard medley relay race. They also teamed to post a state final qualifying time of 3:31.16 in the 400-yard freestyle relay race. Tuesday against EB as well, but the Skippers pulled it out thanks to a sterling defensive effort. The Vikings scored 56 points in the teams' first meeting in December, but Cohasset put the clamps down in this one and gave Bryant the first league win of his tenure as head coach.

"It's nice to finally get a league in and get that off my back," he said. "You have to give credit to the league. Over the last two years, every team in our league except us has made the tournament. We always hope to try to raise our level of play, and not rely on other teams losing kids to graduation or dropping off."

Sophomore big man Dan Martin had a solid game for Cohasset, scoring 10 points and pulling down nine rebounds. Bryant also praised senior center Justin Alexander, whose rebounding and interior defense were instrumental in shutting down the Vikings' offense.

The Skippers, now 4-10 (1-7 in the league), hope to resurrect that type of defensive effort when they travel to undefeated Abington tonight (Jan. 26) for a 6:30 tip-off. Cohasset then returns home Tuesday to face Carver, and will host Harwich next Friday.

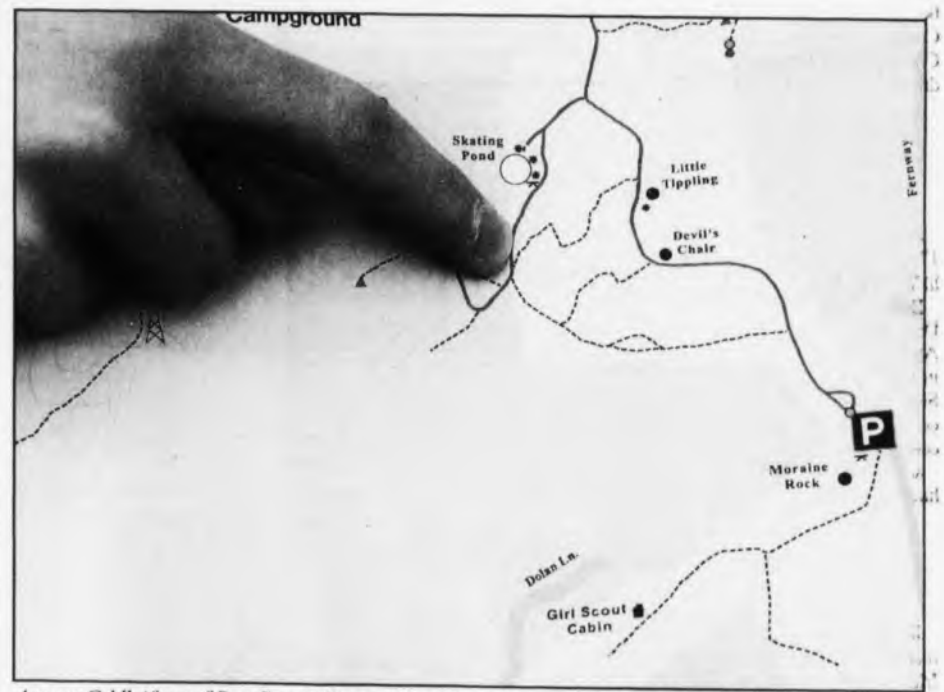
The project was approved in August of 2005 and all the coordinates were complete by the end of that fall. "The rest of the process was manipulating the data so it looked like this," August said holding up a copy of his map. In the beginning, collecting the data was quite an adventure, as he had never gone that far out into the woods and was not familiar with the territory.

But fortunately, his friend and fellow scout Graham Sinclair helped him with the project. "The whole point of participating in an Eagle Scout project is to lead people," said August, adding he taught Graham how to use the GPS equipment as part of his project.

In addition, August led members of his troop and members of Weblos Pack 38, who are in the fifth and sixth grade, during the trail clearing part of the project. The Weblos were able to use their experience helping August to become Boy Scouts.

When the time came to print the maps, August received a tremendous discount from Image Resolutions in Norwell, which was very helpful. He said he was able to print out 2,000 copies as well as two large maps, one for each entrance.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN



August Oddleifson, 16, of Troop 28, recently finished his Eagle Scout project. Using GPS equipment, he made a map of Wheelwright Park for the town to enjoy and also blazed a new trail in the woods for the community to enjoy.

August said he really enjoyed working on his Eagle Scout project, and described Wheelwright Park as both "beautiful and interesting." He said there are so many areas out in the woods that are very picturesque parts of the town, such as the ice pond and skating pond, and now with his map, hopefully more people will venture out to enjoy them.

Copies of the map are available at both entrances to Wheelwright Park, off North Main Street and Forest Avenue.

Completing his project was a "bittersweet" moment for August, who spent so many afternoons in the park that he now feels very confident he could be placed anywhere in the park and find his way out without the map. However, at the same time he now has more free time to spend doing the other activities he loves.

"I love to ski, even though I haven't gone yet this year, which has been disappointing," he said, noting the warm weather has cut his season short. He also plays soccer for the high school and recently signed up for the ski team. He is also a member of the jazz band and regular band, in which he plays the clarinet. August also studies the marine environment at the Center for Student Coastal Research, and teaches sailing lessons at the Cohasset Sailing Club in the summer.

August Oddleifson of Boy Scouts Troop 28 points to the trail he cleared in Wheelwright Park, on the map he also created for his Eagle Scout project.

'An Afternoon with Isabella' to be held Feb. 11

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Cohasset Historical Society will present "An Afternoon with Isabella," Sunday, Feb.11, from 2 to 5 p.m., in the Pratt Building at 106 So. Main St. in Cohasset.

Acclaimed character actress, Jessa Piaia, will portray Isabella Stewart Gardner in a 50-minute dramatic first-person narrative set in 1909.

Mrs. Gardner, the flamboyant and free-spirited "Patroness of the Arts," is renowned for the design and construction of "Fenway Court," an architecturally lavish setting for her extensive Italian renaissance art collections.

Mrs. Gardner, the flamboyant and free-spirited "Patroness of the Arts," is renowned for the design and construction of "Fenway Court," an architecturally lavish setting for her extensive Italian renaissance art collections, which she later willed to the City of Boston.

Jessa Piaia has performed at cultural and educational sites throughout New England since 1985 and has been lauded for her well- researched portrayals of famous women and their contributions in American history.

Before the performance, guests will be able to participate in a silent auction. Among the items up for bid are a free landscape design consultation, a pearl necklace created by CGCC member, Claire Tinory and a tea set donated by the Cohasset Historical Society.

After the performance, a formal tea catered by Arthur Roebuck will be served and several prizes including a gift certificate for French Memories, an Ipod Shuffle and Victorian flower arrangements will be raffled.

The proceeds from this fundraiser will help fund the many programs and projects of both the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Cohasset Historical Society.

Tickets are available at the Pratt Building and are priced at $19.09 in honor of the year portrayed. There is limited seating for this performance. For ticket information call 781 383-1434.

National Grid, New England Power and/or Massachusetts Electric Company plan to apply herbicides along certain transmission line rights-of-way between January 3, 2007 through June 20, 2007. A more precise date will be provided if requested. Massachusetts General Law Chapter 132B, Section 6B requires electric utilities to provide certain notices of this work to the public.

Herbicide use for management of vegetation along the rights-of-way is done within the context of an Integrated Pest Management (IPM) program. In right-of-way management the pest is tall growing trees that will grow into the wires causing outages and safety concerns. Biological control is a component of the IPM program. Biological control is achieved by promoting the establishment of low growing plant communities that resist invasion of rights-of-way by tree species. Selective use of herbicides to control tall growing trees allows low growing shrubs, grasses, ferns and herbaceous plants to become established and resist re-growth of tree species.

Accord Concentrate and Arsenal herbicides will be applied directly to the surface of tree stumps immediately after trees are cut.

Transmission lines may be identified by locating metal letters/numbers on a wood pole or painted letters/numbers on a steel structure.

Further information may be requested by contacting (during business hours Mon-Fri. 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.): M.V. Sikora, Forester, National Grid, 25 Research Drive, Westborough, MA 01582. Telephone: 508.389.9087.

SCHOOLS

Post-Prom is looking for a venue

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

The school year is half over, and we're that much closer to graduation and summer vacation. Tomorrow night is the Jr./Sr. Semi-Formal at Atlantica, which hosted Cabaret on Wednesday night. The Semi-Formal is like Prom's younger, more casual sibling. It may seem a little early to be mentioning the Prom — but a wise man once told me "Proper planning prevents poor performance." There was another P-word in there before the word poor, you can probably figure it out. I digress. Post-Prom is currently in limbo, searching for a venue to hold 100 or so Seniors and their dates from about 11:30 p.m. to 3:30 a.m. In fact, next Monday night, 6:30 p.m. at the library a meeting will be held regarding the Post-Prom.

The issue at hand is the safety of your children. Post-Prom is an after party for the dance, keeping everybody in one place and offering plenty of fun activities. Senior parents are encouraged to attend Monday's Meeting, and help solve the problem. Any and all ideas and suggestions would help make steps towards securing someplace to hold Post-Prom.

The term is coming to a close, but there's no shortage of information I have for you.

• Wednesday night was Cabaret at Atlantica. When this story went to press it had not yet occurred, but I'm sure as always it won't disappoint.

• Debate team traveled to Old Rochester Wednesday afternoon, to square up against their opponents.

• Thursday a Coordinated Program Review meeting was held.

• Thursday after school the Middle School Team Leaders met.

• 2:30-9 p.m. Thursday night the ADL Peer Leadership Training took place in the Library.

• The National Honor Society is sponsoring a school supply drive to benefit Iraqi children. They need things like blunt-edged scissors, rulers, pencils and erasers. Send in any donations anytime between now and Feb. 16th. The NHS is working with Operation Iraqi Children in this joint effort.

• Tomorrow is the Jr./Sr. Semi-Formal at Atlantica 8-10:30 p.m.

We have a half day next week to help kick off the new term. So don't be alarmed if your son or daughter is home around lunchtime on Wednesday, I assure you, they aren't cutting class. Let's get the new the new term started already.

PAC to meet Feb. 6

"Autism Spectrum Disorders: Overview of the Newest Research in the Field," will be the topic of presenter Lesley Maxwell, on Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m., at Osgood School, behind Deer Hill School, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset. The workshop, sponsored by PSO/PAC, is free.

Autism is a field of research that is advancing rapidly. There are many new findings as researchers, doctors and educators work with families to find the cause of autism and to understand how best to assist individuals with autism and their families. This talk will offer a practical overview of current research and findings in the field of autism spectrum disorders for families and educators.

Cohasset Parents Advisory Council has joined with the South Shore PAC Network to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. For information, visit southshorepac@comcast.net.

Coordinated program review scheduled

Superintendent Denise Walsh of Cohasset Public Schools was recently informed by the Commissioner of Education of an upcoming Department of Education visit. The department's onsite visit will occur during the week of March 19. Such visits are routinely conducted by the department to satisfy federal and state education requirements to review periodically specific education programs and services in local school districts throughout the commonwealth. The department is conducting the review of several programs during a single visit to be more efficient in the time spent on the mandated activity by both the department and school system staff, and also to make strong connections with the programs under Education Reform.

Superintendent Walsh indicated that the Department's Coordinated Program Review process will address the program areas of special education, civil rights, English language education and safe and drug free schools, and include a review of school district program procedures, a study of individual student records and an onsite visit by a Department of Education team. The department team will conduct interviews of district administrators, teachers and parents, conduct observations of instructional sites and prepare a report for the superintendent and School Committee.

An Executive Summary and detailed report of findings for each program area will describe the implementation status of each program requirement reviewed by the Department of Education. The findings will note those program standards the implementation of which the team found to be commendable or substantially implemented. When program standards are found not to be fully implemented, the local district must propose to the Department of Education corrective actions to bring those areas into compliance with the respective statutes or regulations. Districts are encouraged to incorporate the corrective action activities into their district and school improvement plans, including the district professional development plan. The school district may request technical assistance from the Department of Education in responding to this report. Both the department's report and the school district's response to the Department of Education are public information and will be available to the public upon request. The department's Coordinated Program Review Final Reports are additionally posted on the department's Internet Web site at doe.mass.edu/pqa/review/cpr/reports/.

"Department of Education Program review procedures provide that any member of the public may request to be interviewed by telephone by a member of the department's visiting team. Persons wishing to be interviewed should call the superintendent's office at 781-383-6111 no later than March 1 to leave their name and phone number, or they may call the Department of Education at 781-338-3706, Ellen Convisser, onsite chairwoman. A member of the visiting team will then contact each person desiring an interview within two weeks after the completion of the onsite portion of the review. If an individual does not write or speak English, is not comfortable communicating in English or requires some other accommodation, the department will make arrangements to communicate appropriately with the individual.

Walsh indicated that she is confident that the department's program review process will be a useful and positive experience for all staff in the district, and that the report will be a useful planning document for continued development for all students.

Flying Santa is topic

Join the Hull Lifesaving Museum at 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull, Thursday, Feb. 1, at 7 p.m., for a delightful look at 77 years of one of New England's most unique and beloved traditions. From touching memories of lighthouse children to ribtickling accounts of package drops that went wrong, Jeremy D'Entremont and Brian Tague will give a slide presentation of rarely seen historic photographs. Admission costs $3 for members and $5 for non-members.

Maine seaplane pilot Bill Wincapaw began Flying Santa's holiday flights to isolated lighthouses in 1929. Maritime historian, adventurer and lecturer Edward Rowe Snow made Flying Santa a true New England institution, personally visiting the lighthouses each Christmas for more than forty years.

The tradition continues today through the efforts of the nonprofit organization, Friends of Flying Santa. Brian Tague is a photographer and President of Friends of Flying Santa. Jeremy D'Entremont is Vice-President of the organization as well as a lighthouse historian and author. In recent years he has updated and returned to print several of Edward Rowe Snow's books, including "Storms and Shipwrecks of New England" and "The Islands of Boston Harbor."

This presentation accompanies the Hull Lifesaving Museum's current exhibit titled, "Flying Santa: A Holiday Tradition," which runs through March 10. For information contact Victoria Stevens at 781-925-5433.

STATUS REPORTS

CFD had busy month

The summary of Cohasset Fire Department responses during the month of December is as follows: building fires six, motor vehicle fires one, brush fires one, motor vehicle crashes 10, medical emergencies 66, inspections 49, investigations 19, lock outs/lock ins three, automatic fire alarm activations 17, mutual aid fire responses to other communities five, public assists two, and miscellaneous responses three. Thirty-eight emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 34 medical emergencies, two investigations and two building fires, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

The ambulance transported 45 patients to South Shore Hospital and one patient to Quincy Medical Center; 33 of the 46 were advanced life support transports. Mutual aid ambulances transported six patients to South Shore Hospital. Five of the six mutual aid ambulance transports were advanced life support. A healthy, happy baby girl was delivered by department firefighter/paramedics while en route to South Shore Hospital in Rescue 3. There was one motor vehicle crash that required victims to be transported to the hospital, Silva said.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled 17 for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for nine responses and malfunction was the cause of eight responses.

There were six responses classed as building fires for the month, three were for malfunctioning electrical equipment one was for an oven fire and one was for a chimney fire. One fire was an electrical short that spread to an unfinished basement area. The fire was extinguished by department personnel with the assistance of mutual aid fire units from Hull, Hingham and Scituate. An aggressive interior attack on this fire limited the damage to a small area and kept the fire from extending into the rest of the home. Silva said.

Inspections for all businesses that require annual licenses to be issued by the Town, including alcohol, common victualer and new and used automobile, were completed by the department this month, Silvia said.

Police made 10 arrests

December was also busy month for the Cohasset Police Department there were 10 arrests, one for minor transporting alcohol, two for assault and battery, one for violation of a restraining order, one for an outstanding warrant, two for breaking and entering, two for possession of a Class D Substance and finally one for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, Police Chief James Hussey said.

In December, the police department investigated 11 motor vehicle accidents, three of which resulted in personal injury. There were 88 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $1,020 in fines. Additionally, there were 61 parking tickets issued totaling $1,425 in fines, Hussey said.

The emergency dispatch center received a total of 830 calls for police services of those 136 were Emergency 911 calls, he said.

There were seven reports of breaking and entering, one involving a town building, one involving a business, one involving a vehicle and four involving private residences. There were 10 criminal complaints issued for the month, Hussey said.

SISTER GETS IN ON THE ACT

Catholicism put to the test at Company Theatre

Kathleen Stefano plays the part of Sister in the comedy "Late Nite Catechism," which comes to Norwell's Company Theatre Feb. 7.

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

You would be hard pressed to find anyone who attended Catholic school who didn't come away from the experience without at least one story involving a nun. While some people may try to repress the memories, actress Kathleen Stefano puts her parochial past to work for her in her portrayal of Sister in the comedy "Late Nite Catechism," which comes to Norwell's Company Theatre early next month.

"The first nun I met when I was still a little girl was Sister Michelle and she was always very nice to me. In second grade, however, I came in contact with Sister Ellen Patrice who didn't just use a wooden ruler on her students, she used a metal ruler. She was pretty kind to me, thank goodness, but it was always clear when she meant business. The other nuns could afford to go easy on us, because Sister Ellen Patrice was mean enough for all of them," recalled Stefano by telephone from her home in San Francisco last week.

Written by Maripat Donovan and Vicki Quade, "Late Nite Catechism" was first performed in Chicago in 1993. In the mid-1990s, Donovan starred in a Boston production which enjoyed a lengthy sit-down run at the Church of All Nations in Bay Village. In the years since, the one-woman show has played almost all 50 states as well as Canada, Australia and the United Kingdom. In the story, Sister is teaching a roomful of "students" (the audience). The kind-hearted instructor rewards the students for correct answers with glow-in-the-dark rosaries and other clever prizes. Naughty students should take heed, however, as the teacher may well call them on stage to sit in the corner and reflect on their actions. However, even the most reluctant students are likely to show up on time and sit up straight for this Sister's class — if they know what is good for them, anyway.

"This show takes people back to how they remember the nuns and parochial schools in general from their childhoods," something Akron, Ohio, native Stefano says she can easily relate to from her own life. "The strictness made a difference. The nuns today can't use the discipline the way they did in the past. In my day, just the fear of being hit by a nun made all the difference to the way we behaved. I firmly believe that people respond so well to this material because of what the nuns meant to them when they were little. Many of us had great respect for them then and still do today."

That respect came in handy when it was time for the nuns to focus their pupils on their studies.

"What's funny is that even now that I am all grown up and playing a nun on-stage, I still have fear that I won't remember my Catholic school knowledge for the question-and-answer portion of the show. There's a script, of course, but you also have to improvise throughout and really play off the audience. I find that the more I do this play, the more I learn. I now know a lot about the saints."

She may have her saints down pat, but Stefano — who has played Sister on and off for over five years — says that her audiences still try to trip her up on her understanding of Catholic dogma. Stefano may not have all the answers about the Immaculate Conception and other regular lesson topics, but she has some surefire ways to stay ahead of her audiences.

"When someone tries to stump me, I just turn the question around. That's one trick I've learned. I just give it right back to the person. Most of the audiences are very involved in the idea that Sister is their teacher. They become like proud kids in the classroom when they get something right during the question-and-answer session."

Touring everywhere from Anchorage to Salt Lake City to Miami has brought some very disparate audiences to Stefano's sister act.

"Anchorage was wonderful. The show was a fundraiser for a beautiful new Catholic church and it really clicked. People came along for the ride and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. When I played Salt Lake, however, I began by asking if I had any Catholics at all in the audience. It turns out there aren't only Mormons in Utah, but I think while I was there, I probably played to every Catholic in the state. In Miami there seemed to be even fewer Catholics. I was at the Coconut Grove Playhouse for almost three months in 2004 and I played to mostly Jewish crowds. Some of them were quite old and would sleep through most of the show, but others got into it and had a great time. I just changed Easter Duty to Yom Kippur Duty and it worked beautifully."

("Late Nite Catechism" will be performed Feb. 7-11 at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com

Movie review

A sexy warrior princess named Selenia (voiced by Madonna) is one of the characters we meet in director Luc Besson's worthy "Arthur and the Invisibles.

Try to see 'The Invisibles'

Arthur and The Invisibles (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Are you ready for "Honey, I Shrunk Les Enfants?"

"Arthur and the Invisibles," also known as "Arthur et les Minimoys," is yet another winged horse sprung from the endlessly fertile, if not overtaxed, mind of French auteur Luc Besson ("La Femme Nikita," "The Professional").

The film, an English-language effort of French pedigree, combines live action with 3-D animation and is yet another variation on a theme of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland."

The eponymous Arthur (a winning Freddie Highmore of "Finding Neverland") is a boy with a devoted granny (Mia Farrow), absentee parents (Penny Balfour and Doug Rand) and an ex-adventurer grandfather (Ron Crawford), who has been missing for many years and whose absence has been disastrous.

In an effort to save granny's home from demolition, Arthur follows instructions left behind from his grandfather and finds himself transported and transformed into a Minimoy, a tiny, fairylike creature living beneath the gardens and grounds.

Arthur's adventures in Ewok-esque Minimoy-land involve a bag of rubies to redeem his endangered home, a sexy Minimoy warrior princess named Selenia (voiced by Madonna), her father the King (Robert De Niro) and a villain named Maltazard (David Bowie).

Based on a series of children's books by director Besson and collaborator Celine Garcia, the film agreeably blends an ecological message with Carrollian tropes and themes from Greek myth, "Peter Pan," Tolkien and Arthurian legend and lore.

The 3-D animation breaks no new ground and frequently is hyperactive. The Minimoys themselves resemble both those troll figures from the 1960s and fugitives from '80s bad-hair bands.

Cameos voiced by Snoop Dogg and Anthony Anderson are shocking stereotypes, and if Selenia seems a bit too eroticized for children, well, this is French after all.

Rated PG. "Arthur and the Invisibles" contains mild violence and crude humor.

Jeremy D'Entremont and Brian Tague take a look at 77 years of one of New England's most unique and beloved traditions. From touching memories of lighthouse children to rib-tickling accounts of package drops that went wrong, Jeremy D'Entremont and Brian Tague will give a slide presentation of rarely seen historic photographs. Maine sea-plane pilot Bill Wincapaw began Flying Santa's holiday flights to isolated lighthouses in 1929. Maritime historian, adventurer and lecturer Edward Rowe Snow made Flying Santa a true New England institution, personally visiting the lighthouses each Christmas for more than forty years. THE CASE OF THE GRINNING CAT (A-)

A Godardian meditation and film essay directed by French New Wave legend Chris Marker, "The Case of the Grinning Cat" is a 58-minute meditation upon the state of the world from the point of view of Marker in present-day Paris. Its ostensible subject is the iconic, yellow cat graffito that pops up on Paris walls at the turn of the new century. A 2004 work shot on video and originally made for television, "The Case of the Grinning Cat" is suffused with wistful, mysterious charm. The grinning cat of the title, whose image pops up unexpectedly on placards and apartment rooftops, just as mysteriously disappears after a time, sometimes leaving behind a Cheshire-like trace of pigment. By the end, it becomes a metaphor for life's ephemeral nature and a paradoxically happy reminder of death's ubiquity. (Not Rated)

EATING OUT 2: SLOPPY SECONDS (C+)

In the queer wonderland that is "Eating Out 2: Sloppy Seconds," romantic misadventures are the only disturbances on an otherwise idyllic college campus. Amid double entendres, sculpted bare chests and heated couplings, a group of friends and ex-lovers discover that life is an adventure to be embraced. A sophomoric, raunchy comedy, "Eating Out 2" is a stand-alone sequel. Calling it "Sloppy Seconds" may be an inside joke; it's no more sloppy — or silly — than the first. (Not Rated)

GOD GREW TIRED OF US: THE STORY OF LOST BOYS OF SUDAN (A-)

The genocide in Sudan is the subject of Christopher Quinn's Sundance award winner "God Grew Tired of Us: The Story of Lost Boys of Sudan," a documentary coproduced by Brad Pitt and narrated by Nicole Kidman. Like "Lost Boys of Sudan," a 2003 nonfiction film that is this effort's bookend, "God Grew Tired of Us" charts the journey of a group of boys who must either escape from the Sudan or die at the hands of Muslim soldiers from the north bent on exterminating the Christian and animist Africans of the south. The film's opening images are dire in the extreme. But "God Grew Tired of Us" is on the same upward trajectory as most of these young men. Their struggle and determination make "God Grew Tired of Us" both enlightening and uplifting. (Rated PG)

Students at Truth University display some dazzling dance moves in "Stomp the Yard."

Ongoing

APOCALYPTO (A-)

In opening scenes of "Apocalypto," Mel Gibson's latest, subtitled, gonzo-exotico effort, a young Mayan hunter chomps down on a tapir testicle, and you wonder: What is this, the pre-Columbian "Jackass"? No, it's "Mad Max Beyond Yucatan." "Apocalypto" is grotesquely violent and seething with rage. The film is chockablock with evil portents, an end-of-times vibe and a "Goddess of the Scaffold." In other words, it's vintage Mad Mel. A little girl's prophecy will remind some of Joseph Campbell's theory that Christ had mythic predecessors in pagan religions. But ontological Melisms aside, if you liked Michael Mann's great "The Last of the Mohicans," you are going to grock this ultra-violent, National Geographic extravaganza big-time. (Rated R)

BABEL (B-)

Another weighty, portentous, relentlessly grim effort from Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu ("Amores Perros," "21 Grams"), "Babel" is, of course, being touted as Best Picture material. Afraid not. It tells several interweaving stories, involving, among others, a fabulous-looking American couple (Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett) having a marriage crisis in Morocco, the perilous adventures in Mexico of their two blond children, a mute Tokyo schoolgirl who behaves like a nymphomaniac and two Berber brothers herding sheep in the Atlas mountains. To some, Inarritu's work is genius. To others, it's just babble. Take your pick. In English, Spanish, Berber and Japanese with subtitles. (Rated R)

BLOOD DIAMOND (B-)

A Rambo movie for liberals, Edward Zwick's "Blood Diamond" might also be called "Danny Archer, Soldier of Fortune." Handsome Danny (Leonardo DiCaprio) has been a bad boy. He smokes and drinks too much and makes a living smuggling "conflict stones," also known as blood diamonds, out of 1990s Sierra Leone. The funds finance a rebel army that chops the arms off civilians and turns young boys into drug-addled zombies with AK-47s and such nicknames as "Master of Disaster"' and "Babykiller." "Blood Diamond" is based on fact. But it is hardly a serious examination of the political and social realities of modern-day Africa. Zwick brings the same sensibility he brought to "The Last Samurai" to this film. "Blood Diamond" does not pass the reality sniff-test. (Rated R)

FREEDOM WRITERS (B+)

As Erin Gruwell, a middle class teacher trying to capture the attention of her gang-banger students, Hilary Swank is downright luminous and amazing. She is a rebel in lipstick and tasteful pumps. She never lets her fear dissuade her from her self-appointed mission to teach. Gruwell has her charges write diaries, which they read to the class. Published in 1999 as "The Freedom Writers Diary" with Gruwell as editor, these personal testaments are effectively used. Bring four hankies. You're going to need them. (Rated PG-13)

— Stephen Schaefer

STOMP THE YARD (C)

Imagine "Bring It On" on steroids. The sport that's featured here — a competitive, grueling sort of dance known as stepping — is a fast-paced type of footwork unlike anything cinema has seen before. But that's not always a good thing. The familiar story features DJ (Columbus Short), an avid hip-hop dancer who competes in underground hotspots in L.A. One evening, his life is turned upside down when his younger brother is shot and killed. DJ heads to Truth University, as the film builds to a climactic, if predictable, dance tournament. Skip "Stomp." (Rated PG-13)

The saint of Saint Maarten

Local man re-launches island site

By Max Bowen
MBOWEN@CNC.COM

From the plane's touchdown to takeoff, Jeff Berger has all your vacation needs met through his redesigned Web site on the island of St. Maarten.

Berger, CEO of his PR business, JMB Communications, recently rolled out the new and improved site, www.everythingstmaarten.com, or www.everythingstmartin.com, which documents every aspect of a trip to the half Dutch/half French island. Working with Dennis Randall of Kingston, Plymouth resident Berger has put together a site containing more than 90 pages of information on St. Maarten, or St. Martin as it is sometimes spelled.

"It has every conceivable type of information someone would want who was contemplating a trip to St. Maarten," said Berger. "It has everything about the island."

The site's content is divided into three sections. The first, entitled "Before You Go," gives visitors to the island all the information they need to plan their trip, from reserving a hotel or villa to renting a car. This section also offers a history of the island and weather information. One article in this section, called "First Things First," gives details not always covered in the travel brochures, like where to get gas for cars and how to use the island's phone system.

Berger has been a visitor to St. Maarten since 1978, either spending five weeks in a timeshare or renting a hotel.

"The old site had become like a Colonial house. Whenever we wanted to add something to it we built an addition. It became like a maze. We had valuable information, but it was a difficult design."
— Jeff Berger

The site began as a story about a trip to St. Maarten Berger put on his company's site as a writing sample. Soon after the site went online, he began getting calls from people who had read his story. From there he expanded the story into an informational site covering every inch of the 37-square mile island.

"I gradually added to it," Berger said. "It was a mammoth job."

Berger said the redesign of the site, which was launched 11 years ago, was made necessary due to the vast amount of information he has accumulated over the years. Much of the information comes from his own experiences on the island, but he gets some facts from friends and others who have gone to St. Maarten. Berger said the site had become difficult to navigate, and decided to relaunch it with a new, easier to use layout.

"The old site had become like a Colonial house," said Berger. "Whenever we wanted to add something to it we built an addition. It became like a maze. We had valuable information, but it was a difficult design."

JMB Communications does public relations for financial and hospitality companies, and business consumer marketing. The company offers a program called Websites that Work, which designs sites for companies. Randall and Berger met through Habitat for Humanity, which Berger has down some PR work for.

"The site had become obsolete from a navigation perspective," Berger said, referring to his original St. Maarten site. "We started with a blank slate."

The second section of the site, "When You First Arrive," walks with visitors from the moment the plane touches down or the boat docks. The site is free but includes a pay section, with 4,500 subscribers. This section contains several visitor benefits, like discounts on airfare and car rentals.

"You can even buy souvenirs online," Berger said.

Along with the site, Berger also puts together a weekly newsletter, St. Maarten Weekly News, which he said is read by more than 100,000 people.

"I get the information for that from friends on the island," Berger said. "We hear from our readers."

A second newsletter was started in mid-2006, and covers news in the timeshare industry.

The final section covers what to do once you're on the island and unpacked. Full-color photos advertise businesses like Last Mango in Paradise, the Jimmy Buffet store on Front Street. Maps of the island are on hand, and Berger offers information on scuba diving, renting motorcycles, and sightseeing.

While the best sights and sounds are a debatable subject, Berger said, one of the best, according to several visitors, is the Grand Case, a former fishing village that sports two-dozen gourmet restaurants.

"It literally is smaller than downtown Plymouth," he said.

Flames shoot into the night sky

A Cohasset firefighter directs the fire hose toward the Dramatic Kitchens building off Depot Court on Tuesday evening. The two-alarm fire destroyed the structure. Mutual aid from Hull and Scituate responded and Hingham fire covered the Cohasset station.

Spectacular blaze at kitchen design shop

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With nighttime temperatures averaging in the high 20s this week, it has not been unusual to notice the scent of burning wood on the air. But the two-alarm fire that started in Cohasset Village at 6:05 p.m. Tuesday was anything but comforting and cozy as firefighters from Cohasset, Hull and Scituate battled the roughly 50-foot high blaze for close to six hours before returning to their respective stations.

"When I rolled in, it was pretty dramatic."

A call from a cell phone alerted Cohasset's police and fire departments to the incident. The caller reported smoke and fire coming from

27 homes slated for Cook Estate

Not restricted to those 55-and-older

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Where one single-family home currently sits on the Cook Estate, soon there will be 27. Developers from Abbot Real Estate and Development have purchased the property, located off Sohier Street, and unveiled plans before the Planning Board at a preliminary hearing held Jan. 24.

James McAuliffe, principal and co-founder of Abbott Real Estate Development, attended the meeting. He said the company is now in its 11th year and to date has built more than1,000 homes both for rent and for sale, including the recent Seton Highlands development at the Pinehills in Plymouth, which includes single-family duplex style condominium homes.

"We're very excited about being in Cohasset and trying to develop the best project we can," McAuliffe said.

While the homes at the Pinehills are 55-plus housing, the development in Cohasset will not be age-restricted. They will also be detached homes, rather than the duplex style seen in the Plymouth development. Price points for the units — which will not be deemed affordable by the state — have not yet been determined, as they will depend on the cost of construction, but McAuliffe said he believes the community will be "pleasantly surprised."

Landscape architect Joseph Geller, a partner at Geller DeVellis Landscape Architects, said because the property is located on one of the highest points in

Just a phone call away

Emergency Notification System trial run Feb. 9

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One of the most critical elements during any emergency is communication. To that end the town has purchased the necessary technology to allow it to be able to notify all of its residents of an emergency within minutes, via one single telephone call.

At the December 2005 Special Town Meeting, voters unanimously approved spending $30,000 to purchase an emergency notification system. Similar to the Connect-ED notification system currently in use by the school department, the town has chosen Connect-CTY. Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town will conduct its first test-call of the newly implemented system Friday, Feb. 9.

Connect-CTY is an Internet-based town-to-resident communication service that enables town officials to schedule, send and track personalized voice messages to thousands of residents, businesses and local officials in just minutes, ensuring they all receive the same message quickly. The system can be used to communicate any timely and pressing matters, such as severe weather conditions, notification of a missing child, a water main break, or other unforeseen events or emergencies. The school department has used the technology for a variety of reasons, including informing parents of a threatening note which was found on school grounds, to notification of MCAS testing.

Griffin said he believes having this new technology will be a great asset for the town. "Effective communication with local residents has a direct impact on the overall safety of our town. When an emergency or pressing situation arises, one of the primary courses of action is to alert the community immediately," he said. "With the emergency notifica-

Colossal spelling bee victory

Middle-schoolers put to the test

By Samantha Brown

Thirty-four of the best spellers from the towns of Cohasset and Scituate faced off Tuesday during the Cohasset Middle High School and Gates Intermediate School's 2007 Spelling Bee, held at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

After 11 rounds of spelling, it was clear Scituate had produced the winner, as its students were the top three finalists: Lindsay Whalen, grade eight, Elizabeth Mardeusz and Sarah Reynolds, both grade seven.

However, coming up close in fourth place was seventh-grade student Hayley Wheelwright, who earned first place for Cohasset. Sam Green, grade eight, was the runner up in Cohasset. Both Lindsay and Hayley will go on to the regional spelling bee competition.

When it came down to the final two contestants, Elizabeth was asked to spell the word "sedentary." While she gave it her best shot, her answer was incorrect and Lindsay was able to spell it correctly. For the win, Lindsay was asked to spell "colossal" and with that one word brought victory to her Scituate classmates who had been cheering her on from the crowd.

Mike Wankum, meteorologist for WCVB-TV Channel 5 was the announcer at the bee. He instructed the spellers they would first hear the word, and could then ask for it to be said again, to be heard in a sentence, for the word origin or a definition. Judges included Cohasset High School Supt. Denise Walsh, Paul Pratt Memorial

Spelling Bee winner Lindsay Whalen of Scituate is all smiles while Cohasset's top speller Hayley Wheelwright realizes they will now both have to go on to compete at the regional bee.

Dog hearing scheduled Feb. 13 for two Labrador retrievers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A dog hearing has been scheduled for 6 p.m., Tuesday (Feb. 13) in the basement meeting room at Town Hall for the owner of a yellow lab and black lab that live at 50 Red Gate Lane.

Jeff Ritz's house backs up to Wheelwright Park, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said. Ritz is the owner of the dogs. Town Manager Bill Griffin will conduct the hearing.

The public is invited, Murphy said. Anyone who has had a good or bad experience with the dogs should attend.

Murphy explained that some people, who walk their dogs in Wheelwright Park, have had problems with the labs. Dogs must on a leash in the parking lot, but can be let loose once on the trails. Dogs have approached the labs and have been attacked and bitten, he said.

Ritz confines his labs with an electric fence but that does not prevent other dogs from approaching.

In the past six-to-ten weeks there have been four incidents involving other dogs and two "human bites," Murphy said. He said a UPS driver, who came to the house, and a neighbor's nanny, who was across the street, have also been bitten, both by the yellow lab.

Car into woods

A teenager who was driving a red Mercury Marquis, lost control of the car in slippery conditions; the car ran off the road and into the woods off lower King Street by Route 3A, police said. The boy's father arrived on the scene. The car was stuck and had to be pulled out of the woods. The incident occurred at about 4:39 p.m., Tuesday (Jan. 23).

Erratic operation

Police cited an operator for speeding and lane violation following a cell phone report about an erratic driver at about 9:43 p.m. last Saturday (Jan. 27) near Forest Avenue and North Main Street.

The caller said the vehicle was speeding and passing cars as it came down North Main Street toward the intersection of N. Main, Forest Avenue and lower King Street. An officer followed the vehicle up Forest Avenue toward Hull and clocked the speed, which was excessive, Hussey said.

Handicap spot

A police officer tagged a car that was blocking a handicap spot in Cohasset Plaza last Saturday (Jan. 27) at 6:35 p.m. The fine for parking in a handicap space is $100, Chief Hussey said.

Fire lane

Last week on Friday and Saturday (Jan. 26 and 27) officers tagged two cars that were parked in the fire lane at Cohasset Plaza by Stop & Shop in separate incidents.

Chief Hussey said officer-initiated patrols in the area look for fire lane violations. He explained if there is someone in the motor vehicle, the officer will just tell him or her to move along. He said people should not park in the fire lanes and should not park there and leave the vehicle. The fine for parking in a fire lane is $25.

Hussey noted there is plenty of parking in Cohasset Plaza, so there is no need to park in a fire lane.

Parking complaints

Officer-initiated patrols on Hull Street at DiNero's often result in motor vehicles being tagged for parking violations. Last week was no exception. An officer tagged two vehicles at about 7:36 p.m., Wed. (Jan. 24) near DiNero's. Chief Hussey explained there is signage posted prohibiting parking on the Cohasset side of Hull Street near Grace Drive. The parking restriction was adopted in response to complaints from Grace Drive residents who could not see around the parked cars when they tried to exit the street. Hussey said it is a safety issue.

"When officers are working the sector, they make sure no one is parking there," he said.

Officer bitten

A family dog bit an officer, who happens to be one of the biggest animal lovers in the department, when he was responding to a call at the home, police said.

The wound was minor but the officer was checked out by the fire department; the dog was up-to-date on its shots.

The officer, who was ordered to report the incident, did so reluctantly and noted that he may have scared the animal, Chief Hussey said.

Revoked insurance

A Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court following a traffic stop for speeding on Sohier Street. The incident occurred at about 12:20 p.m., on Monday (Jan. 22). The officer making the stop found out her registration had been revoked for lack of insurance and the motor vehicle had to be towed, police said. She was cited for driving with revoked registration and speeding.

"We can't allow a car to be continue to be driven if it is uninsured," Police Chief James Hussey said. He explained that state law requires all motor vehicles be insured.

Suspended license

An Abington man is being summonsed to court after being stopped for speeding at 8:53 p.m. Monday (Jan. 22) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. It was then determined he was driving on a suspended license, police said.

Smoking sockets

A problem with the electrical wires coming into a house on Highland Avenue on Tuesday (Jan. 23) caused smoked to come out of the electric outlets. The resident also heard a crackling noise from inside the sockets. Fire Chief Bob Silvia said because of the problem with the wires, specifically the neutral wire that provides the ground, more voltage — in excess of the usual 110 volts — was coming into the house than should have been. This type of surge can damage televisions, computers and appliances. National Grid was called to the scene, shut the power off, and fixed the problem, Silvia said.

Carbon monoxide scare

Carbon monoxide is the result of burning fossil fuel, whether that is oil, gas or lumber.

On Wed. (Jan. 24) at about 8:17 a.m., the fire department investigated a report of a carbon monoxide alarm going off. The caller explained the alarm was near the daughter's room and there was a vehicle warming up in the driveway next to the girl's room.

Chief Silvia said it is possible that fumes from the car's exhaust came in through cracks in the house; it could have also come from the oil burner.

The fire department did get elevated readings in the house; all appliances were shut down and the house was ventilated. In these situations it is the homeowner's responsibility to contact an appliance repair service.

Silvia stressed the importance of placing carbon monoxide detectors on each floor of a home, including the basement if that is used at all. Detectors must be within 10 feet of each bedroom. Because carbon monoxide is odorless – detectors are the best way to be alerted to the potential danger. State law requires homes to have carbon monoxide detectors.

Outside gas leaks

Due to 100s and perhaps 1000s of gas leaks in Keyspan pipes across town, the fire department is often called to a scene time and time again. Last week on Wednesday (Jan. 24), firefighters responded to a report of an outside odor of gas on Beechwood Street – which has been an ongoing problem. Keyspan classifies the leaks. If they are not close to a house, it can take as long as 18 months to get them fixed, Chief Silvia explained.

He said after the fire department has been to a location multiple times, sometimes the leak is pushed up the priority list. In cold weather, the outside odor of a gas leak is more pronounced because the gas does not dissipate.

Water leak

The brown-colored commercial building at 760 CJC Hwy, next to Starbucks, that is being renovated had a water pipe burst due to the cold on Saturday (Jan. 27). Because of the work being done, the front door was left open and that allowed the pipe to freeze.

In another incident that evening, a Summer Street resident called 911 to report a burst pipe. Fire Chief Silvia said the fire department can assist with turning off the water and will ensure there is no fire or electrical danger. He said residents should shut off outside faucets and drain any water before winter to prevent the water inside the pipe from freezing and backing up. It's also a good idea to leave kitchen and bathroom cabinets that contain pipes on outside walls open in cold weather to allow the heat to circulate.

Stormwater issues to be tackled at annual Town Meeting

New commission seen as benefit

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Stormwater Committee is planning on bringing a new bylaw forward for Town Meeting consideration in the spring. If passed by voters, a new Stormwater Commission would be formed which would implement an annual Stormwater Improvement Program to prevent and reduce existing stormwater flooding and pollution. A new Stormwater Permitting Program would also be formed which would require new development or redevelopment to reduce their stormwater impacts to the greatest extent possible.

Due to the article's ties to development, members of the Stormwater Committee came before the Planning Board Jan. 24 to present the article and receive feedback. They explained the new commission would be made up of various boards and asked the Planning Board if would like to participate. The Board of Health, Water Commission and Conservation Commission are all endorsing the article and will all have participants on the commission, and the Planning Board said it would like to participate as well.

Stormwater Committee Chairman John McNabb explained there are five major stormwater problems currently facing the town, which are fragmentation, flooding, pollution, federal requirements and the federal threshold. He identified portions of the proposed bylaw that would address all five.

Regulation and remediation of flooding and stormwater pollution in Cohasset is fragmented among many different local boards and officials. In turn, many stormwater flooding and pollution issues fall through the cracks and are not adequately addressed.

McNabb said the bylaw would create a new Stormwater Commission with authority and responsibility over flooding and stormwater pollution. He said the committee feels that is the most effective way to ensure someone is actually addressing the issues. He said local boards are overburdened with their current responsibilities and the new board would have both a public works function and a regulatory function, which no existing town board has.

There are serious, chronic and pervasive flooding problems in town, which are caused and/or exacerbated by stormwater. McNabb said the bylaw would authorize the new Stormwater Commission to conduct long range and annual Stormwater Improvement Program to reduce existing stormwater flooding and pollution and prevent or reduce potential additional stormwater flooding and pollution.

McNabb also said every water body in Cohasset is contaminated with one or more pollutants, such as bacteria, heavy metals, and contaminated sediment. Most are on the federal list of impaired water bodies. The bylaw would establish a new Stormwater Permitting Program that would regulate construction site runoff and post-construction runoff, prohibit illicit connections and administer a program to implement all six "minimum control measures."

Finally, the Clean Water Act requires the new regulations to regulate stormwater runoff from development or redevelopment or lots of one or more acres. The bylaw would instead regulate runoff for lots of any size, due to the fact that more than 75 percent of parcels in Cohasset are one acre or less.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said he was concerned there would be duplication if various boards are charged with certain duties that the new commission's efforts might overlap. However, McNabb said currently, while many boards are doing their jobs properly, there are still so many issues to be overcome, some problems are never getting fixed. With participants from many boards on the commission, it will help ensure all the issues are getting addressed.

There was also concern the process would be onerous to homeowners who are trying to develop, but Karen Quigley, also of the Stormwater Committee, explained there would be nothing more than a short form to be filled out with the building permit.

McNabb said the Stormwater Committee would be taking the proposed bylaw around to various boards and making changes as necessary. It is scheduled to hold a hearing on the article Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall. The committee will take questions and comments during the meeting.

For more information or to submit comments on the article, please contact the Stormwater Committee at stormwater02025@comcast.net. A copy of the article can be downloaded from the town's Web site at www.townofcohasset.org or from the Cohasset Water Department site at www.cohassetwater.org.

town, the view is spectacular. " You can see the ocean," he said, adding not only that, the property has some wonderful specimen trees, which is something every landscape architect likes to see, and he intends on preserving. "There is also a very nice existing stone wall we'll want to reuse," he said. Geller noted while there is property on the Fairoaks Lane side of the street that was purchased in the transaction, "There is no intention to do anything on that property."

Geller said the 27 homes would be situated on the property to create the best views of the water. "They will not be looking at each other," he said. While development will be somewhat dense, there will be open space around the edges of the property and open space in the middle. There will also be a pedestrian trail system throughout the 19 acres of property.

There are wetlands on the site that will be left alone. "We tried to be creative with our septic and drainage. We're going to work with swales to minimize the runoff going into the wetlands," he said. Another feature on site that should help mitigate runoff is the fact that the driveways for the homes will be made of pervious pavement, which will allow water to seep into the ground, rather than run off.

Dale Harris, an engineer with Coler and Colantonio, presented the site design plans. He explained test pits and percolation tests were conducted all over the site by Abbot developers and many more who had tried in the past, and the conclusion from just about everyone was that the septic system has to be placed just off the existing driveway. To accommodate for that, the current entrance to the property will be shifted a little farther down Sohier Street, which will also provide better sight lines for drivers coming out of the property than being situated at almost the crest of the hill. Harris explained a traffic study for the property is in process.

Gordon Clark of Northside Design Associates spoke about the architecture of the homes. He said the homes would be low in profile as not to obstruct views for the neighbors; they will have clapboard siding, covered entryways and brick front steps. The homes will also have an open floor plan as well as a gas fireplace and chimney. There will be a variety of design plans and all will have two bedrooms, unless it is determined at a later date that the development has extra capacity in its on-site septic system to accommodate for some three-bedroom units.

He said due to the grade of the land, some designs would have walkouts. Others will have loft spaces. The different styles will all be between 2,200 and 2,400 square feet and from the outside, their designs will be compatible.

Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt said because this piece of land is on one of the highest points in town, it is possible it could be seen for quite a distance once built and lit at night. He asked what developers plan to do in terms of "light pollution." Planning Board member Bob Sturdy said he would also assume there will be central air conditioning which could have outdoor compressors and asked whether there has been any thought given to soundproofing them.

Developers explained there would be covered entryways to the houses, which will help keep lights from the front doors contained. Any light from the development's roadways will be both dark sky compliant and energy efficient. They said there could be "shield plantings" placed strategically on site as well to help buffer noise.

Developers said they hoped to formally file with the Planning Board in February and have a hearing some time in March. They said by then, they will have all preliminary data ready to be presented, and would also have prices in place for the units.

tion system, we have the right tool to provide reliable, up-to-date information to our community, ensuring that all residents stay well-informed."

The town will have the ability to send an unlimited number of messages, and when a town official needs to use the system, it is available immediately. The town will also have the ability to keep track of how many and which numbers were reached with a report on the results of outgoing messages sent to town officials immediately upon availability.

Town officials can target messages to an unlimited number of groups for everything from mobilizing emergency response teams to notifying necessary department heads, and send messages to only the specified groups.

"Effective communication with local residents has a direct impact on the overall safety of our town. "
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Police Chief James Hussey said he too thinks the system will provide a great service to the town. "In the event of an emergency, we must have the capability to quickly and easily warn all residents and business people to keep them out of harm's way. This system is specifically designed for dissemination of time-sensitive messages, ensuring that town residents and businesses will be informed of emergency situations, even if they don't have the TV or radio turned on," he said.

Primary residential and business landlines in Cohasset will be automatically included in the system. If residents choose to have their e-mail address, cell phone and private landline numbers included for emergency notification, they may do so by calling (781) 383-0666. Residents with call blocking services can make sure to receive the town's town-sensitive calls by adding (781) 383-1212 to their approved number list.

Cohasset will conduct its first test call Friday, Feb. 9 in order to ensure all residents who would like to be included in the system are given a chance to correct their phone numbers. If residents do not receive the call, they should contact the town at (781) 383-0666.

Slow start for town election

The deadline to pull papers for this year's Annual Town Election is Thursday, Feb. 15 and so far, there isn't much of a race for any of the open seats. Only one new candidate pulled papers for the Annual Town Election this week: Daniel J. Martin of Linden Drive, who is seeking a seat on the Recreation Commission.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15.

So far, Old Coach Road resident Paul Carlson has pulled papers for the Board of Selectmen as well as incumbent Ralph Dormtizer. Selectman Rob Spofford has indicated he will not seek re-election.

Peter Richardsson, who resigned from the Economic Development Committee this week, is seeking a position on the School Committee, as is incumbent Adrienne MacCarthy.

The following residents have pulled papers to retain their seats on their respective boards: Elsa Miller for the Board of Assessors, Ralph Perroncello for the Cohasset Housing Authority, Steve Bobo for the Board of Health, Stacey Weaver, Sarah Pease and Barbara Power for the Board of Library Trustees, Lillian Curley for the Recreation Commission, Nathanial Palmer for the Water Commission, and Al Moore for the Planning Board.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15. Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

Peter Richardsson resigns from EDC

School Committee hopeful Peter Richardsson resigned from his position on the Economic Development Committee this week. In a letter to the Board of Selectmen, he explained while he has had a great experience being on the board since 2005, at this time he will be concentrating his efforts on his School Committee campaign.

"I have really enjoyed my service on the EDC, and I am proud of the significant changes the committee has been able to affect. I trust the experience will make me a stronger candidate and the connections I have made will facilitate any future service to the town," he said.

French students to go to Quebec

Eighth-grade students taking French class will have the opportunity to take a trip to Quebec, Canada this April. The School Committee approved the trip at its Jan. 17 meeting.

Middle-high school principal Joel Antolini presented the committee with the specifics on the trip and said there would be a group going of no more than 45 students. The students will tour Quebec City, visit the art museum eat in French restaurants, and stay overnight in a hotel, speaking French during the entire trip.

Most of the teachers who volunteered to chaperone the trip are language teachers, which would lead to an entire department of substitute teachers for one day, which the School Committee and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said they were concerned about. School Committee member Jamie Williams asked whether parents could volunteer to chaperone instead, to ensure other students are not affected by the trip and Antolini said the school had not yet put the word out to ask for parents' help.

Middle-schoolers put to test in Cohasset-Scituate spelling bee

Library Director Jackie Rafferty, Scituate Town Library Director Kathy Meeker and Scituate School Committee Chairman Libby Michaud.

In Cohasset, the spelling bee participants were chosen through individual spelling bees in their regular English classes. Middle School Assistant Principal Beth McCoy said there are 17 English classes between grades six, seven and eight, and each class had their own spelling bee to find a winner to compete in the two-town bee. "It's really nice because you have all grade levels and all ability levels competing," she said.

While Cohasset has been conducting its own spelling bee during the past few years, this is the first year the two towns have had a joint spelling bee. The event was well attended by both schools, and McCoy said she hopes the bee will continue in the future.

Cohasset speller Alexiree Hastings, donning a yellow and black bumblebee necklace, listens to announcer Mike Wankum of the Channel 5 weather team pronounce her word during the spelling bee.

Drew Cobin, one of Cohasset's spelling bee contestants, thinks before spelling the word given by the announcer of the bee, Channel 5 meteorologist Mike Wankum.

Scituate speller Elizabeth Mardeusz carefully concentrates on spelling her word during the Cohasset Middle High School and Gates Intermediate School 2007 Spelling Bee held Tuesday. Elizabeth was the runner-up in the competition.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

'Tis the season

Hello Cohasset. As you are reading through this week's paper, you may have heard whether the groundhog saw his shadow. Early Spring, more winter, hmmmm? Either way, we have been relatively lucky in our neck of the woods but it looks like some really cold stuff is coming for next week. Stay warm, enjoy whatever you can outside whether it is the snow and sledding, skating or just plain walking the dog. Seasons are something that we like about this area of the country right?

I also wanted to say that the fire that happened this past Tuesday night downtown was so sad to see. The good news is that no one was hurt and I have such a respect for the work of our fire and police officials and the many others who help in these types of situations.

Farm life suits three CHS students

Build bridge as part of service project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When students come to walk the nature trails at Holly Hill Farm this spring, they will have three Cohasset High School students to thank for their dry feet.

Since the beginning of the school year, senior Bobby Meikleham and juniors Jake Cuneo and Chris Mills have been coming to the farm, located on Jerusalem Road, during their community service class, taught by Jack Buckley. They have been completing various tasks on the farm over the last four months, but their biggest by far is a new bridge which takes visitors over the puddles and mud which are present almost continuously from spring through fall.

The boys explained water runs off the road and down the ledge and collects in pools on the trails. Because the trail is used for educational purposes, it sees many visitors and can become very messy. Former CHS students Carlos Peralta and Miguel De Los Santos, who were in Buckley's class in 2004, built a bridge in another location during their time on the farm, and this year's students used that bridge as a model for their own.

"No task is too big for these guys," said Education Director John Belber, who has been overseeing the boys in their work on the farm. He said whether through competition, as they would sometimes race to see who could complete jobs the fastest, or through sheer determination, they have done well on every project thrown their way.

They also grew their own lettuce, which was served in a salad at the Cohasset High School Hunger Banquet in November.

Their first day on the farm was a memorable one for the boys, as they say they were greeted with bags full of pony manure to be brought down to the compost pile. They have also cleaned the goat pens, weeded invasive plants, and built a raised bed garden for schoolchildren to grow vegetables in. They also grew their own lettuce, which was served in a salad at the Cohasset High School Hunger Banquet in November. "We harvested it in the rain," said Jake, adding no matter what the weather was, they were always outside working.

CHS juniors Chris Mills and Jake Cuneo work in the Holly Hill Farm Greenhouse with Education Director John Belber. Mills and Cuneo are participating in a community service class at the high school and have been working on the farm since September. (Not shown is senior, Bobby Meikleham).

Jake Cuneo, Bobby Meikleham, and Chris Mills stand by the bridge the CHS students have been working on for their community service class at the high school.

Chris said they also gathered wood chips, which were used on pathways and in the gardens. They measured the trails for maps of the property's 35 acres, and collected sea kelp, which is used for fertilizer in organic farming. The kelp is high in nitrogen, which feeds the soil naturally. Before coming to the farm, all three boys said they were not familiar at all with growing produce in a garden, but now would feel very comfortable building their own raised bed gardens and producing vegetables on their own.

But the bulk of their time has been spent building the bridge. They began by scanning the woods on the property for fallen cedar trees. "Cedar doesn't decompose," said Bobby, and it therefore provided the perfect supports for the bridge. Next, they bought the lumber for the bridge, some of which was purchased at Copeland & Sons Lumber in Marshfield. The nails for the project were purchased at Cohasset Hardware. "We wanted to support the local businesses," said Belber, adding unfortunately since then, Cohasset Hardware announced it will be going out of business.

While the students set their sights on building a 70-foot long bridge, time didn't allow them to complete a bridge quite that long. "We set our goals high," said Chris, to which he added in the future, he would highly recommend other students complete their community service coursework at the farm, and perhaps even continue the work they began on the bridge. As an added bonus, the boys said hauling the lumber out to the trail and building the bridge has helped them stay in shape for the spring sports season, as all three are members of the CHS lacrosse team.

Belber said he is very proud of the work done by the boys. He said while the farm is a for-profit organic farm it has a non-profit educational branch which their work will support. "The farm is our classroom and these guys have left a very lasting impression on the kids."

Holly Hill Farm is a working organic farm, located at 236 Jerusalem Road. In the summer months, it harvests produce, which it sells at its farm stand as well as at the Farmer's Market on the Common. For more information, please contact Directors of Farm Operations Jean and Frank White at (781) 383-1455 or visit the farm's Web site at www.hollyhillfarm.org.

MARKET UPDATE

The Spring market has arrived early and buyers have returned in force. The inventory in Cohasset has gone from over 100 homes on the market this fall to 50 homes currently. Unlike other towns, Cohasset has a lack of inventory which creates more demand than supply. Values have clearly hit bottom and with the coming train we are anticipating modest appreciation. If you are thinking about selling or buying, please call our office for a market consultation. We may even have a buyer waiting for a home like yours.

Dramatic Kitchens and Sunroom Conservatories, Ltd., a kitchen and design shop located at 22 Depot Court. Cohasset resident Richard Brown owns the building, and the business owner is currently out of the country, which caused the shop to be closed this week. The cause of the fire does not appear to be suspicious, officials said.

Police Officer Ed Bagley and other members of the Cohasset Police Department were the first on the scene. He described the building as having billowing black smoke pouring out from the roof, and some visible flames.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said when the call came in, he was stuck in traffic on Route 128, coming back from bringing a vehicle up to Dedham to be repaired. "When I rolled in, it was pretty dramatic," he said.

There were four firefighters on duty when the call came in and they drove two engines and the ambulance down to the fire. The ladder truck stayed at the station until other firefighters were able to get to the station and drive it over. Those firefighters who were first on the scene laid the supply lines down and gained entry through the front door.

"Upon entering, they realized the fire was overhead and they backed out," said Silvia, adding when the rest of the crew arrived, they were able to use the ladder truck to begin fighting the flames to keep it from spreading.

A small crowd gathered around the area and many took out cell phones with cameras to take photos of the incredible scene.

Soon after Cohasset's arrival, engines from Scituate and Hull pulled up. Hingham also provided mutual aid as it sent firefighters to man the Cohasset station while all of its units were out. There were at least 20 firefighters on scene. The area surrounding the building, a small, light yellow, cape-style building with a kitchen showroom on the right side of the building and an office-type area on the left, was cordoned off with yellow caution tape. The area from the Pleasant Street train tracks to the top of Depot Court and down Ripley Road to roughly Carousel Antiques was shut down to traffic for hours with police cruisers providing the blockade. A small crowd gathered around the area and many took out cell phones with cameras to take photos of the incredible scene.

With temperatures so low, water from the hoses soon caused major ice in the roadway. The Cohasset Department of Public Works responded promptly. "The DPW did a really nice job sanding and salting. If nothing else, it helped keep us from falling while we were working to put out the fire," said Silvia.

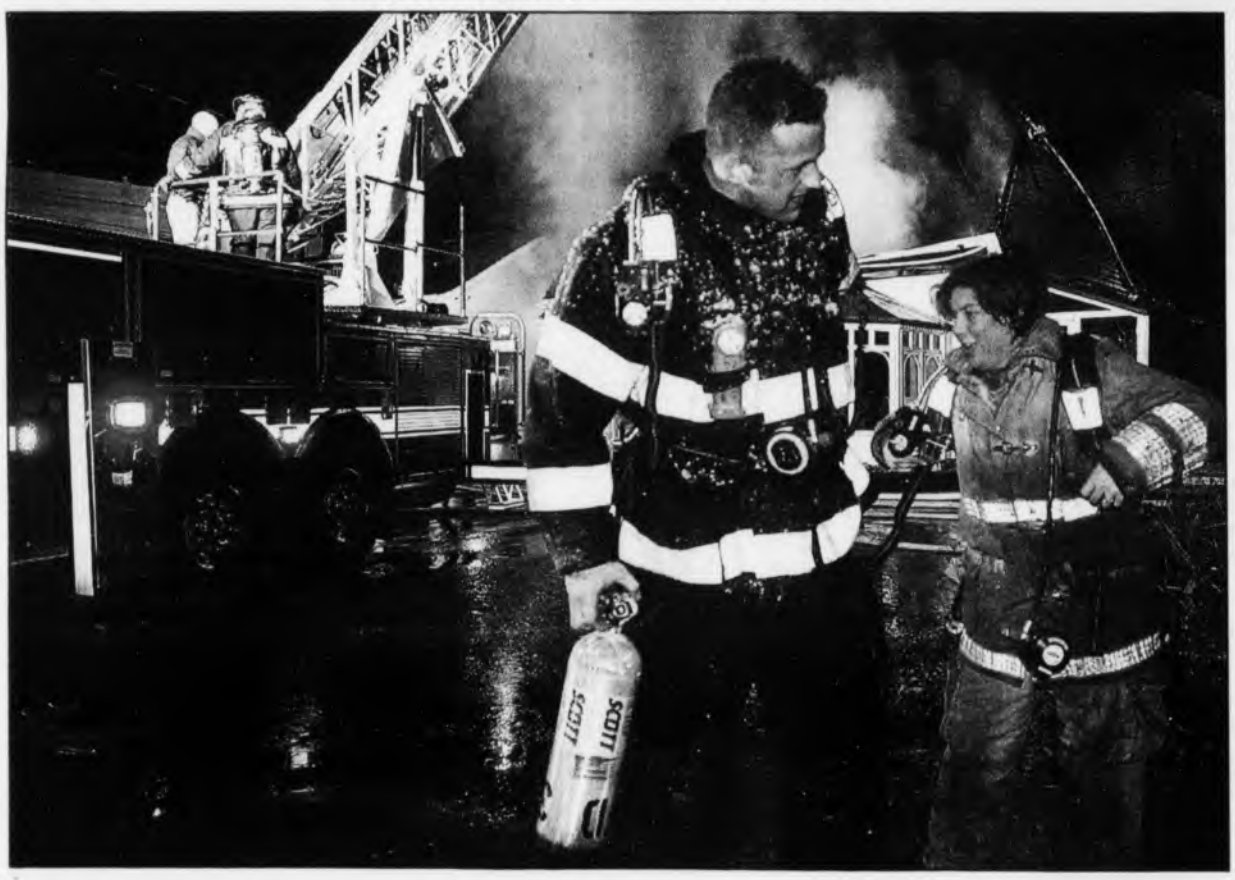
By 7 p.m. there were no flames visible from the outside of the building, but a good deal of smoke. Some firefighters could be seen at the top of the ladder truck with their axes, cutting through the roof to ensure water could combat what seemed to be the origin of the fire. The front windows of the store were completely shattered and looked melted from the heat of the flames.

As the fire subsided, it became clear the right side of the building, or the showroom side, had sustained more damage than the left, Silvia said. He added the DPW provided another very valuable service as it brought a backhoe to the scene, which was used to remove a portion of the right side of the building that was in danger of collapse. He said the way the building was set up, it was almost as if there were two separate buildings with a connecting piece in the middle. The left side of the building has substantial smoke and water damage, but was not completely destroyed by fire, he said.

There was no wind Tuesday night, which helped keep the fire contained. "We were very lucky, that's very true," said Silvia. "The building to the rear, the Adamo Salon, is roughly 20 to 25-feet away and only has the alley between it and the building at 22 Depot Court," he said. He noted while the building next door, which houses apartments as well as Farsh Oriental Rugs and Antiques, is close, the Adamo building is closer and could have been in great danger.

Silvia said there were no injuries throughout the course of the night. "Everyone kept safe," he said, adding even with the chilly temperatures, "We didn't really notice the cold." He said if the wind had been blowing, the situation would have been far worse, as it not only would have caused the fire to spread rapidly, it would have made an already cold situation even colder.

The fire department officially cleared the scene at 11:38 p.m. Silvia said a vehicle was left on detail overnight just in case the flames started back up again. The vehicle was still on the scene Wednesday morning.



Representatives from the Fire Marshall's office were on the scene both Tuesday night and Wednesday. Silvia said any time there is a fire of this magnitude the state is called in to conduct an arson investigation. "This is not being classified as suspicious," said Silvia, adding although the cause of the fire is still under investigation, it does not appear to be of a suspicious nature.

Silvia said the Fire Marshall's office would likely bring experts in heating and electrical systems to the scene. The building had an old heating system located up in its attic, which appears to be where the fire originated. "The experts will come down here and try to sift through the wreckage," he said, and will hopefully find the cause of the fire soon.

Inspiring 'One Book' author visits with Rotary Club

Shares his story about 'positives'

"It's about turning negatives into positives."
— David McGillivray, 'The Last Pick'

By Samantha Brown

Co-authors Linda Glass Fechter of Cohasset and David McGillivray held a book signing at the end of Monday's Rotary Club Meeting. The book the two wrote, "The Last Pick," is being read by the town as part of the "One Book One Cohasset" program, sponsored by the library.

Sitting at the round tables of the Lightkeeper's Residence, those who attended Monday's Rotary Club meeting were inspired. In conjunction with the "One Book One Cohasset" program, which will formally kick off Feb. 5, author and marathon runner David McGillivray, who is also the Boston Marathon Race Director, came to share his story with the first of many groups he will visit with in town.

Cohasset is taking part in the One Book program for the first time this year. Spearheaded by the staff at the Paul Pratt Library, the goal is to have the town collectively read McGillivray's book titled, "The Last Pick," and as a community participate in activities and discussions which will bring everyone closer together with a common thread. The program will culminate April 1 in conjunction with the Rotary Club's Road Race By the Sea, which McGillivray plans to run.

Cohasset resident Linda Glass Fechter co-authored McGillivray's book, which is one of the reasons the library decided to choose "The Last Pick" for its first One Book selection. But even without the Cohasset tie, McGillivray's story is so inspiring, the library felt it would strike a chord with everyone in the community, young and old.

"To think a community has selected our book as the inaugural book for 'One Book' means an awful lot," said McGillivray, adding while in his lifetime he has received many accolades for his athletic ability, being recognized for the book is a new and wonderful feeling.

When asked what his book is about, McGillivray says he always gives the same answer — "It's about the person reading it." He said anyone who reads his book could identify with the message and apply it to their own lives. "It's about turning negatives into positives."

For sending that message, McGillivray has been asked to speak at more than 1500 venues, from kindergarten classrooms to prisons to the Junior Catholic Daughters of the Americas to the Rochester School for the Deaf. However, he noted everyone has a story to tell, and anyone can provide inspiration.

But his story begins with his childhood. McGillivray said he always wanted to be a "stud athlete" but was, in a sense, handicapped, due to his short stature. "I was vertically challenged," he said, standing at 5-foot 5-inches tall. "I couldn't dunk, I couldn't hit the ball over the fence," and in turn, he would always be the last picked for sports teams, which provided the title for his book.

"It was so devastating for a young boy who only wanted to be an athlete" to always be picked last by his peers he said, adding growing up, basketball and baseball were his two favorite sports and he practiced all the time. He would throw free throw after free throw and continued to beat his own records. As a sophomore in high school, he tried out for the basketball team and was the last player cut. He was told by the coach, "If you were just 5 inches taller, you'd be my starting guy."

That afternoon McGillivray challenged a 6-foot 5-inch center to a game of 21. "I beat him," he said, adding it was a very defining moment in his life.

Feeling discouraged, McGillivray went home and took out a marker and made a sign that said, "Please God, make me grow," and hung it over his bed. "As I got older, He did make me grow — internally, because isn't that where it counts? Inside, I was 6-foot 5," he said.

It was training for the sports he loved that led him to running. "You become a runner by default," he said, adding very few people set out to be runners, they just fall into it while getting in shape for something else. For him, running was a sport no one could tell him not to do, and his size didn't matter.

Boston Marathon

At the age of 17, McGillivray heard about the Boston Marathon for the first time. He said although he grew up in Medford, somehow the race had never come across his radar screen. He called up his grandfather and told him he was going to run, and he in turn was very supportive of that goal. He told McGillivray he would be waiting for him at Coolidge Corner.

McGillivray began the race well and made it about 18 miles — to heartbreak hill — when he just couldn't go any farther and collapsed in the street. A police officer saw he was in distress and brought him to Newton-Wellesley Hospital. All the while, he couldn't stop thinking about his grandfather, waiting for him to pass by. He came home from the hospital later that evening and called his grandfather and there was no answer and McGillivray, picturing his grandfather still there waiting for him, felt awful for letting him down.

When he finally got in touch with his grandfather, he apologized for his failure, to which his grandfather said, "You didn't fail, you learned." What he learned was that it is not reasonable to set reckless goals and one must set realistic goals to achieve anything in life. His grandfather told him to begin training and said he would be there again next year, waiting for him on the marathon course.

McGillivray's grandfather passed away two months later. Training continued until McGillivray was running 120 miles per week. He was ready to race, until he came down with a terrible stomach virus two days before the marathon. While his parents advised he not run in his condition, McGillivray had made a promise to his grandfather and wasn't about to give up. He asked that his parents not deny him at least the opportunity to start the race, and they agreed.

Five miles in, he felt awful. He ran by his parents, his mother was crying, "as mother's sometimes do," and his father was proudly taking pictures. He kept going for as long as he could, until he hit the point where his body just couldn't take anymore. He collapsed on the curb and once again felt as if he had failed his grandfather.

But when he looked up, now in an unfamiliar section of Boston, he suddenly saw something he recognized. Across the street was the cemetery where his grandfather had been buried. He remembered how his grandfather promised he was going to be there on the day of the race, and there he was. With that, he found the strength he needed and picked himself up off the ground and began running. It took him 4-1/2 hours, but he finished the Boston Marathon, and he's run that race every year for the past 35.

Once he got the marathon under his belt, he set his sights a little higher. Going back into his childhood, he recalled on his 12th birthday he ran around the pond where his family was staying, which was six miles. Later that day, he ran around the pond again and realized he had run 12 miles on his 12th birthday. Every year since then, he has set the goal of running as far as he is old, and he hasn't yet disappointed himself.

Last year, on his 52nd birthday, he began in Hopkinton and ran the Boston Marathon course — all 26 miles of it. He then turned around and ran the course again, completing his 52 miles.

But that was nothing compared to the time he ran clear across the country. "I was the Forrest Gump of the '70s, way before the movie was even made," he said. Beginning in Medford, Ore., he ran 3,452 miles in 80 days, ending his journey in Medford, Mass.

Jimmy Fund

When he first came up with the idea of running across the country, McGillivray knew he wanted to do it for a cause. He needed something more than his own drive to keep him going when things got tough, and raising money for a charity would be just the thing he needed — but which charity? At that point he was working in the Hancock tower in Boston and one night, he looked out the window and saw a sign at Fenway Park for the Jimmy Fund. Since it was founded in 1948, the Jimmy Fund has supported the fight against cancer in children and adults at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

McGillivray called Ken Coleman, former Jimmy Fund director, Red Sox announcer, and Cohasset resident, to pitch his idea. Coleman invited him over to his office, and after three hours, they had a deal. "Ken Coleman gave me something no one else ever did — a chance. I'll never forget him and that's why I gave a dedication in the book to him," he said.

McGillivray paid a visit to the children in the clinic before setting out on his journey. He said seeing their strength helped him stay strong and keep working toward his goal. He boarded a plane and headed for the west coast to begin his trek on the other side of the country for two reasons. One, he quipped, was that he has heard prevailing winds go west to east. The other, it would be mentally easier: he would be running home.

McGillivray ran for 10 miles at a time, and then would stop to use the restroom, eat and rest. He would then get back on the road and he repeated this cycle about 5 times per day. He said instead of setting one huge goal, he set many smaller goals and completed his larger goal in pieces.

Of all the states he ran across, the toughest was Pennsylvania, which is very hilly. "I upped my miles to 57 a day just to get out," he said.

When he finished, 32,000 people greeted McGillivray at Fenway Park, and he ran around the stadium holding the check for the Jimmy Fund. He had never had such a proud moment.

After making it back home safely, McGillivray went on Good Morning America and was asked if he would run across the country again. His response, "Why would I?" He said he sees his life as continually moving forward and that is a goal he has reached and he doesn't need to complete again. "My best accomplishment is my next one," he said.

McGillivray has competed in roughly 121 total marathons, including the Hawaiian Iron Man competition eight times. He ran a marathon blindfolded to raise money for the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton, where his brother worked. Even blindfolded being helped by two guides, he still finished the marathon in just over 3 hours. "I would've run faster, but they couldn't keep up," he quipped.

Today, McGillivray is the man behind the race, organizing the event and riding in the lead vehicle. However, that doesn't stop him from running the race after it is over and his direction is no longer needed. "For the last 19 years, I've been the very last runner to come in at the Boston Marathon," he said, and he wouldn't have it any other way.

Over the years, McGillivray has learned many lessons from his experiences. He has learned that failure usually precedes success and you've got to try something and maybe even fail before you can succeed. He had learned that it is possible to live your dreams, and people who say something cannot be done should not interrupt those doing it. But above all, he said with a laugh, "No matter where in this country my car breaks down, I know I can always run home."

The Rotary Club meets every Monday at 6:30 at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island. Copies of "The Last Pick" can be found at the Paul Pratt Library, Buttonwood Books and other major book retailers.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Stormwater controls

If someone had told us when we picked journalism as a career that we would be writing about catch basins and stormwater, we might have chosen a different path.

But it did not take us long to realize that stormwater issues, as are sewer matters, are interesting and have a direct effect on quality of life.

Let's face it – unwanted, polluted water is not a nice thing.

Therefore, we fully endorse establishing a Stormwater Commission whose job will be to focus like a laser on the problem.

Cohasset is unique for a couple of reasons. The most obvious is that it has concerned residents willing to dive into this issue and try to find ways to improve the environment. The second is that Cohasset – as beautiful as it is with all of its rocky ledge – is about as unfriendly to drainage as a place can get.

As with most boards — whether appointed or elected — there could be some overlap. But we think the Planning Board, for example, will be able to call on the Stormwater Commission for assistance and advice; as will the Zoning Board of Appeals and Conservation Commission.

When the Mariner editor started covering Cohasset back in 1992, she recalls the Conservation Commission asking Selectmen one night whatever had happened to the Drainage Committee. The ConCom saw a need for some assistance and there was actually a Drainage Committee listed among myriad other town committees but no one could recall whatever happened to it.

That was a few years before the infamous downtown flood that saw U.S. mail being delivered by rowboat to the Post Office on Ripley Road.

Leave it to Mother Nature to get our attention.

The current Stormwater Committee is supporting a bylaw that will be before voters at the annual Town Meeting that would include establishing a Stormwater Commission that would implement a Stormwater Improvement Plan. The plan would endeavor to reduce flooding and pollution and a new permitting program would require new development or redevelopment to reduce stormwater impacts with the project.

You might be rolling your eyes and this expansion of government. But before you make up your mind, read this week's Health Notes.

Steve Bobo says for years, the Board of Health has been pleading with the Town to increase public works staff in order to take care of unhealthy catch basins and storm structures propagating polluted runoff into our water resources.

A Stormwater Commission could help us get our arms around that problem and others relating to runoff.

Supports marriage equality for gays

TO THE EDITOR:

In Mary Ford's interview with state Senator Robert Hedlund (Cohasset Mariner, Jan. 19) she quotes him as saying that he is "tormented" about the gay marriage issue and undecided on how he will vote in the second Constitutional Convention which will consider whether to put the question on the ballot in 2008. Those of us who have worked on behalf of MassEquality and its campaign to preserve marriage for gay couples have seen an increasing number of legislators switch from uncertainty and even negativity about same-sex marriage to a positive position. Rep. Garrett Bradley, originally ambivalent, is now a strong supporter of MassEquality.

In the course of approaching voters outside supermarkets and on street corners to ask for their support for gay marriage, I've often heard people mention a relative, a friend, or a co-worker who is gay. Typically, they'll say something like, "Why shouldn't they have the same rights that we have?" and are happy to sign postcards to their legislators on behalf of same-sex marriage. One woman said she worked in a physician's office: "My boss is gay. She's great and her partner is great, so of course I support what you're doing!"

I am the mother of four adult children, one of whom is gay. I want him to have the same opportunity as his three married siblings. It is well, I think, for legislators to take into account the feelings of the many straight supporters of gay marriage among their constituents. Love is a powerful force and should always be taken seriously.

Train survey is off-track

TO THE EDITOR:

The Making Tracks article on Jan. 27th purports to offer the "last chance" to weigh in, for or against, a "late" MBTA train leaving South Station after 10 p.m.

I have enjoyed reading the column and appreciate the updates on the work the "T" is doing in Cohasset. I must have missed, however, the decision to make it the method by which important decisions like this will be made or influenced, as did the 99 percent of Cohasset's residents who have decided, for whatever reason, not to reply to the survey.

Did the MBTA decide that this survey would be how they would measure public opinion, knowing that the results would have no statistical viability? Or is it the lame effort of the Mariner to shroud this information gathering effort with a legitimacy that is neither newsworthy or fair and balanced. You do a significant disservice to the process by reporting a response by 41 people out of 7,075 (.6 percent of the population) as representative either way.

Stick to reporting the work updates, and let the MBTA commission a poll if they truly want to know how the Greenbush Line host towns feel about a train leaving Boston after 10 p.m.

HEALTH NOTES

Managing stormwater is health issue

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last year, the water problems of the Town were brought into focus on Mother's Day when we received more than 7 inches of rain in a few hours. Numerous areas were flooded. Cellars were filled with contaminated stormwater. At the time, the Town's volunteer monitors from the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research were taking water quality measurements and very high bacteria levels were observed. The conditions provided an accurate snapshot of worst-case drainage conditions all over Town but especially in Town Center where shops were flooded and water levels reached a crisis point.

This at a time when the Town revitalization project was installing structures all over the downtown area. In all some 31 stormwater structures have been upgraded: eight new structures added by the Town and two more by the MBTA as a part of its required expansion of parking facilities and track drainage. Most of the new stormwater structures are referred to as "green" structures, meaning that they can extract pollutants from the stormwater passing through them. In all, the Town has more than 1500 stormdrains and storm-water collection structures.

Unless they are cleaned, catchbasins are a breeding ground for bacteria, pathogens and mosquitoes, including the Culex responsible for Eastern Equine Encephalitis.

The operation of a stormdrain is simple. It consists of a concrete lined hole into which pipes drain water from adjoining streets and areas where water collects. The hole is generally sized to accept the expected rainfall from a rain event of a magnitude expected every 25 years or some multiple of the expected average rainfall event. In addition, the stormdrain is supposed to collect sand and debris from the adjoining area, which

Small-minded solutions won't fix problem

LUCIA FLIBOTTE

I find myself compelled to respond to Lee Jenkins letter to the editor that was published in the Jan. 25 Cohasset Mariner. I have a difficult time in trying to figure what I find most troubling with her letter, is it her blatant hypocrisy in criticizing the Building Committee for actually accomplishing a feat that this town has not seen since, in that they delivered a multi-million dollar construction project on time and on budget? Or do I ask if Lee Jenkins really expect any of us who have seen her vehemently oppose any school-related measures on a consistent basis for the past 18 years to believe she would have supported this same committee if they started to over-spend on the school projects to make them more "green"? Do I pose the troubling question as to why a supposed fiscal watch group leader would praise a member of the Board of Selectmen for putting forth a proposal to literally shut the lights out on our children while they try to learn as a fiscally responsible thing to do, yet she has said nary a word about the hundreds and thousands of dollars this same board has wasted on the failed Cook Estate Project. I think anyone who ever believed that Ms. Jenkins was a really just a concerned taxpayer and not an anti-school zealot should really ponder this last observation.

Ms. Jenkin's letter also prompted me to reflect on the issue of leadership or actually the lack of leadership our town has suffered over the past few years. One only needs to take a look at our neighboring towns and compare what is going on in these towns to what we are doing in Cohasset: Hingham has approved a $1.7 million article to address its overcrowded schools and I don't think trailers will be an option; Scituate is currently transforming its harbor front and in the process, increasing its tax base; Norwell recently approved its override to maintain key town service; Hull is at the forefront of tapping into alternative energy. Hull's wind-turbines. Scituate's new waterfront, Hingham's commitment to its schools, Norwell's commitment to its citizens all stand as stark reminders of what effective, pro-active leadership can accomplish.

...we spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on the failed Cook Project, not including lost and much needed additional tax revenues. How much did this folly cost the town?

And during this same time, what did we accomplish in Cohasset? Well, as previously mentioned, we spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on t he failed Cook Project, not including lost and much needed additional tax revenues. How much did this folly cost the town? I don't know but my fear is that our town's Board of Selectmen doesn't know either. We did make some improvements to the village. Did we revitalize the village, not really. Maybe I expected more than a resurfaced street, added curbs and trees from the $1.6 million grant. We completed renovations to the police and fire station but alas, this project was either mismanaged at the town level or we were short changed by the contractor. Whatever the reason, this project was not completed on time or on budget. We also have the sewer project; yet another town project that we won't have to worry about coming in on budget. And just like the failed Cook Estate project, our concerned fiscal watch groups remain eerily silent on the overruns on this project.

So when faced with continuing budget and fiscal issues that have plagued our town for the past few years, including lack of new revenue sources, reduced state aid, and rising operating costs, what type of forward thinking solutions can we expect from our elected leaders? Well if Gary Vanderweil's recent proposal is any indication, we should expect to be very disappointed. For those unfamiliar or uninformed, Mr. Vanderwiel wants to turn out the lights at the schools between 9a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Literally he wants to leave or children in the dark. He wants our kids and the staff to get by on natural sunlight during these hours. This is his solution to address what he perceives to be excessive energy consumption at the schools. If we as a community can move beyond the embarrassment of such a proposal, we have to ask ourselves, shouldn't we expect more from our so called town "leaders".

While our neighboring towns have new harbor fronts, new schools in the works, wind-turbines, and decent town services, we get "turn the lights off kids" as a solution to our town problems. We have to come to our collective senses and realize that small-minded solutions will not address or correct the larger issues facing our town. Let the fiscal watch group hypocrites among us praise these petty solutions but the rest of us have to take notice that we as a community are not being well served by our current elected officials. If we don't address this weakness in our town, then we all should be prepared to send are children with one more school supply list item: Flashlights.

Getting right back into the game

DIANE K. DANIELSON

A few years ago, I had the chance to meet Barbara Corcoran, the rags to riches Grand Dame of New York City real estate, and hear her speak about how she built such a successful business. Her talks are always a hilarious mix of business savvy and homespun advice, as one would expect from the author of "If You Don't Have Big Breasts, Put Ribbons on Your Pigtails: And Other Lessons I Learned from My Mom."

However, one comment she made during that speech has always stuck with me. She pointed out that the only difference between the most successful salespeople in her organization and the rest was not in the number of rejections, failures or setbacks they faced, but rather in how quickly they recovered and got right back into the game.

I often think of Barbara's comment during ice skating season, because it was shortly after we met that I was trying to teach my son to skate. Now, my child is not what one would call a skating prodigy (no Olympic moments in our future) and our outings at that time tended to consist of me holding him upright between my legs as we circled the rink until my back gave out.

But he only started crying harder, and it took me a few seconds before I realized that the last thing he wanted to do was to leave.

But shortly after I met Barbara, we were in Colorado visiting friends and had the opportunity to skate outside on a lake where they rented not only skates but also hockey equipment. This was a big change from being on a crowded MDC rink in Boston. Moreover, with a stick gripped firmly in his clutches for the first time and facing what seemed like acres of uninhabited ice, my son magically transformed from timid, hand-holding, cautious shuffler, to mini-mite hockey player skating off on his own to slap the puck around with a young friend. While not an Olympic moment, it certainly qualified as a Kodak moment.

Unfortunately, our combined joy — his in finding a new skill; mine in being able to skate upright — ended prematurely when he was the unwitting recipient of an accidental high stick to the face. As I carried him over to shore and packed snow on his bleeding lip (relieved that there wasn't going to be any permanent damage or visits from the tooth fairy that night), I assured him that we could return our skates and go back to the lodge immediately.

But he only started crying harder, and it took me a few seconds before I realized that the last thing he wanted to do was to leave. So, once I stopped the bleeding, I did what any good hockey mom would do: Cleaned up the dried blood, wiped away his tears, handed him the hockey stick and sent him back off across the lake.

As he rejoined his friend and play resumed, all I could think (besides wondering where I could find him a hockey helmet with a face mask) was:

- Plane tickets to Vail: $600
- Rental ice skates & equipment: $12
- Watching your son pick himself up and get right back into the game: priceless

While not yet an official "hockey mom," Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident and CEO of DowntownWomensClub.com. More random musings can be found on her blog at www.womensDISH.com.

'What motivates us to change behaviors?'

TOWARDS A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

Sit back for a moment and think of a really exquisite meal that you have had. It most likely consisted of some favorite foods, cooked to perfection, served with pride, and shared in the company of true friends or family. I have had this meal many times and remember that positively agreeable feeling that can last for hours or even days afterwards. I have also had this meal many times when I didn't stop eating when I had enough — for whatever reason — mindlessly caught up in conversation, thinking I may never have anything that tastes that good again, or hearing my mother's voice from childhood commanding me to clean my plate. The result, of course, was an uncomfortable bloat that stole whatever possibilities had been unfolding for the remainder of the evening. The digestive system has a powerful feedback loop in place. And while I don't ever seem to have the specific answers as to why enough wasn't enough, at least I was forced to take serious pause at my behavior.

When I think about where our world is headed and how we are directly contributing to its direction, I can't help but wonder why can't there be an equivalent feedback loop when it comes to the other parts of our life besides eating. I mean, wouldn't it be helpful if we got queasy when we were at the checkout buying more than we need and more than we can afford. And wouldn't it be useful if a wave of nausea came over us as we turned up the thermostat instead of trying a sweater first. And wouldn't it be advantageous if we had a twinge of indigestion if one or two days go by and we haven't gone outside for some fresh air and deep gratitude of the beauty that surrounds us.

When you go to the wastebasket remind yourself that there is no such place as "away" when throwing away your trash.

The title of this column is Towards a Sustainable Cohasset. I hope to use this forum to delve into some of the things that we can do as individuals and as a town to see to it that our Earth will be around. It only seems fitting to kick-off with an article that gets us thinking about the root of the issue: what motivates us to be conscious? And furthermore, what motivates us to change our behaviors? Much of the time we act out of habit or convenience. Deep down we know this does nothing to nourish our individual or collective souls.

The good news is there is a feedback loop in place for our lives, not just our bellies. Our whole being is wired with an internal voice that keeps us in line with integrity and truth. It is the voice that reminds us that we are enough which is the foundation for us to be able to take on the outside world. The catch is that we have to be conscious in order to hear the voice, which is by no means an easy task in the cacophony of modern life. Not to mention the process of being conscious after a period of not is oftentimes uncomfortable, messy and slow-going.

There is hope, however, and it doesn't require a year at an ashram, a therapist or a self-help book. Simply put: do something.

Act "as if" you had all of the time, money and well-toned consciousness and do something that seems right. Eventually your internal voice will get louder and louder and take over as your beacon of what is right. It's the feedback loop that can save us.

(This is where those inspiring quotes come in handy like Mahatma Ghandi's "You must be the change you wish to see in the world." or Helen Keller's "I am only one, but I am still one. I cannot do everything, but I can do something.")

In the spirit of there is no better time than the present the following are some ideas to get you started: Think consequentially. When you go to the wastebasket remind yourself that there is no such place as "away" when throwing away your trash. Buy Green. Realize that every time you purchase something you are casting a vote for what gets produced and sold. Buy less. The freedom from unnecessary, meaningless stuff is priceless.

Get Involved. Cohasset has a number of opportunities to create change. Holly Hill Farm grows delicious organic vegetables, which makes eating locally and seasonally simply irresistible. Sustainable Cohasset is kicking off a film series with An Inconvenient Truth at Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Feb. 8 at 7pm. The Trustees of Reservations and their beautiful properties help keep us connected to nature and so clearly remind us that we are the stewards of the Earth.

Now is the time. Cohasset is the place.

Let's rhyme it for Boston

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Even as we speak, the Boston City Council is gearing up for a vote on one of the great questions of our century — Should Boston have an official poet laureate?

Boy, is that a world-class city or what?

The job, according to Tobin's proposal, would carry no stipend but don't count on the councilors to overlook that opportunity...

"It would bring another special quality to major city events and chronicle the everyday happenings of the city from a poetry point of view," said Councilor John Tobin, who proposed the new post.

Yeah, major events like Tom Menino's birthday and everyday happenings like the first drive-by slaying of the year and the next family to move to North Carolina.

The job, according to Tobin's proposal, would carry no stipend but don't count on the councilors to overlook that opportunity, especially if one of them has a nephew who is between jobs and can figure out that June rhymes with moon.

The poet laureate in Denver is paid a stipend of $2,000 a year, which is parking meter money to our public servants, and, as far as I can see, all he has to do this winter is find words that rhyme with snow.

If the stipend were worthwhile, I might even apply for the job myself, having grown up reading the poems of Edgar A. Guest and the rhymes of an anonymous poet whose work appeared on the walls of the boys' basement and usually involved someone from Nantucket.

Did anyone ever write poetry on the walls of the girls' basement?

I know that girls do write poetry because I was once married to a minor poet who taught me that poetry did not necessarily have to rhyme, that real poets did not consider Edgar A. Guest one of them and that publishers do not break down doors to get you in print.

But I digress . . .

The office of poet laureate goes back to 1668 in England and includes such powerhouse versifiers as John Dryden, William Wordsworth and Alfred Lord Tennyson. They are appointed for life.

The U. S. has one too but they are appointed and reappointed for one year by the Librarian of Congress. The last one I know of was Louise Gluck (who?) but she has probably been replaced and I haven't got my copy of the World Almanac for 2007 yet.

The Globe, which monitors culture for us whether we like it or not, has been following closely Councilor Tobin's search for a poet laureate for Boston, even giving it front page importance alongside the war in Iraq and the Patriots.

The Globe even quoted John Hynes, the mayor of Boston 50 years ago, who once wrote, in a poem called "Boston:"

"Don't you love this city with its wrinkled brow

"And its streets laid out by the wandering cow?"

I once knew a woman who would have said that there was something Edgar A. Guestian about that bit of doggerel.

Don't give up the day job, John.

Course of current Iraq policy subject of political forum

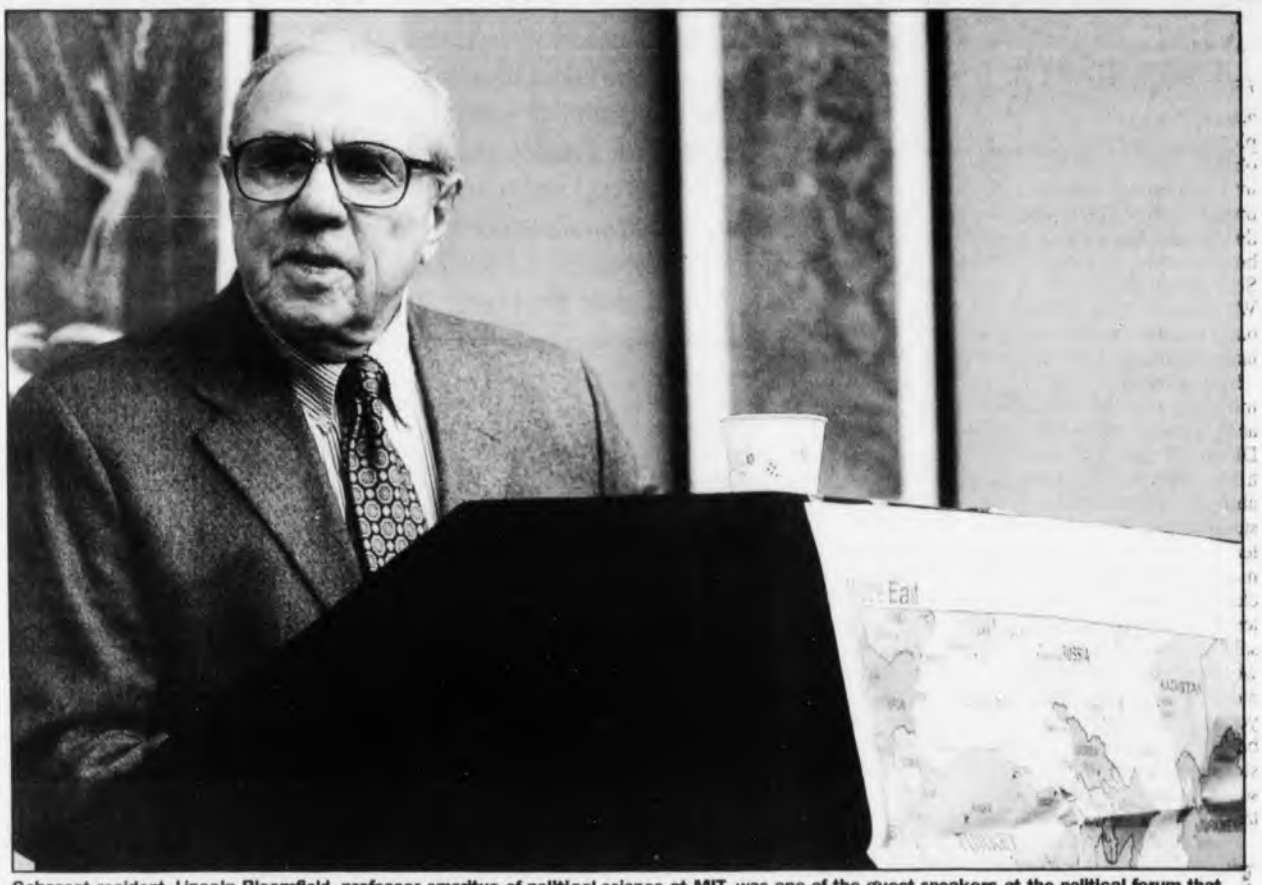
By Tom Callahan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset Political Forum opened its second season Jan. 17 with an informative discussion about the Iraq War and the course of current policy. A standing-room only crowd of 75-plus people at the public meeting room at the Cohasset Library listened to local experts Lincoln Bloomfield, professor emeritus of political science at MIT, and Charles Higginson, 30-year veteran of the Foreign Service.

Drawing from their personal experiences in US foreign policy, they provided their insights on the historical background of the conflict, on the efficacy of US policy to date, and on the strategy choices chosen by the President or otherwise available going forward.

Also offering insights into the current situation in Washington was U.S. Rep. Delahunt's chief of staff, Mark Forrest.

Those in attendance were engaged by these speakers, whose presentation was followed by numerous questions and commentary from the group. While not intending to come to any solutions, it was clear from the discourse that there are misgivings about the present and proposed policies of the administration in the readership area, one that transcends political affiliations and other demographics.



The Forum was filmed and can be viewed at a local blog site: BelowBoston.com.

Cohasset Political Forum was formed last year to provide an opportunity for interested and busy people to discuss and debate political issues of the day. Although sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, as a separate institution it is officially non-partisan and welcomes all political views to join in civil political discussion. Formats vary, both with and without featured speakers.

The next session of the Forum will discuss US environmental policy in the face of global climate change. The format will be a roundtable discussion with a number of local experts and activists invited. The session will take place Saturday, Feb. 10, at 9:30 a.m., at Cohasset Library.

The Forum welcomes ideas and organizational help for future sessions and can be reached via the CDTC chairwoman Agnes McCann at Agnesmccann@comcast.net.

Cohasset resident, Lincoln Bloomfield, professor emeritus of political science at MIT, was one of the guest speakers at the political forum that focused in the U.S. involvement in Iraq.

accumulates as a result of snowplowing, casual disposal of objects, and other matter washed into the streets from adjacent property. One large pipe then directs the water to an "outfall," a brook, stream or the Harbor. Since the EPA enacted the Clean Water Act of 1977, discharge of outfalls into swamps and wetlands has been prohibited.

Maintenance of these stormdrains has been routinely accomplished by a man from the DPW driving one clamshell truck. In one day he can clean out about 10 drains. In order for the stormdrain system to control bacterial contamination in the summer, each drain should be cleaned at least quarterly. In winter, sand from snow plowing and salt treatment depends on the weather, but also one cleaning is required on average quarterly. If you do the math, the Town must be prepared to clean out about 16 stormdrains daily. Naturally, some stormdrains are less important than others, but the DPW is stretched thin with catchbasin cleaning as only one of its many tasks. For years, the Board of Health has been pleading with the Town to increase public works staff in order to take care of unhealthy catchbasins and storm structures propagating polluted runoff into our water resources.

The Public Works Department has seen no increase in personnel in at least 15 years, certainly none for maintenance of the improvements necessary to ensure the removal of our stormwater in a safe and healthy manner. Unless they are cleaned, catchbasins are a breeding ground for bacteria, pathogens and mosquitoes, including the Culex responsible for Eastern Equine Encephalitis.

A major new problem is that like many technological improvements, the new "green" storm-drain systems require a different cleaning method using a new, more sophisticated "vacuum" truck which requires more time to clean a structure and which requires special handling and disposal of its waste material. And if these new drains in the center of Town and in our parking areas are not maintained, the flooding in town from even slightly abnormal rain events will make the results of the Mother's Day storm look trivial. Cost of the new truck is high, but can be offset by a State grant. But it needs a trained driver and Public Works support. It's is a health issue.

Stormwater in back yards; draining into other's property and filling our streets with bacteria laden water is no longer a nuisance. It is a public health threat. The stormwater issues now being brought up by the Stormwater Committee and discussed and deliberated upon by many in town are vital to the health of every one of our children and us. The Town needs a Stormwater Bylaw to manage its drainage and stormwater problems now!

Not after we're drowning in the stuff.

Poll at Selectmen's request

To the Editor:

(Editor's note Mr. Corry copied his letter-to-the-Editor that appears this week to the 'Greenbush guys'. Here is their response.

Dear Mr. Corry,

Mark Brennan and I are conducting this poll at the request of the Selectmen. Our commitment is to report the results back to them. We are trying to gather information about the resident's feelings. Where they choose to take it from here is up to them.

The Mariner has absolutely nothing to do with it. They are printing what we write.

The thing that started this whole issue is a letter from Dan Grabauskas to all Old Colony towns asking them whether they would be in favor of a "late" train. From what we hear other towns have just determined their position from the Board of Selectmen only. We're sorry to have upset you with our attempt to see what people think about this issue.

Train foes thanked

To the Editor:

Even though the cost of rebuilding the Greenbush Line has increased, it is my opinion that the cost increases were worth the concessions that the MBTA made. For instance having the train go on the surface through the center of downtown Hingham would have been awful.

I applaud the efforts of local train foes and the efforts of Senator Hedlund and of Representative Bradley. They were looking out for our future, and I appreciate that.

Need wider participation in budget matters

To the Editor:

It is encouraging that two members of the Advisory Board are thinking about a way to change the format at Town Meeting to approve the budgets on a priority basis. This is an important endeavor and last year during my campaign for school committee I outlined an action plan, Progress through Priorities.

In order to get a town-wide consensus, the next step involves formulating a policy that would be representative of the majority.

With the manner that the Town Meetings have been packed by special interest groups for certain articles, it has proven to be an ineffective venue for reflecting the real choices of Cohasset taxpayers.

One way that was put forth to bring equity has been through citizens' petitions. Articles have been before Town Meetings twice to allow the will of the town to prevail in financial matters by having monetary articles outside of the regular budget go to a ballot. These ideas have not passed muster with the attendees. If the articles could have gone to a ballot instead they would have passed as the ballot has historically had the most far-reaching involvement

The fate of the majority will continue to be decided by the handful of attendees at Town Meetings until an electronic or other format can be arranged to include a wider participation in Town Meetings. Another alternative is for our elected officials to roll their sleeves up and devise an acceptable ballot bylaw for these pressing, ongoing financial questions.

Sewer users to bear full cost

To the Editor:

The Mariner's Jan. 26 Candidates Corner featuring Peter Richardson contains a seriously misleading statement. It reads: "With the highest debt load per capita in the commonwealth, more leverage is out of the question, especially with the Little Harbor sewer project scheduled to commence." This statement implies that the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue sewer project will increase the town's debt. That is incorrect.

Voters authorized the town to share the cost of sewers in the town's other sewer districts, but they rejected sharing costs with the residents of the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue Sewer District as well as the Jerusalem Road Sewer District. These residents must bear the full cost. All funds extended will be repaid by betterments assessed on the users of the sewer systems in those two districts. It is important that candidates and voters understand that these new sewer projects will not be adding to the town's debt.

Still undefeated

Sci-Coh swimmers finish strong against Randolph

By Alyssa Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

The Scituate-Cohasset swim team came out on top once again last Tuesday as it cruised past the Randolph Sharks. With a 5-0 record, the Sci-Cohs remain undefeated.

The boys finished with an impressive 30-point lead over Randolph besting their competitors with a final meet score of 82-52. The girls turned in an equally impressive performance as they won 82-65.

Juniors Brian McGuiness and Johnny Drybanski both swam record breaking times en route to first place finishes. McGuiness swam an excellent 100-yard freestyle and set a new team record with a time of 49.86. He also picked up a first place in the 200-yard freestyle event with a time of 1:51.55. Drybanski made Sci-Coh record history in the 100-yard breaststroke with a state sectional qualifying time of 1:08.84.

Both McGuiness and Drybanski helped contribute to several winning Sci-Coh relays. The boys 200-yard medley relay team (McGuiness, Mike Wall, Drybanski and Rob Lilly) tore up the pool with a winning time of 1:56.68. The Sci-Coh boys stole another relay victory in the 400-yard freestyle relay as Drybanski, Colin Conway, Lilly and McGuiness recorded a state final qualifying time of 3:35.10.

The girls also performed well in their meet against Randolph. Individually, junior Ashley Scott and freshman Mimi Mahoney stole the spotlight in their respective events. Scott broke the team record in the 200-yard freestyle and qualified for state sectionals with a time of 2:15.09. Mahoney sailed past competitors, winning first place in the 100-yard backstroke with a state sectional qualifying time of 1:11.31.

Freshmen Sarah Libby and John McGuiness swam personal bests. Libby swam the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 2:21.15. McGuiness finished the 200- and 500-yard freestyle events with times of 2:14.82 and 6:09.64 respectively.

"I cannot believe that each meet they seem to drop time," coach Jon Fortin said. "Since they are only freshman, we look forward to seeing more great times from them in the future."

The Sci-Coh girls relay teams all finished victoriously. Mimi Mahoney, Torey Hart, Caitlin Mahoney and Meagan Little won the 200-yard medley relay with a state sectional qualifying time of 2:06.17. Alyssa McCarthy, Caitlin Mahoney, Maura Regan and Alyssa Rogers teamed to win the 200-yard freestyle relay with a state sectional qualifying time of 2:00.08. The 400-yard freestyle relay ended the girl's meet on a high note as Scott, Caitlin Mahoney, Sheelah Scott and Little earned a state sectional qualifying time of 4:17.91.

The Sci-Coh's last duel meet of the season is Tuesday, Feb. 6, at 3:30 p.m. against Hanover/Rockland at the team's home pool in Quincy.

3 wins in a row leave CHS 3 points from tournament

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With five games to go, the Cohasset High hockey team is just three points away from qualifying for the Div. 3 state tournament.

Three straight wins have put the Skippers in that position, the two most recent coming Sunday over Mashpee (5-4) and Wednesday over Hull (7-1). Cohasset is now 7-5-2 (5-2-2 in the South Shore League).

Junior Pat Doonan scored two goals to lead an effort that saw six different players find the net. But it was one player who didn't score, freshman Harry Cipolla, that brought the house down in the third period.

A player whom head coach Bob Walsh said is "probably the smallest kid in the

Tough week for CHS boys hoops

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High boys basketball team has had its close games and not-so-close games this season.

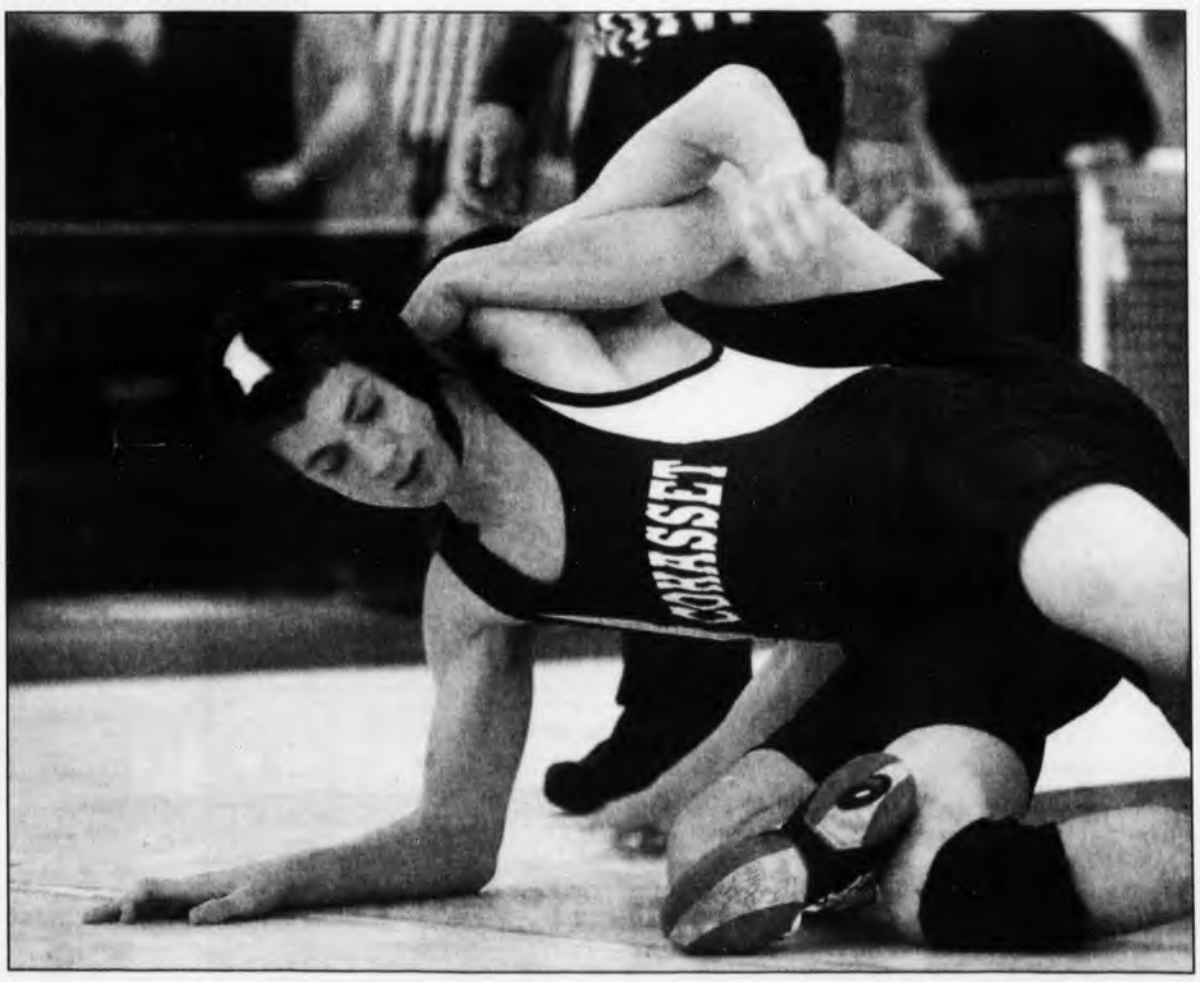
Last Friday's game against undefeated Abington fell into the latter category, as the Skippers lost by 30 points, 80-50. And unlike most games, the game was not close at half either.

Cohasset trailed 47-21 at halftime and the game was over then and there.

"We came out slow. Abington is a very, very good team and I think we'd have to play a perfect game just to keep up with them," head coach Dorian Bryant said. "They're experienced and we knew if we couldn't come out strong, we were doomed."

The highlight of the night for the Skippers was once again junior co-captain Pat McCarthy, who put up a game-high 29 points, over half of the team's total score. The next leading scorer for Cohasset was fellow junior Dave Snowdale who had six points. Leading Abington was senior Tim Wells (17 points), as the Green Wave spread the scoring around.

Cohasset once again had a rough outing in its game against Carver. Within the first four seconds of that game, Carver won the tip and scored a basket, setting the pace for the rest of the contest. Carver also played a very strong and well-disciplined press that flustered Cohasset's offense and ultimately cause them to fall behind early.



Also, Carver's ability to dominate the offensive glass gave them multiple second chances in which they were able to capitalize.

Cohasset decided to go in a different direction for this game, as it had a different starting lineup that consisted of junior Ryan Crough, sophomore John Sturino, Snowdale and the usual starters Justin Alexander and McCarthy, the two team captains.

At the end of the half Cohasset trailed by 10, 37-27, and looked lucky to only be that far behind. Coming of the bench and stepping up for the Skippers was sophomore Danny Martin, who had six points in the first half to go with four blocks. Martin finished with a team-high 19 points and a total of five blocked shots. Over the year, Martin has truly established himself as one of the better big men in the league as only a sophomore.

For the Crusaders, junior Rich King had 15 points in the first half, including three of the team's four first half three-pointers. King finished with a game-high 24 points.

The difference about this game was that the outstanding performance for Cohasset was not one of the usual players like McCarthy or Martin, but rather it was the new starter, Crough. Crough put up nine points for his career high and also played like he had been playing regularly the whole year.

After the game, Bryant explained the coaching staff's decision to start Crough.

"We felt Crough has been our best shooter in practice, and with Carver's zone defense he could help us get the most offense, along with Sturino, who is good at penetrating defenses," Bryant said.

Cohasset will hope to get some more star performances from role players in their upcoming games against Harwich and Nantucket and finally start winning games again like it did earlier in the season.

Pan-Mass Challenge registration

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge opened Jan. 16 through the PMC Web site, pmc.org. Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5.

The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. This year's goal is to raise $27 million for the Jimmy Fund, which supports cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. To date, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for the world-renowned cancer research center.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route. Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. More than 200 PMC cyclists and volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more. For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Cohasset Youth Basketball (banner headline, please)

The Grade 5A boys travel team lost a hard-fought game to Hull this past Saturday 26-24. The boys continued their improved team play against a talented opponent, and they nearly pulled out a big win.

Cohasset showed a different look throughout the first half. They appeared to settle into more of a half-court style of offense than they have shown previously. The starting line-up of Chris Haggerty, Joe Buckley, Connor Green, Brendan O'Connell and Rocco Laugelle was patient on the offensive end as they swung the ball around the perimeter leading to good looks at the basket.

The passing was crisp as the boys found seams in the Hull defense. Buckets by Green, Laugelle and Buckley – who also contributed free throws – set the boys up with an early lead. O'Connell and Laugelle also played tough defense from the guard position, as Hull had a difficult time setting up their offense inside. Guard play continued to be strong when Mark McKenna, Matthew MacCormack and sparkplug Liam Burke took over.

Cohasset led by nine near the end of the first half, when Hull scored two consecutive hoops to close the half trailing only by five. That led to a shift in momentum early in the second half. Hull had more success banging the ball inside, and Cohasset was able to maintain a small lead early on.

Haggerty was finally able to find himself an opening along the baseline for a soft jumper helped maintain the lead. Initially, McKenna, Burke, Buckley and O'Connell were able to break the Hull press, leading to good scoring opportunities by Dakota Achin, Laugelle, and Steven Maher.

Burke and Achin passed unselfishly on the break, but as the half continued, Hull's guard were able to hustle back to cut off those passing lanes. Gradually, Hull was able to find enough spaces in their half-court offense to build a small lead that Cohasset could not overcome.

Coach Liam O'Connell was pleased with the boys' performance despite the loss.

"We played very, very well against a tough opponent," he said. "We passed very well on offense and our boys played their positions very well. There was a lot of good things to take away from this game."

AAU Basketball

The BPE Heat, the only AAU Basketball program in Massachusetts directed by college basketball coaches, will hold tryouts for spring 2007. The tryout and practice location is the Asiaf Fieldhouse at Massasoit Community College in Brockton. Dates be announced tryouts for grades 5-8, and 9-11. Times are as follows.

5th and 6th grade boys: 9-11 a.m.
7th and 8th grade boys: 11 a.m. - 1 p.m.
5th and 6th grade girls: 1-3 p.m.
7th and 8th grade girls: 3-5 p.m.
Future 5th through 11th grade tryouts TBA on Web site.

The BPE Heat Program is the only AAU Basketball program directed by college head coaches. Coaches are Jim Stapleton, Sal Pina, and Dan Whitham.

With player improvement and development as the primary focus of the 18-year-old program, the BPE has had great success as more players from BPE programs have played high school varsity and college basketball than any program in Massachusetts.

A unique feature of the BPE Heat is their effort to place every player who attends tryouts on a team. As college coaches they are providing as many players as possible an opportunity to play, thus increasing the number of players who make teams. E-mail bpedirector@bpeaau.com or call coach Whitham at 508-631-5066 or visit the site http://www.bpeHEAT.org.

River Eels rolling along

Car dealership signs as dugout sponsor

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

A baseball game is nine innings. But if you are trying to put together a baseball team, that's going to take quite a bit longer.

The leaders behind the proposed Plymouth River Eels independent professional baseball team know all too well about the twists and turns starting a new team will bring.

Fielding a team in fiscal 2007 was an original goal for the group, but the deadline to accomplish that task has since come and gone. The group began the next step in its evolution Monday with the announcement that Tracy Chevrolet of Plymouth signed a 10-year deal to sponsor the home team's dugout.

"We expect that this will be the first of many announcements we will be making in the very near future," Bay Colony Baseball and Athletics President and CEO Tom O'Brien said. "Everyone is excited about professional baseball coming to America's Hometown. Wherever we go, people are asking us about the status of the project, and we are happy to report that it's not if baseball is coming to Plymouth, it's when. And it'll be here sooner rather than later."

O'Brien said interest in the River Eels has not waned since the long-talked about project was officially announced in November 2005. There are now more than 1,200 reservations for season tickets. Vice President of Business Development Michael Rothberg said the River Eels have received resumes and other inquiries from all over North America for positions ranging from manager and general manager to players on the team.

O'Brien said he would love nothing more than to have everything about the project "done yesterday," but he hoped the general public understood that there was no way the $34.5 million project could be done without careful consideration by his group as well as the town at all of the steps along the way.

"Everyone we've talked too seems to be behind this project, and we are working diligently to bring everything to fruition," the former representative of the state's 12th legislative district said. "One thing we've learned in this process is that to put specific timelines on everything isn't conducive to the ultimate goal. Hopefully every announcement brings us another step closer to that final goal.

"We are as anxious as everyone to get this team going and we know once we do, the people in this area are going to love having their own professional independent baseball team. We are moving the project forward as quickly as we can."

The organization has a purchase-and-sales agreement in hand for 28.1 acres of land behind the Colony Place shopping plaza in West Plymouth. It received some financial relief from the town in November when town meeting approved a TIF (tax increment financing) agreement.

Plans for the proposed 5,000-seat stadium for the site, which will also include office space as well as a 2,000-square foot convention center, have not been officially presented to town's planning board as of yet.

league," Cipolla laid out two Hull players with a pair of big hits, and almost scored a goal to cap a performance that had Skipper supporters chanting his name.

"Harry just works so hard at practice. He's one of those kids that's just genuinely happy to be there," Walsh said.

Senior Chris Davis, juniors Alex Goetz and Frank Wheelwright, and sophomores Andrew Smith and Andrew Bell also scored for Cohasset. Doonan, Smith, Bell, seniors Conor Holway and TJ Kennedy, junior RK Quebec and freshmen Tommy Buckley and Brendan Doonan all had assists for the Skippers.

Freshman goalie Andy McKenna carried a shutout into the third period and came away with his second win in as many starts this season.

"Andy played well," Walsh said. "He covered everything he needed to cover. I was very proud of him."

The coach also came away impressed with the production of the Smith-Davis-Buckley line, one that he said got off to a slow start this season but has been playing better and better over the last couple weeks. Smith is neck-and-neck with Pat Doonan as Cohasset's leading scorer this season, and Davis and Buckley have both come up with key goals in recent games.

The penalty kill units also had a standout performance against the Pirates, who didn't get off a single shot on the power play all night. Walsh has recently enlisted "the Doonan Squad," brothers Pat and Brendan, together on the PK. Senior forward Corbin Faber and Holway from the blue line have all been key parts of the PK effort for Cohasset.

Walsh said he believes the team has come out the funk that saw it lose three straight games before the current winning streak, and that he hopes to see it continue in upcoming challenges against Abington-East Bridgewater (Saturday, 7:30 p.m. at Rockland Ice Rink) and league-leading Norwell (Wednesday, 7:40 p.m.,Pilgrim).

"There's so much more confidence out there now," Walsh said. "They're starting to come into an understanding of the systems that I have out there for them."

Skippers 5, Mashpee 4

Cohasset overcame an always difficult trek down to Falmouth in Sunday's win over the Falcons. Junior Charlie Czerkawski had a three-point night (two goals, one assist) to lead Cohasset to victory.

Walsh said Smith "played a great game," and the penalty kill came up big again.

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming spring baseball and softball season from now through Feb. 15. Parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than Feb. 15.

Registration forms are available on the website, CYBSA.net, or at Town Hall. Registrations that are received or postmarked after Feb. 15 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made on Feb. 15. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

The registration is for boys aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of April 30, 2007. Softball registration is for girls aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of Dec. 31, 2006. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Junior League baseball and softball programs will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Major League baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the Farm league instructional baseball (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65.

Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please also be advised that effective the 2008 season, 12-year olds boys/girls must play at least one year in the American League to be an automatic selection for the Major League Baseball division. (This does not pertain to softball).

Also note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the Farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about player eligibility.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)383-1897.

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Second semester marks fresh start

If you find the course of your education traveling down a road you don't want to be on, head down to guidance...

Alles goed? Today is Groundhog Day! And if our luck is better than weatherman Phil Connors', tomorrow will not be Groundhog Day. This is the beginning of the second semester at CHS, marking the fresh start of new classes (unless you take an AP). The novelty wears off somewhere between finding out your book once belonged to Kate Bosworth, and copying down your first homework assignment.

Johnny-come-lately, this is for you. If you find the course of your education traveling down a road you don't want to be on, head down to guidance — yesterday. The popular classes are probably already full, and you may be pigeonholed into that desk. It doesn't hurt to try though, so go see if you can improve your situation.

Ah, that's right. This is where I give you the news. I'll skip the banter and get on with business.

• CHS Debaters Kevin Barber and Mike Corry continue to dazzle opponents (and themselves) with their wonderful wordplay. Kevin and Mike have not lost a match (knock on wood) since they began their tour of duty last year.

• Thank you to Mary Sease and the concerned parents who met Monday night to work on the Rubik's cube that is Post-Prom. A follow-up meeting will be held Monday, Feb. 5th, 6:30 p.m. at the Library.

• The thespians of CHS continue rehearsals of "No Exit" for entry in this year's drama festival.

• Tuesday the Middle School Spelling Bee was held in the auditorium. I still remember my elimination in the qualifying rounds, on the word overwrought.

• Wednesday was a half-day, giving all the students a chance to run rampant for an entire afternoon, reminiscent of the days of lore spent traversing the Eagle's Nest and playing "Lava Monster" on the big orange slide. The kids coming up through the system now have weak play parks, and my condolences.

• Wednesday a Cyber-Bullying meeting was held in the auditorium.

• The Safe School Initiative Bully policy planning meeting took place after school Wednesday.

• Jeudi nuit le programme français d'échange s'est réuni dans la bibliothèque.

As my fingers hit the keys, there's a small blanket of powder covering this sleepy New England town. Well, notebooks full of crisp, perforated lined pages are begging to be covered in No. 2. Get to it.

PAC to meet Feb. 6

"Autism Spectrum Disorders: Overview of the Newest Research in the Field," will be the topic of presenter Lesley Maxwell, on Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m., at Osgood School, behind Deer Hill School, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset. The workshop, sponsored by PSO/PAC, is free.

Autism is a field of research that is advancing rapidly. There are many new findings as researchers, doctors and educators work with families to find the cause of autism and to understand how best to assist individuals with autism and their families. This talk will offer a practical overview of current research and findings in the field of autism spectrum disorders for families and educators.

Cohasset Parents Advisory Council has joined with the South Shore PAC Network to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. For information, visit southshorepac@comcast.net.

What you need to know about safe ice

By John M. Worley,
Recreation Director
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

General safe ice standards

Ice safe for:	0-30 degrees	30-40 degrees	40-50 degrees
Single skaters:	1 fl inches	2 fl inches	6 inches
Couples:	2 fl inches	3 fl inches	8 inches
Crowds:	3 fl inches	4 fl inches	12 inches

Stay off salt water ice completely!

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add 2 inches; for waterlogged ice, add 3 inches; if skates cut it, go home! Saltwater in mild climates is always treacherous – keep away from it. Also, thickness in the 40-50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

With the winter season upon us, residents of all ages look for outdoor areas for ice skating. Elm's Meadow, located at Cushing Road and Spring Street, has been prepared by the DPW for skating, and lights, until 9:30 p.m., are also on for night skating. Elm's Meadow offers a regulated, shallow area for safe skating.

However, as with any outdoor skating area, the ice should be tested before venturing on it. There are specific ways to test ice safety, which do not include throwing debris such as rocks, sticks, etc. on the ice making it hazardous for everyone.

Rather, test the ice by the edge of a skating area by carefully stepping out 6- to 8-inches, proceeding carefully to about 2 feet out from the edge only if the ice appears to be safe under your weight. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can ascertain a rough idea as to the thickness of the ice. You should always have another person with you when doing this.

Many outdoor skating areas do not have the same thickness of ice universally over the area. Always be on guard for soft spots or thin ice that manifest from underground springs, drain pipes, etc. This is especially true at Elm's Meadow by the Spring Street/Cushing Road corner of the area due to drains off the hillside.

More to mission besides the sparrows

By Carol K. Dumas
CDUMAS@CNC.COM

Mission San Juan Capistrano was not only a spiritual center, but a self-sufficient community.

Mission San Juan Capistrano, considered the jewel of the 21 missions built in Southern California in the 18th century, is famous for the sparrows that faithfully return here every spring.

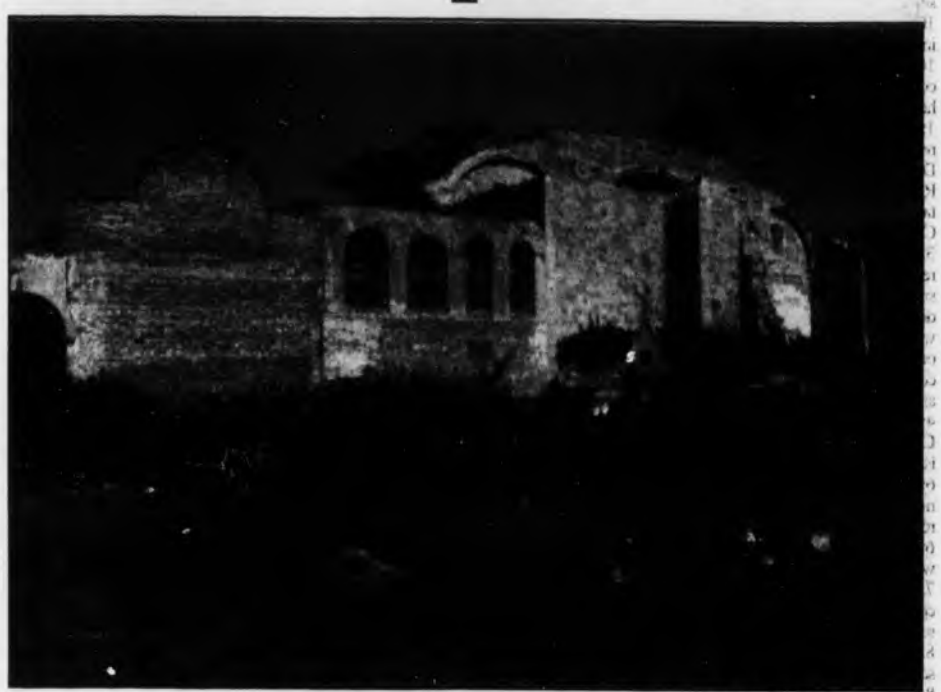
But there is so much more to see.

Mission San Juan Capistrano, founded in 1776, was the seventh of nine founded by Father Junipero Serra. When Spain decided to colonize Upper California, missions were established to teach Christianity to the Native Americans. Serra was chosen to lead that effort.

Mission San Juan Capistrano was not only a spiritual center, but a self-sufficient community. Its complex history is infused with Spanish, Mexican, Indian and European influences.

Enclosed by a tall adobe wall that closes it off from the bustling and touristy town of San Juan Capistrano, the mission's 10 acres are anchored by the ruins of the Great Stone Church, built in 1779. The church took nine years to build, with Native American labor. The earthquake struck on Dec. 8, 1812, during morning Mass, crumbling walls and toppling the domes, killing 42 of the Indian workers. The church was never rebuilt, but its stately, ghostly ruins are entrancing. Recasts of the original bells top one of the still-standing walls.

Near the Old Stone Church is the soldiers barracks (Spanish soldiers were stationed at the mission to protect the padres and to teach trades to the Indians), Native American displays and a cemetery, where 2,000 people, mostly Juaneno Indians, are buried in unmarked graves.



Four other buildings form a square around a center courtyard filled with flowers and fountains. Several museum rooms offer a look into life at the mission, with the padres' room and Fr. Jose Mut's room – Mut was the sole occupant of the mission, from 1866-1886. The largest building in the courtyard is Serra Chapel, the only original California mission church where Serra is known to have celebrated the sacraments. Built in 1782, the chapel has Stations of the Cross that were painted in the 1700s and a striking Baroque retablo (thought to be at least 400 years old) from Spain that's adorned with gold leaf. Near the entry of the chapel is the original baptismal font from the Old Stone Church and a side chapel dedicated to St. Peregrine, the patron saint of cancer sufferers.

The mission's grounds are striking any time of year. In December, lemon trees were laden with their golden orbs of fruit; fuschia-pink bougainvilla trailed over brick walls; an arid-themed garden had a variety of succulents from towering saguaro cactus to agave and aloe; lavender and roses were common on the grounds, as were many monarch butterflies and hummingbirds (California has five species).

Events during the year include concerts, a Founder's Day, and various festivals, and Mass is celebrated daily.

Serra's Chapel is named after the mission's founder, Fr. Junipero Serra, who actually celebrated the sacraments here.

No Doubt about ability of actress

Tony award-winner headlines Boston production

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In John Patrick Shanley's Tony and Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Doubt," Cherry Jones portrays a nun who suspects a priest of improper behavior with a young male student at the Catholic elementary school where she is principal. Sister Aloysius hasn't actually seen Father Flynn touching the boy, but something inside her tells her she is right to doubt the priest.

"This play is about people and the gut instinct of trust. It is about how we judge others in our daily lives. As Shanley explains in his preface to the play, when he was a young man, people with doubt were considered wise men and women. And now they're considered weak. Everyone just wants to feel that everything they know, and everything they do, is right," said Jones last week from Chicago. "But uncertainty is the basis of every decision-making process. Doubt and uncertainty used to be good things. Now, however, instead of trusting our own individual instincts, we have become like sheep. We've also become a society that is less well-educated and more mentally lazy. We've lost our ability to deliberate and reason, as both a nation and a world. Now, we've just got to again learn to accept uncertainty and be comfortable when we feel doubt, because we just can't know everything."

Cherry Jones and Chris McGarry.

What theater audiences know about Jones is that she is, without any doubt, one of the most gifted actresses working today. In addition to appearing in 25 productions during her tenure as a member of the acting company of the American Repertory Theatre, Jones has Broadway credits including her Tony Award-winning role in the memorable Lincoln Center Theatre production of "The Heiress," as well as other starring roles in "A Moon for the Misbegotten," "Angels in America," last season's "Faith Healer," and, of course, "Doubt," for which she won a 2005 Tony Award, her second as Best Actress. Jones has also appeared in feature films including "Signs," "The Horse Whisperer," and "Erin Brockovich."

Now starring in her first full-scale national tour, which comes to Boston's Colonial Theatre next week, Jones is pleased to be revisiting "Doubt" and reprising its lead role.

"After we closed in New York, I didn't miss Sister Aloysius, but I was still awfully glad to get back to her and to this play. It is a wonderful piece that I think says so much about us as people."

Mindful that many audiences would have their own vivid childhood memories of nuns, Jones was careful to craft a unique portrayal.

"It seemed too pat to make the character ramrod straight, so I play her as if she suffers from osteoporosis, which is also a tribute to my grandmother. Sister Aloysius is more interesting a little stooped. I also made her voice unattractive, which I hope will make her more poignant than if she had a normal voice. I've known a few former nuns and each one was a strong, opinionated, forceful person committed to helping others. That is how I see my character, too."

While acknowledging that "Doubt," which is set in 1964 in a Catholic School in the Bronx, will remind many of the sex abuse scandal that rocked the Boston Archdiocese and others around the country just a few years back, Jones points out that Shanley had an even bigger story in mind when he wrote the play.

"This is not a grim story about pedophilia, nor is it a whodunit. The case with the priest is just a stepping-off point. We're acting out that story as a parable for the audience," says the Paris, Tennessee-born actress who graduated from Carnegie Mellon University. "Catholics love this play, because it is so fair to the people it depicts. Not too long ago, I spoke to someone who served as a lay member on a Catholic commission and he said that Shanley really got it right. But the Church is not a democracy. The story is about the trickle-down effects of corruption and what happens when someone's belief in something is shaken."

Jones, 50, humbly admits that her longtime interest in taking a play on the road has been tempered by her own sometimes shaky belief in her ability to headline a national tour.

"I've always wanted to tour. Julie Harris is a wonderful role model and friend. Julie has taught me a great deal just by her example," Jones says of the legendary five-time Tony Award-winning actress and touring veteran who now makes her home in Chatham. "Straight plays just don't tour very often these days. Most of the touring road houses are barns made for musicals, not dramas. This play can just be heard, however, and not seen close-up and it will still have all its power. It is brave and bold of our producers to let me tour, even given that I won a Tony for the show. In many of the cities we will visit, people don't know me at all. If they had a TV star from the mid-1990s, they might have made some money. As it is, choosing to send out a tour with my name above the title is almost an altruistic decision."

(Cherry Jones will star in "Doubt" from Feb. 6 to 18 at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787, visit the box office, or log on to www.broadwayacrossamerica.com)

Movie review

Add Sapphire Boyce to the long list of preteens who have given remarkable film performances.

A little gem called 'Opal'

Opal Dreams (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Watch your back, Dakota Fanning. Your competition has arrived.

In the unique coming-of-age tale "Opal Dream," Sapphire Boyce makes a strong debut as a little girl who loses her will to live after the disappearance of her imaginary friends.

Directed by Peter Cattaneo ("The Full Monty") and based on a novella by co-screenwriter Ben Rice, "Opal Dream" is, as its title suggests, a small gem that will catch your eye.

Set in the otherworldly Australian Outback, where a Gold Rush-like mania has gripped opal miners, the film is a throwback to the Australian New Wave of the 1970s and '80s.

Nine-year-old Kellyanne Williamson (Boyce) lives with her parents, miner Rex (Vince Colosimo) and sprite-like mother Annie (Jacqueline McKenzie), and older brother Ash (Christian Byers) in Coober Pedy, Australia's opal capital. Her dad spends his days digging holes that plunge scarily deeper and deeper into the hard, flat, sandy soil, searching for the precious stones.

When Kellyanne loses Pobby and Dingan, friends only she can see, she insists her father and brother help her search for them. But when they trespass inadvertently on the stake of a neighboring miner, Kellyanne's father is accused of being a "ratter" (i.e., opal thief). Meanwhile, the distraught Kellyanne grows weaker and weaker with each passing day.

"Opal Dream" captures the bizarre Wild West-like atmosphere of a small town in the Outback, the trials of a small ostracized family in such circumstance and the travails of a little girl clinging desperately to childhood dreams.

It also features terrific performances from Boyce and Byers. Boyce is especially compelling as the little girl with dark circles under her eyes and surprisingly hoarse, haunting voice. Boyce follows in the footsteps of several spooky little girls of the big screen. As she waits for her imaginary friends' return, you half expect her Kellyanne to turn to the camera and intone, "They're baaaack."

"Opal Dream" contains no objectionable material.

The North & South Rivers Watershed Association, the South Shore Natural Science Center and the Mass Audubon South Shore Regional Headquarters presents another free winter lecture series every Wednesday night at 7 p.m., at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell through March 21. Sponsored in part by Rockland Trust Company. Admission is free. Feb. 7, Codfish, Dogfish, Mermaids and Frank* Skip Debrusk, Author. This book, written by Scituate native Skip Debrusk, is the true story of the relationship between Skip as a young man, and his mentor, set on the fishing grounds and ports of Massachusetts during the summer of 1951. Captain Frank Savery, an ex-prisoner of the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz was, to say the least, an unusual mentor who passed on his natural gifts of curiosity, leadership and the value of education. He also passed on the value of hard work, risk and rewards, all as the Captain of the J.L. Stanley and Sons, a commercial fishing boat based in Plymouth. Hear this story of a bygone era when fish were plentiful and our way of life was simpler. New Releases

EPIC MOVIE (F)

Satire sinks to a new low with "Epic Movie," an alarmingly awful film from the creators of "Scary Movie," "Date Movie" and so many other bad films, it's hard to keep track. A bit of advice: If you see Carmen Electra in a film, run. Fourth-grade jokes get turned into another feature-length film, mocking such recent box-office hits as "Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest" and "X-Men: The Last Stand." There even is a gag in which "Harry Potter's" Hermione is pregnant and infected with herpes. I may be scarred for life. (PG-13)

—Chelsea Bain

THE HITCHER (C+)

If you have a thing for horror, then "The Hitcher," a so-so remake of the 1986 cult classic of the same name, might win you over. This flick opens with a shot of fresh road kill and ends with so many dead bodies, it is hard to keep count. "The Hitcher," a movie that features a sequence with someone ripped in two, is for fans of gore. But for every thrill, there is a scene that is boring and lame. Grace (Sophia Bush) and Jim (Zachary Knighton) are on a road trip through a New Mexico desert, they encounter a homicidal psycho (Sean Bean) who is looking for more than a ride. (Rated R)—Chelsea Bain

THE ITALIAN (A)

Set in a ramshackle orphanage in a snowy Russian village, the film generates a sense of hopelessness from the get-go. It's palpable even when a kind, wealthy couple from Italy decides to adopt Vanya (Kolya Spiridonov), the wide-eyed ragamuffin at the center of this wonderful tale. The other tykes would kill to fill his shoes, but Vanya, a 6-year-old with hopes of reuniting with his biological mother, goes on a wild chase to find her. As the chase between Vanya and the greedy adults continues, the film never falters. You'll be surprised how a simple story about an orphan can fill you with such emotion. (Rated PG-13) —Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

ALPHA DOG (C-)

It's a mutt. Based on the sordid, true story of Jesse James Hollywood, "Alpha Dog" is what you'd have if "The O.C." went all gansta. Emile Hirsch, Anton Yelchin and Justin Timberlake (the only actor who rises above the material) star in the story of a drug-dealer and a kidnapping that goes all wrong. Written and directed by Nick Cassavetes, "Alpha Dog" is about people you'd flee from in real life, a chorus of foul-mouthed poseuers led by an evil twerp. (Rated R)

ARTHUR AND THE INVISIBLES (B+)

Are you ready for "Honey, I Shrunk Les Enfants?" "Arthur and the Invisibles," also known as "Arthur et les Minimoys," is yet another winged horse sprung from the endlessly fertile, if not overtaxed mind of French auteur Luc Besson ("La Femme Nikita," "The Professional"). The film, an English-language effort of French pedigree, combines live-action with 3D animation and is yet another variation on a theme of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland."

BABEL (B-)

Another weighty, portentous, relentlessly grim effort from Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu ("Amores Perros," "21 Grams"), "Babel" is, of course, being touted as Best Picture material. Afraid not. It tells several interweaving stories, involving, among others, a fabulous-looking American couple (Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett) having a marriage crisis in Morocco, the perilous adventures in Mexico of their two blond children, a mute Tokyo schoolgirl who behaves like a nymphomaniac and two Berber brothers herding sheep in the Atlas mountains. To some, Inarritu's work is genius. To others, it's just babble. Take your pick. In English, Spanish, Berber and Japanese with subtitles. (Rated R)

BLOOD DIAMOND (B-)

A Rambo movie for liberals, Edward Zwick's "Blood Diamond" might also be called "Danny Archer, Soldier of Fortune." Handsome Danny (Leonardo DiCaprio) has been a bad boy. He smokes and drinks too much and makes a living smuggling "conflict stones," also known as blood diamonds, out of 1990s Sierra Leone. The funds finance a rebel army that chops the arms off civilians and turns young boys into drug-addled zombies with AK-47s and such nicknames as "Master of Disaster"' and "Babykiller." "Blood Diamond" is based on fact. But it is hardly a serious examination of the political and social realities of modern-day Africa. Zwick brings the same sensibility he brought to "The Last Samurai" to this film. "Blood Diamond" does not pass the reality sniff-test. (Rated R)

Trash talk gets applause

Selectmen like resident's plan to rid streets of litter

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Litterbugs are not welcome in Cohasset. To that end, Jerusalem Road resident James French is leading the charge to encourage businesses and the town as a whole to start picking up trash and prevent it from coming back.

French came before the Board of Selectmen Monday with a proposal that would have businesses and residents sponsoring sections of the roadways around town. He said because Route 3A is a Massachusetts State Highway there is an actual adopt-a-highway program which businesses can participate in. For other sections of road, residents or businesses can do what he and his wife have been doing for years: go out with a trash bag and pick up whatever litter has accumulated along the side of the road.

"Ten years ago we used to go out and it would take us an hour. Now, it takes us five minutes. If it's clean, it stays clean," he said, of the area on King Street, which his family cleans up. He hopes by maintaining trash pickup

Greenbush train is almost ready to roll

Final spike nailed during special event

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Ross Hall of Hingham had hoped for a different outcome.

"I was expecting to commute to Boston on the train but I retired in 2000," said Hall, a former professor at Northeastern University. "My wife and I will use it to attend the symphony or other events — if we can get a seat."

Hall, who was a member of a pro-train group, Back on Track, that started fighting for restoration of the Old Colony Railroad some 20 years ago, attended Tuesday's "Final Spike" ceremony in Braintree for the Greenbush Line.

"I think it is very appropriate that an opportunity for public transit is being restored that never should have been lost in the first place," he said.

Louis Eaton of Cohasset commuted on the train to Boston from 1946 to 1959 until the Old Colony Line was abandoned in 1959 with the completion of the Southeast Expressway. "It's taken a long, long time," Eaton said. "Longer than it should have thanks to the delaying tactics by those fine people in Hingham.

Town land will remain open parcel

In split vote selectmen OK conservation restriction

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset will soon have more walking trails, more open space and more protection for Peppermint Brook, thanks to a vote of the Board of Selectmen.

At its Monday meeting the board voted 3-2 to impose a conservation restriction on the 9 acres of town owned land located adjacent to the Cook Estate off Sohier Street, permanently designating the land as an unbuildable lot. A vote at the December 2005 Special Town Meeting had authorized the board to take such action.

Clay Spring Road resident Karen Quigley and Water Commissioner John McNabb came before the board to speak on behalf of imposing the restriction. Quigley was one of the driving forces behind the 2005 article, which was passed by a majority vote and did not require the board take action, but gave permission to take action if it chose to do so. Due to the fact that the land abuts Peppermint Brook, which flows into Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply, the Water Commission also feels protecting the parcel is imperative.

Quigley had come before the Board of Selectmen in July 2006 asking it to carry out the wishes of the people, as nothing had been discussed since the vote was taken. She said the town had spent a lot of money to acquire land in the watershed for water protection purposes, and it therefore made sense to place the restriction on a parcel the town already owns.

However, the board was hesitant to place the restriction on the property because at that time, the fate of the Cook Estate was unknown. The town had worked with the heirs of the Jane Bancroft Cook Estate for roughly three years to build affordable senior housing on the combined Cook and town parcels of land. However, wastewater issues first forced a reduction in scope for the project, and then forced the project to fall through. The town was hopeful affordable housing could be built on the property by a private developer, and at that time said if using a portion of the town-owned land could provide a wastewater solution for the property, it would be willing to use the land to help.

"Abbot has purchased the land (Cook Property) and it has no interest in building on it (the town's parcel)," said Quigley, adding in her opinion, the time is right to pass a restriction.

McNabb said in the view of the Water Commission, "We strongly agree a CR should be put on it. It's near Peppermint Brook and if it had been privately owned, we would have tried to purchase it already." The Water Commission has been vigilant in its quest to purchase property in the town's watershed area to protect Cohasset's drinking water supply.

Couples that have stood test of time

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Valentine's Day is a time to celebrate love. In Cohasset, there are many couples that have much to be happy about, as they have either reached or are near approaching a half-century of togetherness.

Dolores and John Roy of Old Coach Road are quickly approaching their golden anniversary. This April 18, they will celebrate 48 years of marriage and recalled how they met all those years ago.

"We went on a blind date arranged by someone I worked with in New York City," Dolores said.

John quipped, "I was returning from Korea and in those days, if you were single at the age of 26, your friends were anxious to get you married."

New building will rise up from Depot Court ashes

Brown plans new structure

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is about to lose a little piece of its Village history. In the wake of a two-alarm fire that broke out at Dramatic Kitchens and Sunroom Conservatories, Ltd., in the Village Jan. 30, it has been determined the entire building will need to come down.

Cohasset resident Richard Brown has owned the building, located at 22 Depot Court, for the last 25 years. While he said he intends to rebuild, it will never be quite the same as the original building holds many memories for his family. "This was the first piece of property I ever bought. I just stood there and watched it burn and I cried," he said.

"I was going to remodel the building next year, but this was definitely not in my plans."
— Richard Brown, owner

Brown, who owns Brown's Quality Imports at 574 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, said when he was first starting out, he began his auto business in the Depot Court building. He said he credits his wife to his being able to purchase the building. At that time, they weren't yet married and she was working two jobs and had saved up a lot of money, and she gave him a loan to help him purchase the property. "If it wasn't for her, I never would have been able to buy it," he said.

Eventually, Brown expanded his business and moved to his 3A location. For more than 10 years the building has housed Dramatic Kitchens. "I feel really bad for Vinnie (DeSimone, owner of Dramatic Kitchens), but we're trying to find him some office space in the Village," Brown said.

Building inspector Bob Egan has recommended the building come down and Brown said he agrees. He said he plans on building another Cape-style building within the same footprint. "I was going to remodel the building next year, but this was definitely not in my plans," he said. Brown will have to come before the Planning Board with any plans to rebuild, but said, "Whatever I do, it will look nice."

This is what the building located at 22 Depot Court used to look like. Current owner Richard Brown said this picture was likely taken in the 1930s, back when the building served as a Jenney gas station.

This is what remains of the Dramatic Kitchens building, which caught on fire Jan. 30. Owner Richard Brown said he will have to tear the building down once the insurance investigation is complete.

The call about the fire came into the station at roughly 6 p.m. last Tuesday. Firefighters from Cohasset, Hull and Scituate battled the blaze for roughly six hours. Firefighters from Hingham manned Cohasset's station while its members were out.

There were four firefighters on duty when the call came in and they drove two engines and the ambulance down to the fire. The ladder truck stayed at the station until other firefighters were able to get to the station and drive it over. The firefighters who were first on the scene entered through the front door and quickly realized the fire was overhead. Brown said while he has not been given the official word from the insurance company, "It was definitely something to do with the heater," which was located in the attic, Brown said.

Brown said at first it looked as if the left side of the building could be salvaged. The right side, which served as a showroom, sustained much more fire damage than the left, and the Department of Public Works had to use a backhoe to remove a portion that was on the verge of collapse. The left side of the building sustained a lot of smoke and water damage and tearing down the entire building will be the safest thing to do, Brown said.

"We'll rebuild and the business will be something my kids can enjoy," he said.

POLICE BEAT

Local man facing drug charge

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police received a cell phone call at about 6:30 p.m. Saturday (Feb. 3) about an erratic operator who was last seen traveling southbound on Route 3A and turning left onto Beechwood Street. The caller was able to provide police with the registration of the 1999 black Lincoln Town Car, Police Chief James Hussey said. The dispatcher ran the plate, which came back as "suspended, non-renewable," he said. The identity of the owner was also revealed.

Two officers responded and found the car parked at Fiori's Exxon. A short while later, the man returned to the car, and turned right (northbound) onto Route 3A. The officers wanted to confirm the operator's driving was impaired so they waited for him to drive away, Hussey explained. Then the officers pulled the Town Car over and confirmed the operator was Scot M. Connell, 33, of 430 S. Main St.

The officers made observations by the way Connell looked, including needle marks on his arms, that he might have been using drugs just prior to being stopped. He failed field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest. He was charged with OUI (drugs). He will face the additional charges of operating with a suspended registration and number plate violation.

The K-9 unit from Hull was called to see if there were drugs in the vehicle but did not find any, Hussey said.

No Mass. license

A man is being summonsed to court following a motor vehicle crash on Monday (Jan. 29) because he was operating without a valid Massachusetts license, as required by state law.

Chief James Hussey said another motorist, who was driving a 1995 Toyota Camry, pulled out of the parking lot at Leo's Exxon on Route 3A into the path of a 2001 Toyota 4Runner that was traveling northbound.

"It was determined that the operator of the 4Runner did not have a valid state license," said Hussey, who explained he had a Brazilian license. He is being summonsed to court for being an unlicensed driver, he said.

Both vehicles were towed; there were no injuries, Hussey said. The incident occurred about 2:34 p.m. The driver of the Camry was cited for failure to yield.

Scituate chief's truck sideswiped

During last week's devastating fire at Dramatic Kitchens, the Scituate Fire Chief parked his truck on North Main Street just beyond Depot Court. A police officer on traffic duty thought he saw a 1997 Oldsmobile that was traveling from South Main to North Main Street sideswipe the chief's vehicle. He went over the vehicle and confirmed that. The Oldsmobile, whose operator apparently realized what had occurred, returned to the scene a short time later and exchanged papers with the Scituate chief, police said.

Shaggy man

Police questioned a suspicious, shaggy-looking man who sat in his car for 2-1/2 hours on North Main Street near the common last Wednesday (Jan. 31). An officer investigated a call from a concerned resident and observed the man, who finally left. The officer saw the man drive up Highland Avenue and make a right onto Beach Street without using a directional. The officer stopped the car, determined the man's identity and asked him what he had been doing. According to police, the man replied that he had just been sitting there and was not bothering anyone.

Chief Hussey said police have no evidence that the man had bad intentions but they now know who he is and what car he drives and "he knows we know that." The individual could not provide a good explanation for why he had been parked there for so long, he said.

Hussey said the man was given a verbal warning for not using a directional.

Hussey said he encourages residents to contact police when they see something that appears suspicious.

"People out there are our eyes and ears," he said. "If someone is sitting in a vehicle for any length of time — it is worth inquiring about."

Girls at dock

Police responded to a report from a concerned caller about three, young girls at a dock in Little Harbor. The caller was concerned

"They just about doubled the cost," he said. (The Town of Hingham, concerned about its historic districts and the train's impact on Hingham Square, fought Greenbush restoration for years.)

But discussion of the cost — estimated to be upwards of $500 million — was not part of Tuesday's presentation that celebrated the end of the construction phase of Greenbush, the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad. The Plymouth and Middleboro lines were completed in 1997. Greenbush will provide commuter rail from South Station along the coast from Weymouth to Scituate, with stops in Hingham and Cohasset. Service is expected to be restored by late summer.

Upwards of 150 people, many of whom were transported to the ceremony on MBTA buses from Weymouth Landing, huddled in a heated tent at 11 a.m. to hear celebratory remarks from about eight local and state officials before the final spikes were hammered into the track just outside. TV cameramen and newspaper photographers jockeyed for position to record the event.

"This railroad, Greenbush, is like adding another lane to Route 3."

— Terry Fancher, former chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee

MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas served as emcee and recognized many local, state and MBTA officials in attendance. Speakers included Secretary of Transportation and MBTA Chairman Bernard Cohen and Lt. Gov. Timothy P. Murray, among others.

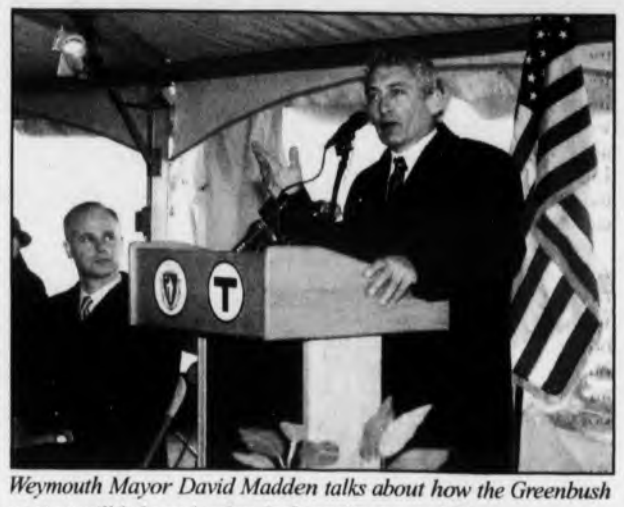
State Sen. Michael Morrissey, D-Quincy, a long-time Greenbush supporter, whose district includes Braintree, Holbrook, Abington and Rockland, described Tuesday as a "terrific day." Weymouth Mayor David M. Madden said the real issue for Weymouth was that the train would shape redevelopment of village centers, Weymouth Landing and Jackson Square. State Rep. James Murphy, D-Weymouth, a Greenbush supporter, who has been at the Statehouse for six years jokingly recalled his first day on Beacon Hill when he was asked, "What is your stand on Greenbush?"

And Joseph Sullivan, former Braintree state representative and chairman of the House Transportation Committee, attributed the completion of the line as due to "perseverance." He recalled the inaugural ride on the Plymouth Line 10 years ago when there was still doubt whether Greenbush would become a reality.

Sullivan described Tuesday's event as "an historic moment" and an "important time to look forward to a great future."

Long-time Greenbush critic, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, strode up to the podium knowing that he was perhaps not about to stand before the friendliest of audiences. He joked that he was "the skunk at the garden party." However, Hedlund acknowledged there was never any doubt the Greenbush line was going to be full. He also praised the responsiveness of Grabauskas and Cashman Balfour Beatty, the contractor that is building the railroad, in dealing with the myriad issues facing his district that includes Greenbush towns, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

Then Hedlund joked, "It's not too late there is still one spike to go – maybe we can still stop the project!"



Hingham officials in attendance included Selectman John Riley and Town Clerk Eileen McCracken. Riley described the day as "inevitable." He said he still had concerns about traffic patterns in town, ridership, and the cost. McCracken said she had "mixed emotions" and said the construction had really changed Hingham's downtown area.

Susan Phippen, a former Scituate selectman and MBTA ombudsman for the town, said between the railroad and the streetscape money Scituate is receiving as part of the Greenbush mitigation agreement, the town has a "once in a lifetime chance to improve North Scituate and Greenbush villages significantly."

Barry M Steinberg, with the Association for Public Transportation, said his organization which advocates for public transportation, has serious concerns about passenger capacity issues with Greenbush. He said there would not be enough frequency of service and complained that nearly all the Greenbush stations are "in the middle of nowhere" and not in village centers within walking distance. He noted that in Plymouth, whose downtown he described as dying, people have to take a bus from the Cordage Station stop on the Plymouth Line.

But for Terry Fancher, who served as chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Greenbush, the event ranked right up there among the top rail celebrations in history. He said it had as much meaning as the driving of the final spike of the transcontinental railroad in 1869.

"This railroad, Greenbush, is like adding another lane to Route 3," Fancher said. "It is truly needed and is about to happen with the driving of the last spike." He said he was at South Station for the ceremony for the Plymouth and Middleboro lines 10 years ago. "It will be a neat thing to bring the three trains in together," he said.

Weymouth Mayor David Madden talks about how the Greenbush project will help redevelop Jackson Square and Weymouth Landing. Madden made his remarks Tuesday during the "final spike" ceremony for the controversial railroad project.

Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Joseph Driscoll.

GREENBUSH TIMELINE

- 1849 - Service on the Old Colony line begins
- 1959 - Passenger service on the Old Colony lines stops; Southeast Expressway opens
- 1971 - Red Line extends to Quincy, delaying talk of restoring the Old Colony Lines
- 1984 - Traffic congestion in the region prompts the state Legislature, with the support of then Gov. Michael Dukakis, to direct the MBTA to study the feasibility of restoring the Old Colony lines to Plymouth, Middleboro and Greenbush
- 1988 - Due to the complexity of the project, the Greenbush feasibility study is split from the Plymouth and Middleboro lines
- 1991 - At the ballot box, Hingham is the only town along the Greenbush corridor to vote against the train.
- 1994 - The Citizens Advisory Committee, appointed by the Secretary of Environmental Affairs to comment on Greenbush feasibility studies, votes to support the train with a short tunnel under Hingham Square.
- 1996 -The MBTA decides to pay for Greenbush using only state dollars; the Town of Hingham launches a lawsuit saying the MBTA is deliberately trying to skirt tougher federal environmental laws
- Sept. 1997 - The Plymouth and Middleboro lines open to much fanfare
- 1999 - the MBTA says a short tunnel under Hingham Square is feasible and would cost $29 million.
- March 2000 - Scituate voters approve spending up to $50,000 for any legal action against the MBTA over the Greenbush rail restoration project.
- May 2000 - Hingham signs a mitigation agreement with the MBTA and agrees to drop its lawsuit; is promised a short tunnel under Hingham Square at a cost of $39 million and a $1.35 million preservation fund to protect historic properties.
- March 2001 - MBTA decides to use the "design-build" method for Greenbush, where the contractor, designs, builds and pays for the project with the MBTA then paying the contractor back over 20 years. The "design-build" method has only been used once before, for the Route 3 North widening project.
- March 2001 — a new anti-rail group publicly surfaces, dubbed AfTA (Advocates for Transportation Alternatives) and is headed by John Bewick, a former state Secretary of Environmental Affairs.
- May 2001 - Cohasset signs a $5 million mitigation agreement with the MBTA.
- March 2002 - Scituate reaches an accord with the MBTA by signing a $10.4 million mitigation agreement with the transit authority.
- Aug. 2001 - then state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand issues a certificate giving the Greenbush project the green light
- Sept. 2001 - In a closed-door meeting with local officials, then Gov. Paul Cellucci says Greenbush is a go, but sets a $408 million cost ceiling.
- Oct. 2001 - Scituate files a lawsuit against both the MBTA and Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand stating the final environmental impact report on Greenbush does not adequately comply with MEPA standards.
- Dec. 2001 - Weymouth and Braintree sign mitigation agreements. Weymouth's $16 million package does not include mitigation for Weymouth Landing.
- March. 2002 - Scituate becomes the last community to come to an accord with the MBTA by signing a $10.4 million mitigation agreement with the transit authority.
- April 2002 - MBTA awards $252 million construction contract to Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB)
- June 2002 - MBTA opens construction office at 1580 Commercial St. in Weymouth's Jackson Square.
- February 2003 - Citing permitting and access issues, the MBTA suspends construction on the Greenbush project for six months.
- July 2003 - Gov. Mitt Romney finds himself in the midst of a "sticker war" at a stop at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham, where citizens wearing either pro- and anti-Greenbush lapel stickers try to get the governor's ear.
- August 2003 - The MBTA's $3.9 million purchase of 1.5 miles of track in East Braintree from CSX Corporation of Florida is a key development.
- Sept. 10, 2003 - Weymouth signs a mitigation agreement with the T for Weymouth landing. that provides an additional $28 million.
- Sept. 22, 2003 - Gov. Mitt Romney and the MBTA Board of Directors unanimously agree to resume the $479 million project. Opponents including AfTA and the Coastal Coalition vow to continue to fight it.
- Sept. 2003-Jan. 2007 – Construction on the Greenbush line continues in earnest, including building at tunnel under Hingham Square.

Adventure for Fithi comes to an end

Python found in boiler room

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For four long months, Fithi — the Our World Museum's 3-foot-long pet ball python — lived on her own inside the walls of the museum and adjoining Paul Pratt Memorial Library. However, in the end the exotic creature's need to stay warm cut her life short.

Facilities Manager Brian Adams said he received a call from a staff member last Friday who reported a strange burning odor. He went over to the building and checked around and found Fithi's remains in the boiler room.

"I think she was trying to keep warm and she must have crawled into the boiler when it wasn't on, and when it turned back on again, she got stuck," he said.

Adams said he called in a boiler technician who came over to the library and shut the unit down. It was then taken apart and Fithi was removed.

Adams said there were quite a few people over at the library and museum that were very upset to hear of Fithi's death. He said he thinks it is really amazing that she was able to live as long as she did on her own. "She had to have been alive Thursday because that's when she crawled in," he said, and that was four months after her disappearance.

"I think she was trying to keep warm and she must have crawled into the boiler when it wasn't on, and when it turned back on again, she got stuck."
— Brian Adams, facilities manager

Interim Museum Director Julie Laugelle said she too was surprised at how long Fithi was able to make it on her own. "It was funny, I was down there in January putting away the Christmas stuff and it is usually warm down there and it was cold. But, she managed to stay alive until now," she said. Laugelle added children have been continually asking if their cold-blooded friend has been found. "This is going to be a difficult question to answer," she said.

Fithi, which means "snake" in Greek, went missing sometime overnight Oct. 12. She somehow pushed off the top of her tank, climbed out and slithered away, and Laugelle found the empty tank when she came in Oct. 13. Plans had been afoot for a while to find Fithi a new home, but after her escape, she was able to live out the rest of her days in Cohasset.

At the time she escaped, Fithi had just been fed two mice and Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said she could stay hidden in seclusion for a month or more until she got hungry again. Even then, any field mice that might also be living in the building could provide a meal, which could sustain her for a long time.

Local veterinarian Greg Conard of Crazy Paws in the Village was also contacted at that time and explained pythons are "well-known escape artists" and do not typically like enclosures. He said snakes can lie dormant for a period of time, meaning Fithi might not come out for a while, and also said she might come out to bask in the sun, but would more likely seek places that are warm but have some moisture.

Library Director Jackie Rafferty said everyone at the library was very saddened by the discovery. "We had all hoped she would have been found alive and restored to the museum," she said. In fact, Rafferty said she was surprised at just how sad she was when she heard the news. "We're glad there has been a resolution, but we really wish there had been a different ending."

Patience Towle of the Board of Library Trustees echoed Rafferty's sentiments. "We are so sorry our little friend did not survive her adventure."

Health Dept. honored for Regional Preparedness Work

Emergency preparedness efforts by the Cohasset Health Department have received acknowledgement from a national public health organization. The National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO) announced this week that Mass. Public Health Preparedness Region 4b has been recognized as "Public Health Ready". Cohasset is one of 27 communities in Region 4b, which surrounds Boston.

Region 4b was one of only seven local health departments and regional coalitions to win recognition as part of Project Public Health Ready, conducted by NACCHO with support from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"This recognition is an important statement to our community. Public health staff in our region has met monthly for the past three years to develop local and regional response plans," said Dr. Joseph R. Godzik, Health Agent of the Cohasset Health Department. "The success of our application demonstrates that we are making significant progress toward preparedness."

The recognition by NACCHO follows a lengthy application and review by public health professionals from throughout the country. Applicants were required to meet emergency preparedness criteria in the areas of response and planning, workforce competency, and emergency exercises.

Lynn Schoeff, a member of the Region 4b Executive Committee, explained that being Public Health Ready is an ongoing commitment, "Our application not only outlined the region's plan for responding to a variety of hazards, but it also committed our public health workforce to further training and exercises."

Components of the more than 500-page application and regional response plan include mutual aid and resource coordination across communities, a volunteer medical reserve corps, identification of mass dispensing sites, vulnerable populations planning, training in Incident Command Systems and a schedule of exercises to identify future planning needs.

"These activities occur across city and town lines and with our partners in public safety and other agencies," noted Schoeff. "Many of the emergencies that local health may confront require that cross-jurisdictional and cross-discipline support."

Region 4b was established in 2003 as one of seven public health preparedness regions funded through the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Health departments participating in the emergency planning activities include Arlington, Belmont, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Canton, Chelsea, Cohasset, Dedham, Everett, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Needham, Newton, Norwell, Norwood, Quincy, Revere, Scituate, Somerville, Watertown, Wellesley, Westwood, Weymouth and Winthrop.

Maggie Paige Kennedy makes her debut!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GOODBYE, FITHI

Hi Cohasset. Well, what a bit of news to hear about the fate of the snake at the Children's Museum/Library here in town. As sad as it was to hear that it sealed its fate by warming up in the boiler room to the point of well done literally, now people can feel confident when going to either the museum or library and not have to worry about any surprise visitor peeking out at them.

Cohasset has a lot of programs coming in the next month that are being shared in today's column to help keep us warm and motivated as we embrace winter and look ahead to spring.

NEW ARRIVAL

Welcome to the world to Maggie Paige Kennedy, who arrived Jan. 17, 2007 at South Shore Hospital. Maggie tipped the scales at precisely 8 lbs. and measured 20-1/2 inches. Her proud parents are Chip and Nikki Kennedy of 115 A Beechwood St.

Also tickled pink are grandparents, John and Mary Kennedy, 131 Nichols Road, and Ronald and Nancy Caron of Fort Kent, Maine.

If you see the Kennedys around town out buying little things in pink, be sure to congratulate them!

BU GRAD

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 1,412 students in January 2007. Among the graduates was Cohasset resident, Maryam Shahsahebi, who received a M.S. in Advertising. This was fantastic news to receive Maryam, congratulations.

DAFFODIL DAYS

Support the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days Daffodil Days, the American Cancer Society's annual event, has begun, with daffodils on sale now through March 2 and delivery to take place March 19-21. A bouquet of 10 daffodils is $7. A Gift of Hope bouquet of daffodils delivered anonymously to a local cancer patient is available for a minimum donation of $20. You can also order a Bear and a Bunch for a donation of $25, featuring Hugh R. Hope, the newest Boyds Bear designed exclusively for the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days program, and 10 stems of fresh-cut daffodils. The deadline to place an order is Friday, March 2. To purchase daffodils, or for more information, please call your American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345.

FLOWER SHOW IS A TRIP!

Come join Cohasset Elder Affairs on Feb. 3 as the portrait of nature and art breathtakingly become one at the Rhode Island Spring Flowers & Garden Show. Included is lunch at Cassarino's on Historic Federal Hill: voted the Best Italian restaurant in Providence. Leaving Cohasset at 9:30 a.m. and will be leaving R.I. at 3:30 p.m. This trip is $59 and is open to all adults. Call 781-383-9112 for reservations.

SWEETHEART DANCE

The Girl Scouts will host their Annual Sweetheart Dance on Friday night, March 2nd. Open to all registered Girls Scouts in Cohasset. It will be held at Deer Hill from 6:30-8 p.m.. Come and enjoy dancing with your special guy, make a craft, and enjoy some refreshments. Permission slips are available with your troop leader and must be returned to them by Feb. 23rd.

TAKING THE PLUNGE

Last Saturday, Special Olympics Massachusetts celebrated the 9th Annual Passion Plunge at Nantasket Beach. Cohasset Plungers included Jay and Jeff Nothnagle, Jessica MacDonald, Doug Yeager, Jack Delorenzo, Michael and Nils Sceery. Other Cohasset residents who plunged were Charlotte Sida who came up from Fairfield College to plunge and support her brother Nicholas's swim team, the Kennedys and Laurel Hickey. (A quick aside: congratulations go out to Charlotte who made the dean's list for the first semester at Fairfield).

More than 600 brave people plunged at Nantasket or Indian Lake in Worcester, and another 300 or more will plunge at Revere Beach on Feb. 10th. Thank you to everyone who has supported one of the Cohasset Plungers. It is not too late to send a check to one of them or to pledge online at www.passionplunge.org. Your donation helps support over 10,000 athletes with intellectual disabilities in Massachusetts who train and compete year round in 26 sports.

Kudos to local merchants who helped make the day such a huge success. The Red Parrot Restaurant, Atlantic Bagel, Dunkin' Donuts, Seaside Kites, Whole Foods, Nona's Ice Cream, The Pizza Box, BJ'S Wholesale Club and the Fruit Center are thanked by all!

QUILT SHOW

Now that Winter is finally here and upon us, Cohasset has decided that a taste of Spring is needed. They will roll out their finery in the form of an Annual Quilt Show & Luncheon on Saturday, March 3 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

As many as 80 beautiful quilts will be on display from 10:30 am –2 pm and tickets are just $12 each and include a delicious sit down luncheon served by volunteers serving salads, strata and tasty dessert. All proceeds will be shared between the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Centers Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets should be bought in advance by calling 781-383-0345 or by going to the Second Congregational Church office between the hours of 9 am-1 pm, Monday through Friday.

CO2 AWARENESS

A Cohasset teacher is leading an effort to raise CO2 awareness. David Ames, a ninth-grade science teacher at Cohasset High School, has started a unique project that will allow students and community residents to see just how big the Earth's carbon dioxide problem is. For a story and photo, see school news on page 28!

TASTE IS COMING!

Here is a fun way to enjoy a cold winter evening. For the 4th year, Wellspring Multi-Service Center and Hull Lifesaving Museum will be presenting, TASTE! a festive fine food and wine-tasting event, to be held at Atlantica restaurant in Cohasset; Friday, Feb. 23 , 6–9 p.m. TASTE!—promoting some of the best restaurants and caterers on the South Shore — will once again raise needed funds to benefit the educational programs at both South Shore organizations. Atlantica promises to be an inviting destination on a chilly winter evening, as guests warmed by the blazing fire, are invited to mingle and sample the best of South Shore dining. Previous TASTE! celebrations ensure that this year's event will be wonderful with more restaurants, caterers and wine vendors joining the festivities.

Special event organizers from Wellspring and the Lifesaving Museum expect more than 200 guests eager to sample new offerings from fine eateries while supporting two worthy community organizations. For tickets or more information contact 781-925-3211, www.wellspringhull.org or monica@wellspringhull.org

SYRACUSE HONORS

Congratulations go out to Andrew Jerz, a Cohasset resident who is a sophomore majoring in illustration at Syracuse University College of Visual and Performing Arts. Andrew made the dean's list for the Fall 2006 semester. Keep up the hard work Andrew.

That is all for this week Cohasset. Send in all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Cohasset Cub Scouts know how to care

Collected items for local troops

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset troops deployed overseas in Iraq and Afghanistan are going to know they are loved this Valentine's Day.

Wolf Cub Scouts, who are all second-graders, descended on the American Legion Post on Monday afternoon with arms loaded full of items ranging from Q-Tips and Ramen Noodles to Matchbox cars and Beanie Babies. Troops have requested the latter two items to give to Iraqi children.

Ann Marie Goff of South Main Street, whose husband is a member of the Sons of the American Legion, has been organizing quarterly shipments to the local troops. The Legion approached Goff last year after learning she had organized a shipment through the school in Marshfield where she is a preschool teacher.

The Wolf Cubs got involved after Jeanne Fitzpatrick, whose son Matthew is in Den 6, shared a list of items the troops needed that her husband brought home from a recent Cohasset Rotary Club meeting.

"I thought 'it would be great for the cubs to do something like this," Fitzpatrick said. She shared the idea with her son's den leader, Roger Hill. With only 1-1/2 weeks to go before the mailing, all three Wolf dens (4, 5, & 6) embraced the project resulting in Monday's special delivery to the Legion Post on Summer Street.

Thomas Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, explained to the scouts why they were there and what the building stands for.

"The American Legion Hall is dedicated to war veterans," he said. "And today we have troops deployed overseas many of whom attended local schools like you and are now serving in Iraq and Afghanistan."

Seven-year-old Michael Slanetz gets ready to put a large bottle of soft soap into the care package at the Legion Post on Monday afternoon. Wolf Clubs collected myriad items for local troops deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Henry Dormitzer, 8, carries a box to the table at the American Legion hall on Summer Street. All the donated items, which were dropped off Monday afternoon, will be shipped to local troops.

Goff told the scouts that it means a lot for the troops to receive packages from home. She explained she has an extra bedroom that is full of boxes used to pack the items. She said students at Deer Hill School wrote Valentine's cards that will also be included in the boxes.

"As long as kids from Cohasset are over there we will continue to do this," she said. "Thank you kids for coming."

Goff told the Mariner she got the idea to send packages to the troops at Martinson School in Marshfield when the principal's son was deployed. "We had a mitten tree at the time and I thought, 'wouldn't it be nice to do something for the soldiers.'"

The next shipment will be sent in the spring, Goff said.

School supplies sought for Operation Iraqi Children

The National Honor Society at Cohasset High School is looking for people to donate new, unused school supplies for Operation Iraqi Children, a project to benefit students in Iraq. These supplies may include blunt-ended scissors, 12-inch rulers with metric markings, pencils with erasers, small pencil sharpeners, large erasers, colored pencils, packaged notebook paper, composition notebooks, folders with inside pockets and zippered pencil bags. Donations must be dropped of at Cohasset Middle High School, Deer Hill, or Osgood by Friday, Feb. 16.

Legion seeking donations for those deployed

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 is seeking donations of toiletries and other items for those deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. Donations may be dropped off at the Legion Post on Summer Street daily after 3 p.m. or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank branches on 3A or in the village.

Monetary donations are also accepted. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with "Soldiers Project" written in the memo line on the check. Checks can be mailed to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025.

The following items are being collected at the American Legion for deployed servicemen and women:

Batteries – AA and AAA, razors, mouthwash, Chapstick, nuts, shaving cream Ziploc bags of all sizes, hand warmers, baby wipes, pens and notepaper, Pringles, toothbrushes, toothpaste and floss.

Also, sports magazines, local newspapers, socks, T-shirts, candy (no chocolate), phone cards, peanut butter and crackers, dry tuna in a bag, deodorant, winter hats and gloves, gum, mints, Lifesavers, Q-Tips, sunscreen, soap and body wash, dry soup, beef jerky, Tylenol, Advil, Excedrin and cameras.

Lifelong valentines share their love stories

The first time they met, the two attended a house party with their friends and Dolores said her first impression was that John was very handsome. At the same time, John said, "I was three feet off the ground because I had just found out I passed the bar."

"It was a good time to meet," said Dolores.

From there, the couple began dating just about every weekend, and they haven't been apart since.

Dolores said there is no secret to the success of their marriage. "The love we have for each other encompasses patience, mutual respect, a willingness to sacrifice for the wants of someone else, being able to forgive if you've been offended and compromise, of course."

Having a good sense of humor and being able to take things in stride are also important. "You have to be able to laugh at yourself and laugh together," John said.

"You have to be able to laugh at yourself and laugh together."
— John Roy, Old Coach Road

While the two said they didn't have any specific plans for Valentine's Day this year, "We always celebrate with a special dinner or something like that," Dolores said.

Ralph and Maria Perroncello of Pleasant Street will be married 56 years this Sept. 23. Just as the Roys did, they met on a blind date. Maria said she was in the middle of giving her friend a permanent when suddenly there was a knock on the door. Unbeknownst to Maria, her friend's husband was in the service with Ralph and the couple had set the two up on a blind date without Maria knowing.

Maria and Ralph Perroncello will be married 56 years this September. Maria said even after all these years, Ralph never forgets to give her a Valentine.

While they laugh about it now, Maria said at first, she didn't like Ralph. "I was seeing someone else, but Ralph won out," she said. "He was kind and thoughtful," and he also traveled to see her, as he was living in Cohasset and she lived in Revere. "A year later, we were married," she said.

Maria said the key to their marriage is being honest with each other, caring for one another, and doing things together. "That's right," Ralph chimed in. Maria said after all these years, Ralph still sends her valentines. In return, Maria said this Valentine's Day, she will probably cook him something special. "Maybe we'll have a filet for dinner."

For the past 54 years, the motto for Lucia and Ed Woods has been "Same house, same spouse." The two moved into their Jerusalem Road home on their wedding night, Dec. 12, 1953, and have been adding to their family, and in turn, the house, ever since.

The two met at a party held for the 1952 Harvard/Yale football game. "I was there with a date and he was there with a girl, but

Lucia and Ed Woods met at a party held for the 1952 Harvard/ Yale football game.

Trudy and Nick Salerno were married on Valentine's Day 54 years ago. For them, having been engaged, married, and having their first child one day shy of Feb. 14, the day holds a very special meaning.

Lifelong valentines share their love stories

we sort of clicked," said Lucia, who went on to explain they had very similar backgrounds and they both knew some of the other's family. "We met in '52 and were married in '53 just about a year later," she said.

One of the things that has made the couple successful over the years is their mutual admiration for one another. Ed is quick to point out his wife's accomplishments and strong suits. "What attracted me was that she is on the outskirts of brilliant," he said, adding she loves to read and was on the Board of Library Trustees for three terms, has been very involved in many organizations around town and was very active with the Red Cross. "She's a marvelous lady and a brilliant cook. I'm partial to food and she keeps supplying it," he joked.

Lucia said her husband "Is the most good humored man I ever met. In our 54 years together, I think he's lost his temper twice," she said.

"Every day is Valentine's Day for us. We have a very loving family and no one day means more than another," Ed said.

"We were engaged on Valentine's Day, we were married the next Valentine's Day and then we had our first child almost on Valentine's Day 11 months later."

— Trudy Salerno

For Trudy and Nick Salerno of Ledge Way, Valentine's Day is one of the most special of the year as it is their wedding anniversary. "We were engaged on Valentine's Day, we were married the next Valentine's Day and then we had our first child almost on Valentine's Day 11 months later," said Trudy, adding she gave birth just hours short of Feb. 14.

Nick said he knew Trudy was the girl for him the second he laid eyes on her. He was an usher in Trudy's cousin's wedding, and when he saw her, he said to himself, "That's the girl I'm going to marry."

"Meanwhile, I was completely unaware," quipped Trudy.

At the reception, Nick asked Trudy for a dance, which was followed by asking for her phone number. Due to the fact that the wedding was a daytime event, when it was over, he immediately called her and asked her to go out with him that night. "That was it," said Nick, as they've been together from that moment on.

Nick said what has kept their marriage going strong is the bond they have from raising eight children together. "When you're worrying about bringing up a family, there's no time for other things to get in the way," he said. Trudy said keeping a sense of humor and laughing together often also helps keep the relationship going strong.

So this year on Valentine's Day, the Salernos will celebrate 54 wonderful years together. While they said over the years they've always celebrated, whether by going out to lunch when the kids were little or out to dinner as they got older, one thing is certain — they will do things a little differently this year to keep things fresh.

'An Afternoon with Isabella' to be held Feb. 11

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Cohasset Historical Society will present "An Afternoon with Isabella," Sunday, Feb.11, from 2 to 5 p.m., in the Pratt Building at 106 So. Main St. in Cohasset.

Acclaimed character actress, Jessa Piaia, will portray Isabella Stewart Gardner in a 50-minute dramatic first-person narrative set in 1909.

Mrs. Gardner, the flamboyant and free-spirited "Patroness of the Arts," is renowned for the design and construction of "Fenway Court," an architecturally lavish setting for her extensive Italian renaissance art collections, which she later willed to the City of Boston.

Jessa Piaia has performed at cultural and educational sites throughout New England since 1985 and has been lauded for her well- researched portrayals of famous women and their contributions in American history.

Before the performance, guests will be able to participate in a silent auction. Among the items up for bid are a free landscape design consultation, a pearl necklace created by CGCC member, Claire Tinory and a tea set donated by the Cohasset Historical Society.

After the performance, a formal tea catered by Arthur Roebuck will be served and several prizes including a gift certificate for French Memories, an iPod Shuffle and Victorian flower arrangements will be raffled.

The proceeds from this fundraiser will help fund the many programs and projects of both the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Cohasset Historical Society.

Tickets are available at the Pratt Building and are priced at $19.09 in honor of the year portrayed. There is limited seating for this performance. For ticket information call 781 383-1434.

Selectmen like resident's plan to rid streets of litter around town, eventually there will be less and less to take care of.

In addition to having residents volunteer, French said the businesses on Route 3A whose litter tends to pile up should be held to a higher standard. "The litter from their parking lots frequently finds itself along 3A. In particular, both Stop & Shop and Dunkin' Donuts should assume greater responsibility for the litter their businesses generate."

Although in general Cohasset is kept relatively clean and free of litter, French said there are a number of areas that need regular attention. Litter tends to gather on North Main Street (Great Swamp area); on King Street both the east and west areas adjacent to Route 3A; Sohier Street from the Cook Estate to Route 3A; Beechwood Street, both east and west areas adjacent to Route 3A; and Cedar Street from North Main Street to the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Members of the board thought French's idea was a good one and said if he is willing to spearhead the effort, they will support him. Selectman Fred Koed suggested sending a letter from the board's office to business owners asking if they would like to adopt portions of 3A.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said while he is in favor of the program, he noted for those areas in town which are taken care of by residents, there will have to be regulations in place to be sure if groups such as the Cub Scouts volunteer their time, they aren't in any danger being on the side of the road.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would work with French to come up with a plan. He said things might be more organized if he and French sit down and come up with a list of sections of 3A that need adopting then contact business owners located in the area who might consider sponsoring a section. He said if a business has a better idea of what their expectations would be in terms of keeping things clean, they would be more likely to participate.

Doane Street resident Ronnie McMorris noted there is also a lot of debris at the entrance to Wompatuck State Park. "There has been an increase in the number of people using the park and the amount of litter they're dumping is astounding. People will even toss it out their windows," she said. McMorris asked what the police could do in terms of imposing fines both for litter and the graffiti that is also turning up.

French noted the new Rocky Lane Bridge and the boxes for the Greenbush trains have already been spray painted with graffiti.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he heard in New York City, the only thing that has worked for getting rid of graffiti is immediate removal. He said the gratification of creating graffiti is the satisfaction of seeing your work and if it is immediately painted over or somehow removed, that gratification is gone and the person is less likely to keep coming back. "The removal has to be immediate though," he said.

French and Griffin said they would work together on a proposal and the issue will come before the Selectmen again in the future.

McNabb added he had visited with many other town boards and received endorsement for the restriction from the Water Resources Protection Committee, the Conservation Commission, the Open Space Committee and the Board of Health, to name a few.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer asked Quigley to explain what imposing the restriction on the property would accomplish. In other words, what would it prevent and what would it allow for use. Quigley read from the draft conservation restriction, which will need to be reviewed by Town Counsel. Prohibited uses include the constructing or placing of any building, structure, fill, landing strip, mobile home, swimming pool, tennis court, asphalt, concrete pavement and signs. Mining, excavating, dredging or removing from the premises soil, loam, peat, gravel, sand, rock or other mineral resources or natural deposit, cutting or otherwise destroying trees, grasses or other vegetation are also prohibited.

It also prohibits the installation of underground storage tanks, or the dumping on the premises of refuse, trash, vehicle bodies or parts, rubbish, debris, junk, waste or other substance or material, activities detrimental to drainage, flood control, water conservation, water quality, erosion control or soil conservation, wildlife habitat or archaeological conservation and the use of all motorized vehicles except for motorized wheelchairs, vehicles used by the town for upkeep and maintenance or safety vehicles.

Linden Drive resident Margy Charles, who has been a strong supporter of building affordable senior housing in town, said in her opinion, she would like to see the land stay the way it is. "Restrictions are forever," she said, and in the future, the land could become the site for affordable housing or a municipal building. "Certainly everyone wants to protect the water supply, but we've got lots of parks," she said.

Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street, who was a member of the Board of Selectmen when it was trying to develop senior housing on the Cook Estate, said the land could be used in a variety of ways, including becoming part of a land swap or the site of a town-sponsored affordable housing project. "There's no need to act on this restriction this evening," she said. McMorris added it would be a "crying shame if we never did any senior housing on this parcel."

However, Quigley said while the town does have a good amount of conservation land, not much of it protects Peppermint Brook. She said the recreational aspect of the land is only secondary to the protection purposes it serves. "This is a very highly developed area," she said.

Quigley added the town has looked at this parcel of land before to serve as many things including a cemetery, fire station, parking lot for the schools, and it's been found unsuitable for everything proposed. "There's only a very small portion that could be developed anyway, and the town could use this to protect our water supply. That's just a valid reason as all the others," she said. Quigley said many tests have been done on the site and it is primarily ledge and wetlands, which would make it hard to accomplish anything.

Developer and Beechwood Street resident Wayne Sawchuk asked whether the conservation restriction would prevent the water department from laying water pipes for the Abbott development on the Cook property. He said it was his understanding a water line was intended to run from Evergreen Lane across the town property to the Cook property. McNabb said that issue has been directed to Town Counsel and the Water Department is waiting to hear back.

Sawchuk also said the restriction could inhibit any kind of structure from being built on the property and it might be nice to include a small shelter to get out of the rain. While none of the other recreational parks in town have a shelter, in his opinion it would be a benefit.

Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford said in his opinion, the land is an asset to the town. "I don't think we've ever gotten an appraisal for the commercial viable use to really determine what could be done. Maybe something could be done for a few acres to help recoup the costs lost from the Cook Estate. What's the real value we're giving away?"

However, Selectman Fred Koed said he thought the land was zoned residential and would not lend itself to a commercial use. In addition, "That brook goes right into Lily Pond which is our drinking water," he said.

Spofford said if the appraisal comes back and there is no viable use for the property, then the decision will be a "no-brainer." However, "We should know what the value is before we give it away," he said.

Koed said due to the wet conditions of the property, there is no way to gain access without building a bridge over the brook. He said the last time the board discussed imposing the restriction, the only reason it deferred its decision was to allow the Cook developers the opportunity to use a portion of it for a septic system if necessary. He said the developers do not need to use it and the land doesn't perc, so in his opinion, it makes sense to restrict its use.

Dormitzer agreed and said he had walked the property last weekend and the only way it is accessible is through the Abbot development. "We would have to get an agreement from Abbot to come through," he said, adding even with permission, septic cannot be handled on the property for any kind of development.

Spofford said by imposing the restriction, it would preclude all development of the land in the future. He said he has spoken with Donald Staszko, Beach Street resident and owner of Cohasset Plaza, which abuts the town's property, and said "he does have a commercial interest in this property and he might want to explore it." Spofford said he has also heard Black Rock Road resident and developer George McGoldrick might be interested in building on the property.

Town Meeting

Quigley said while it might be nice for the town to recover some of the money it lost on the Cook project, it also has an obligation to uphold the vote of town meeting and to protect its water supply. "We're very fortunate to have a local water supply," she said, adding it's hard to hear people say the only real value for a piece of land if it can be sold or built upon.

Spofford clarified that is not what he had said and that he merely wanted more information before he could vote to restrict the use of the land.

McNabb said the area surrounding Peppermint Brook is so developed there is a huge need to "decrease or at least not add to" the pollution flowing into it. He said with two developers on deck who are interested in building on the town's property, there is even more urgency to restrict the land's use. He noted Abbot has done a wonderful job with its plans and incorporating rain gardens and swales to help with runoff, but development will likely add pesticides, herbicides, car oil, nutrients and other pollutants into nearby Peppermint Brook. "We don't need any more (pollution) in the watershed," he said.

McMorris said during her time on the board an appraisal was done on the property and "the value alone and with the Cook property was a significant amount of money." She said she recalled the number being over $1 million in conjunction with the Cook property and several hundred thousand alone. She asked why the Water Commission isn't offering some kind of compensation to the town if it would have paid for the land if privately owned. She also added any development that would take place on the town land is nothing in terms of pollution compared to the 27 homes that will be located next door in the Abbot development.

Selectman Ted Carr said in his opinion, the restriction is too limiting to initiate right now. "There are not too many parcels available that could be used for municipal use along 3A. We need to know more. What are our options?" he asked.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he favored putting the conservation restriction on the property. "We've been looking at this land since time immemorial," he said. "We need animal habitat and water protection and the property is an island by itself. We need to bite the bullet."

To that Vanderweil made a motion to enact the conservation restriction. Dormitzer, Vanderweil and Koed voted in favor while Spofford and Carr were opposed.

OPINION

Greenbush end in sight

Greenbush opponents and proponents may never see eye-to-eye on the project, but with the driving of the "final spike" Tuesday in Braintree – we should all be able to agree that the end of the Greenbush saga is now in sight.

Here at the Mariner we have supported the project because we thought it would be good for the South Shore. However, views about the controversial Greenbush project differed widely across the region and even among our own staff.

At Tuesday's celebratory event, the point that was driven home was the regional nature of the project.

Scituate's Susan Phippen talked to us about the "once in a lifetime chance" Scituate has — with the streetscape mitigation money it received due to the train — to improve the villages of North Scituate and Greenbush.

Weymouth Mayor David Madden said much the same about the redevelopment of Jackson Square and Weymouth Landing.

Former Braintree state representative Joseph Sullivan, who chaired the House Transportation Committee, talked about looking to the future and the economic benefits that the train could bring to our area.

Joining the chorus of cheers for the project were the Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Transportation, General Manager of the MBTA, and a handful of other state representatives and state senators.

Everyone chuckled when our state Sen. Robert Hedlund, a Greenbush critic, admitted to being the "skunk at the garden party". But Hedlund noted that he has never questioned the fact that Greenbush would be well subscribed. "Full" on day one, he said.

In downtown Hingham, streetscape plans are under way that should help create more ambiance; there are some creative ideas for the tunnel cap, including outside dining. (Readers may recall that the old right-of-way through Hingham Square was an unsightly hodgepodge of parking and old dumpsters.)

Along Route 3A here in Cohasset a new "TOD" (Transit Oriented District) is being developed next to the train station, which is at the old Graham Waste/Winter Garden site. The project is going to greatly improve what is the northern gateway to Cohasset.

Back in November, Cashman Balfour/ Beatty spokesman Tom Carroll said a winter with little snowfall would allow construction of the T stations on the Greenbush to proceed unhindered. If no snow was the top priority on the contractor's holiday wish list, this wish has so far been granted.

The Greenbush line seems to be gaining momentum as it rolls toward that anticipated day when that first commuter steps foot on the first passenger car on the inaugural run.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey, D-Quincy, a Greenbush supporter, said there would still be some "bumps in the road."

We know there will be challenges relating to traffic to and from the stations as well as at grade crossings. Public safety issues, including educating schoolchildren to stay away from the tracks, need to take center stage.

Greenbush will likely begin service at the end of the summer, exactly 10 years after the Plymouth and Middleboro lines started up. By all accounts, Greenbush has taken a long time. But as Mr. Sullivan said, it is time to look forward. Surely access to this form of public transit can be a good thing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dog waste 'out of bounds'

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading about August Oddleifson's outstanding Eagle Scout Project in the Jan. 26 Cohasset Mariner my family and I decided to take a walk over there on Sunday afternoon to check out the new map and enjoy our town's natural beauty.

It's been a few years since I've been in that park, and while we met many friendly people on our journey, I was appalled at the thick blanket of dog waste on both side of the trail, some of it right next to the dispenser that offers free "mitt-bags" to prevent this very thing!

I must confess to being a little perplexed at this phenomena, because there was so much of it I cannot just attribute it to carelessness or insolence by a few. Let's face it, from time to time people forget to bring a bag or perhaps they are distracted by flora or fauna at the crucial moment, but is it now simply considered "out of bounds" if the offending deposit is not right in the middle of the trail? Or perhaps, as in golf, there are "winter rules" where picking it up during the cold months is consider gauche?

As I said, I've not been to the park in some time (and thus not up on the latest etiquette) so hopefully my fellow readers will educate me. Let me add that Scout Oddleifson's map looks terrific and has already assisted one visitor to the park.

Applauds conservation restriction vote

TO THE EDITOR:

Monday night the Board of Selectmen voted 3-2 to apply for a Conservation Restriction to be placed on the 8.7 acres of Town-owned land abutting the Cook Estate as authorized by the two-thirds vote approving Article 14 at Town Meeting.

I thank the Board for its consideration. I thank Ralph Dormitzer, Fred Koed and Gary Vanderweil for upholding the wishes of the voters and for recognizing that land does have value other than development.

The intrinsic value of this land is in its ability to protect Peppermint Brook, a main tributary to Lily Pond – the source of our drinking water. This is the purpose of the Conservation Restriction.

The land evaluation stated: "The natural vegetative cover on the site protects the quality and flow of surface water into Peppermint Brook. Protection of the vegetative cover will contribute to the long-term quality and supply of water in the reservoir."

The following is apt: "There's more to it than beauty. It's difficult to explain why saving land is essential — especially if it doesn't appear to be spectacular… The land above our water supply aquifers may not be as inspiring at first glance as some other places…but by protecting the land we protect the water — one of the most valuable resources we can leave to our children and grandchildren." TTOR, The Smart in Smart Growth

Thank you to all who by supporting this effort have protected our drinking water supply.

Stormwater Bylaw hearing is Tuesday

The Stormwater Committee is holding a Public Hearing on the proposed Stormwater Bylaw at 7:30p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 13, in the basement meeting room in Town Hall. The Stormwater Bylaw will be considered at the March 31 Annual Town Meeting and is also sponsored by the Board of Health, Water Commission, and Conservation Commission.

At the Public Hearing, the Committee will give short presentation on the existing stormwater problems in Cohasset and then will take comments and questions from the audience.

"We urge all interested Cohasset residents to review the proposed Stormwater Bylaw and to come to the Public Hearing" said John McNabb, Chairman of the Stormwater Committee. "This bylaw is being proposed to help address the serious stormwater flooding and pollution problems in Cohasset and for the Town to comply with the Clean Water Act."

"This bylaw is being proposed to help address the serious stormwater flooding and pollution problems in Cohasset and for the Town to comply with the Clean Water Act."
— John McNabb, chairman

"We can still make changes to the proposed Bylaw if we need to before the Warrant goes to press," said McNabb, "so we urge all interested residents to please review the proposed Stormwater Bylaw and send comments and questions to us no later than Feb. 16. "

The Stormwater Committee can be contacted at stormwater02025@comcast.net to get a copy of the proposed Bylaw or to submit comments.

A copy of the Stormwater Bylaw Warrant Article can also be downloaded from the Town of Cohasset web site at www.townofcohasset.org_ or from the Cohasset Water Dept. web site at www.cohassetwater.org. Comments or questions may also be posted on the Committees blog at http://stormwatercohasset.blogspot.com/

The proposed Stormwater Bylaw establishes a new Stormwater Commission and authorizes the Commission to implement an annual Stormwater Improvement Program to prevent and reduce existing stormwater flooding and pollution, and for a new Stormwater Permitting Program to require new development or redevelopment to reduce their stormwater impacts to the greatest extent possible.

'Equipment is running on the tracks'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Safety, Safety, Safety — We can't say "safety" often enough. The accompanying photo, taken last week, shows a work car on the Greenbush tracks. In this instance the work car is loaded with materials and equipment necessary for installation of the fencing along the Greenbush right of way. Before significant railroad track completion, the construction crews had free access to the land around the tracks and installed most of the present fence posts and fencing from trucks parked alongside the tracks. Now, they will be using rail-based equipment to complete fence installation. As you can see there is still a lot of fence work to be completed.

So, what does this have to do with safety? It's just a reminder that there is equipment running on the tracks. In fact, in some ways it is more hazardous than when the train is up and running because the signals are not working and the equipment is not as visible or as loud as a full-scale train. The upshot being: Look for equipment on the tracks! And, don't walk on the tracks. Also, we might point out the railway is MBTA property and the MBTA doesn't take trespassing lightly.

Golden Spike Ceremony — On Tuesday, Feb. 6th, the MBTA held the ceremonial Golden Spike ceremony at the Braintree "Y". This is the place where the Greenbush line joins the other two Old Colony lines for their run on common track into Boston. You may ask, "Why Braintree?" The answer is an interesting piece of trivia. This is the only section of the Greenbush that has wooden railroad ties. The rest of the line uses concrete ties. Presto – if you want to pound spikes you gotta go to the Braintree Y! (In previous issues we did mention that all crossings use wooden ties because they stand up to road salt much better than concrete. But, with the rubber road covering in place the ties are no longer accessible.)

Drum Roll Please... — One of the advantages that we have is that we live in Cohasset. We understand, probably as well as anyone, what's happening in Town and what concerns its citizens have. One of the really hot buttons for the past several years has been the condition of Forest Avenue. If you routinely drive Forest Avenue, you know that it tends to be a rough ride. And, if you read this column, you are probably aware that the Town Manager sometimes asks the Greenbush Office to get involved in projects far removed from the Greenbush. The reason is that we are both engineers (not the train kind) and have the ability to provide solutions to some of the Town infrastructure problems while we are around Town Hall.

That's where Forest Avenue comes into the mix. We've talked about two small drainage projects that we were able to accomplish last year as a prelude to the completion of Forest Avenue work. We are now ready to begin the actual upgrade to the Forest Avenue infrastructure. This project is not as simple as slapping a coat of asphalt on the road and calling it a day. The entire project will consist of finishing the sidewalk so that it is continuous from North Main Street to Jerusalem Road. This in itself is not a trivial job. It involves some ledge removal, the removal of trees that will interfere with construction, the addition of retaining walls or slope easements on private property to avoid the cost of walls, addition of curbing, etc. The roadway will be ground back to a solid sub-surface, where needed, and given a new surface along its entire length. Clearly, this is not a trivial project. And like any construction project, there will be local disruptions as the construction proceeds.

Work car on the tracks for fence installation at Pleasant Street.

As time goes on, we'll use this column to advise you of the project plans and schedules. We believe that we have a plan that will permit the Town to accomplish this work at an absolute minimum of cost. How can we do that? Its simple, really it just takes some thought and lots of planning and management. Ordinarily, a consulting engineer will be hired, via public bid, to develop specifications for the entire job. Then, after checking references, the job is let to the lowest viable bidder.

So, why is this job different? First, the engineering work has been done through the Norfolk County Engineers. They have been dynamite to work with and have been very cooperative with the Town and very supportive. Second, this job will be paid for out of the Town's Chapter 90 money. (These are monies that are granted by the Commonwealth annually for road and road related construction activities.) The Town has been saving a portion of our Chapter 90 dollars for this project. So, there will be no impact on local taxes. Third, there is a state organization called the South Shore Regional Services Consortium (SSRSC). The SSRSC goes out to bid on a regional basis for construction commodities and services that are commonly needed by most towns. These include items like paving, street grinding, etc. By using the winning suppliers from the SSRC, we are able to take advantage of the consortiums huge purchasing power to get very good prices. They are generally substantially lower that we would get via direct bids for the Forest Avenue construction. This will make the construction portion very cost effective for the Town. Lastly, the Greenbush guys will provide the actual construction work oversight, saving the Town the cost of a much more expensive third party supervising field engineer.

In future articles we'll bring you up to date on the planning and actual construction schedules as they firm up.

Hoaxes are nothing new

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Call it what you will, call it a hoax or call it whatever, the stunt that Sean Stevens and Peter Berdovsky pulled on Boston the other day in the interest of the Cartoon Network's "Aqua Teen Hunger Force" was not the first advertising gimmick to catch the eye of a gullible public.

It didn't get much if any attention in North America some 15 years ago when a crop circle appeared in a field of rye outside Johannesburg that had social and scientific circles in Johannesburg and Capetown going ape over the possibility that extra terrestrials had landed and were sending a message.

Speculation went on for a couple of weeks before someone noticed that the circle formed a perfect logo for the BMW automobile and the ad agency Hunt Lascaris readily admitted it designed the crop circles for a TV commercial and, when all the results were in, the ad men figured they had gotten $1 million in free publicity.

Alex Boese, a graduate student at the University of California at San Diego, dug up a number of these advertising stunts for his doctoral dissertation, and published his research in a book called "The Museum of Hoaxes."

A public relations man named Harry Reichenbach was the mastermind behind two of these tricks designed to fool the public for profit.

Back in 1913, a New York shopkeeper was stuck with 2,000 copies of a painting showing a nude young woman modestly (if such can describe a person in the altogether) bathing on the edge of a pond. In desperation, the man paid Reichenbach $45 to devise a scheme to take the paintings off his hands.

Reichenbach placed one of the photos in the shop window. He paid two young boys to stand in front of the window and make knowing gestures. Then he called Anthony Comstock, the head of the Anti-Vice Society. Comstock filed for an injunction, which was denied. But the 2,000 painting were sold in days.

And the painting went on the sell more than seven million under the title 'September Morn."

Later, Reichenbach was called on to promote a movie called "The Return of Tarzan." So he rented a hotel room under the name "T.R. Zann," and had a lion delivered to the room. Even in the days before television, the resulting confusion drew widespread press coverage — just before the movie opened.

I suppose you've noticed how the ads for the latest movies all carry lines like "Scorcese scores again!" or "Tom Cruise has another winner!" attributed to a newspaper or TV reviewer, whether he or she meant it or not.

Well, a few years back, someone noticed that even the worst stinkers produced by Columbia Pictures were receiving rave reviews from David Manning, film critic for the Ridgefield Press, an obscure weekly paper in Connecticut.

A call to the Ridgefield Press showed that no one there ever heard of David Manning. Further investigation showed him to be the creation of an executive in the marketing department at Sony, the parent company of Columbia.

Like I say, Stevens and Berdovsky were not the first — nor will they be the last.

Singapore adventure and a Valentine wish

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

In the spring of 1993 at age 28 I traveled to Singapore on business. I had never set foot outside of North America before this trip, and was game for an adventure. I brought a backpack, a dome tent, a naptha stove, cooking pots, a water filter, and enough supplies for a long hike. For a nerd Iwas in good shape, and my plan was to climb the tallest mountain in Malaysia after I'd finished my two weeks in Singapore.

Kinabalu mountain is located on the island of Borneo. Rather than fly there my Singaporean colleagues suggested I go by train up the Malaysian Peninsula to Gunan Tahan, which is the tallest mountain in Western Malaysia and considered an even more difficult hike, requiring seven days to the summit and back through the jungle, with 10 river crossings and all the leech encounters that implies. That all sounded like a good time to me, for reasons I can't quite recall now, so every day after work I ran and climbed stairs and hiked through the sweltering city with my gear to prepare as best I could.

The accommodations on the train from Singapore to Gua Musang were somewhat primitive. The bathroom consisted of a hole in the floor through which you could see the railroad ties whizzing by. There was no sign of any running water, and at midnight the temperature in my upper bunk was 90 degrees. On the ceiling to my right was a small rotating electric fan. For 28 out of every 30 seconds I would wait impatiently for that fan to point in my direction, then I'd get a delicious two second breath of a breeze and the cycle would repeat.

The ride lasted about eight hours through the night. Every 40 minutes or so we stopped in the middle of nowhere — no platform, no nothing. A few passengers would disembark, trudge off into the pitch dark, and the train would rumble forward again.

At four in the morning we reached my stop — a bona fide station. Fifteen vehicles representing five centuries of technological development were waiting in hopes of earning a 50-cent fare. The road to Sungei Relau was so punishing that the small van I'd chosen for a taxi must have sustained $300 worth of damage, so when its middle-aged driver asked me for the equivalent of two dollars I gave him 10.

He wept.

At sunrise I was assigned a guide, a teenage boy named Kai sporting flipflops and half a gram of body fat. He was singularly unimpressed with me, and over the next three days his regard went steadily down hill. In my expensive hiking boots I was constantly stumbling over roots and slipping on rocks while he negotiated the jungle trail like a besandaled mule. When my $50 water filtering system went belly-up the first time I tried to use it on the silty brown river water he just shook his head and hiked on, even faster than before. I couldn't shake the feeling that he hoped to lose me.

That night it poured rain, as it did every night. Nothing ever dried out during the humid day either, which added 15 pounds to my heavy pack and kept my feet soaked. With every step they were softening, blistering, festering. The more exhausted I got the clumsier I became, and was forever struggling to catch up with Kai. Sometimes I wouldn't see him for an hour. This mountain was his back yard, and the idea that "Europeans" like me would travel thousands of miles just to climb it was endlessly amusing to him.

By the end of the third day I was out of food. I had to ask Kai to share his. Normally I can't stand seafood in any form, but I gratefully downed bowl after bowl of whole little fish and rice. I would have eaten my dearest friend at that point. I've never been so hungry.

On the fourth day things began to get difficult. By this time I was drinking straight from the river. It was that or die. Whenever we waded through water above my waist I would find three or four leeches latched on at the belt line. (Like ticks, you never felt them until you pulled them off.) The trail got much steeper. I was fading fast and Kai was getting annoyed having to wait for me. I had lost 15 pounds. I was so tired and blistered I wasn't sure I could make it back even if we turned around right there.

It was at exactly this lowest point that an idea popped into my head: if I somehow managed to make it back home I would propose to my girlfriend, Brigid.

I don't know where this idea came from. The two of us had never discussed marriage. For four days my mind had been entirely focused on the present, on survival, not girlfriends or the future. I only know that when this idea hit me a kind of miracle occurred. I felt no pain. No fatigue. No weight. I floated up the mountain, not only catching up to Kai but passing him. When I did so I laughed. I couldn't help it. Something totally out of the realm of my experience was happening. Twice I waited on a little plateau for 10 minutes before he met me, looking more annoyed by my unexplained strength than he'd ever been by my feebleness and dependence.

A week later I was back home in California, driving to Half Moon Bay with Brigid. We lit a fire on the beach, ate pizza, talked and laughed, and then I took her hand and proposed to her.

It was the last time I ever managed to completely surprise her.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, and would like to wish his wife a happy Valentines Day. Since she never reads his Mariner articles we're hoping he also thought to purchase a humorous card.

The deadline to pull papers for this year's Annual Town Election is Thursday, Feb. 15 and so far, there isn't much of a race for any of the open seats. Only one person pulled papers for the Annual Town Election this week: James Richardson of Brewster Road who is looking to retain his seat on the Recreation Commission. Daniel J. Martin of Linden Drive pulled papers last week for a seat on the Commission as well. Mary Muncey has indicated she will not seek reelection this year.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15.

McBrien's station not expanding use

A letter sent by Building Commissioner Robert Egan to Thomas McBrien, owner of Cohasset Car Care by McBrien's in the Village, indicates the new business will not be operating a towing business out of its South Main Street garage. Included in Selectmen's correspondence, the letter confirmed a conversation that took place between Egan and McBrien, and was sent Jan. 16.

"I explained to you that the operation of an 'auto service station and automotive repair garage' is a use that is allowed under a special permit in the Downtown Business District. Apparently, the owner of the property, Mr. Roukounakis, has been operating a service station at that site for 35 years and the use probably preceded him. It is not surprising that there is no record of a special permit having been issued. In that case, the use is considered to be pre-existing non conforming and may be continued without expansion unless abandoned. The change of owners or tenants does not change its status.

"My concern was that you might unknowingly assume that your towing operation could be transferred to this site which would obviously be an expansion of the use. You indicated that you had no intention of doing so and that it would continue to operate from the North Scituate site. You further indicated that there will only be one tow truck at the Cohasset location which will be used to retrieve vehicles to be brought in for repair. You also indicated that there will be no parking of tow trucks (other than the one) and no storage of vehicles other than those waiting for service."

Egan said if McBrien would at some point like to expand the use beyond normal service station activities, he would be required to obtain a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Health Notes

When cold weather causes problems

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cold weather affects us all, but infants and older adults are specially at risk. Infants less than one-year-old lose body heat more easily than adults and they can't make more by shivering. Older adults often make less body heat because of a slower metabolism and less physical activity. Ability to feel a change in temperature decreases with age, and older people are more susceptible to health problems caused by cold. In cold weather, an easy-to-read thermometer in an indoor location becomes a safety device.

Risk of frostbite is increased in people with reduced blood circulation or who are not dressed properly for cold temperatures.

Wear Appropriate Clothing — Outer layers should be, wind resistant to reduce heat loss. Wool, silk, or polypropylene inner layers of clothing will hold more body heat than cotton. Stay dry — wet clothing chills the body rapidly. Excess perspiration increases heat loss. Gasoline or alcohol on your skin while working outside greatly increase heat loss from the body. Don't ignore shivering. It's a first sign the body is losing heat and a signal to return indoors.

Avoid Exertion — Remember, your body is already working hard just to stay warm, so don't overdo it.

Understand Wind Chill — In high winds, serious weather-related health problems are more likely because wind carries heat away faster than in calm conditions.

Hypothermia — Cold temperatures cause your body to lose heat faster than it can be produced. Prolonged exposure will eventually use up your body's stored energy resulting abnormally low body temperature or hypothermia which makes the victim unable to think clearly or move well; particularly dangerous since one may not know it is happening.

Hypothermia, most likely at very cold temperatures, can occur when it's only cool (above 40 F) if a person becomes chilled from rain, sweat, or submersion in cold water. Victims are often: elderly, babies sleeping in cold bedrooms, people who remain outdoors for long periods — hikers, hunters, etc; and people who drink alcohol or use illicit drugs.

- Signs of hypothermia:

Adults: shivering, exhaustion, confusion, fumbling hands, memory loss, slurred speech, drowsiness.

Infants: bright red, cold skin, very low energy

- What to Do — Take the person's temperature. If it is below 95 , it's an emergency—get medical attention immediately. If medical care is not available, get the victim inside and begin warming as follows:
- Remove wet clothing. Warm the center of the body first — chest, neck, head, and groin — using an electric blanket, if available. Or use skin-to-skin contact under loose, dry layers of blankets, clothing towels, or sheets. Warm beverages can help increase the body temperature, but do not give alcoholic beverages. Do not try to give beverages to an unconscious person. After body temperature has increased, keep the person dry and wrapped in a warm blanket, including the head and neck.

Severe hypothermia may cause unconsciousness and apparent loss of pulse or breathing. In this case, handle the victim gently, and get emergency assistance immediately. Even if the victim appears dead, CPR should be provided. CPR should continue while the victim is being warmed until the victim responds or medical aid becomes available. In some cases, hypothermia victims who appear to be dead can be successfully resuscitated.

Frostbite — Frostbite, injury to flesh from freezing, causing a loss of feeling and color in affected areas. Generally affecting nose, ears, cheeks, chin, fingers, or toes, frostbite can permanently damage the body and severe cases can lead to amputation. Risk of frostbite is increased in people with reduced blood circulation or who are not dressed properly for cold temperatures.

- Recognizing Frostbite — At the first signs of redness or pain in any skin area, get out of the cold or protect any exposed skin—frostbite may be beginning. Any of the following signs may indicate frostbite: a white or grayish-yellow skin area; skin that feels unusually firm or waxy numbness. Victim is often unaware of frostbite because the frozen tissues are numb.
- What to Do — Seek medical care. Because frostbite and hypothermia both result from exposure, first determine whether the victim also shows signs of hypothermia. Hypothermia is a more serious medical condition and requires emergency medical assistance.

If (1) there is frostbite but no sign of hypothermia and (2) immediate medical care is not available: Get into a warm room as soon as possible. Unless absolutely necessary, do not walk on frostbitten feet or toes—this increases the damage. Immerse the affected area in warm— not hot —water (the temperature should be comfortable to the touch for unaffected parts of the body). Or, warm the area using body heat. Don't cause more damage by rubbing the frostbitten area with snow or massaging it. Don't use artificial heat for warming. Affected areas are numb and can be easily burned.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senator's votes on two roll calls from the week of January 29-February 2. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

All roll calls are from debate on the set of rules that the Senate will follow during the 2007-2008 session. The Senate adopted the package of rules on a voice vote without a roll call.

The Senate rejected several other proposed new rules on voice votes including one requiring that the six-member Senate Ethics Committee include three Democrats and three Republicans rather than five Democrats and one GOP member. Another proposal that would have abolished the Senate system of "pairing a vote" also went down to defeat. This pairing procedure allows a senator who is absent when a roll call vote is taken, to express his view anyway. Under the arrangement, the absent senator contacts a senator who is present and plans to vote the opposite way. The present senator agrees to "pair" his vote with that of the absent senator. Neither vote is counted in the official total—they cancel each other out. Supporters of pairing said that it is a good process that allows senators to be unofficially recorded on a roll call when they are absent because of extenuating circumstances. Opponents said that pairing is an "academic exercise" that is confusing to people and makes it appear that a senator voted when in fact he or she was not even present in the chamber.

The Senate also approved, on a voice vote, a new rule to require a report by April 1 from the special legislative commission established in 2005 to look into arranging for television coverage of House and Senate sessions. The problem with the new rule is that sources tell Beacon Hill Roll Call that the Senate does not have the power, through its rules, to require a report from a commission that was created by state law and no longer exists. The commission was originally ordered to give its report by November 1, 2005 but that deadline came and went and the commission has yet to issue a report. Sources say that the Senate plans to change the new rule to one requiring the Senate members of the commission to issue a report on the possibility of Senate coverage by April 1. The House and Senate did not renew their contract with public television station WGBX to cover legislative sessions. The House sessions are currently broadcast on the Internet while Senate sessions are not broadcast anywhere.

LONG TERM DEBTS OF STATE

Senate 36-0, approved a new rule requiring that the annual Senate version of the state's multi-billion budget include a description of the state's long-term pension, bond and other obligations. Supporters of the new rule said that it would be very helpful to include these long-term debts in the budget in order for senators to get a full picture of the state's finances and obligations and begin to develop solutions. They noted that the state has an unfunded pension liability of $13 billion - the gap between the amount the state has on hand to pay its retirees and the amount the state owes them. They argued that the state's obligation to pay off this debt is likely to result in budget program cuts and/or higher taxes. (A "Yes" vote is for the new rule).

TV COVERAGE OF SENATE SESSIONS

Senate 36-0, approved a new rule allowing television stations to seek permission from the Senate to broadcast any sessions of the Senate. Supporters of the new rule said that it would be a temporary one that stays in place until the Senate makes permanent arrangements for regular coverage of Senate sessions. Permanent solutions include the possibility of arranging coverage similar to the C-Span broadcasts of the U.S. Congress. (A "Yes" vote is for the new rule).

MAKE DAYLIGHT-SAVING TIME PERMANENT - A bill filed by Sen. Michael Knapik (R-Westfield) would make daylight-saving time (DST) permanent in Massachusetts beginning in 2009. Supporters say that part-time DST is an antiquated system that wastes energy, limits outdoor activities during the winter and creates sleep problems for many people for several weeks after the clocks change.

FOOD ALLERGIES - Sen. Cynthia Creem (D-Newton) has proposed legislation requiring all restaurants to prominently display a poster about food allergy awareness in the staff area and to include on all menus a notice of the customer's obligation to inform the server about any food allergies. The measure also requires restaurants with a seating capacity of 50 or more maintain on the premises a master list of all the ingredients used in the preparation of each food item on the menu.

SEX OFFENDERS AND DRIVER'S LICENSES - Registered sex offenders would be required to renew their driver's license annually and in-person at the Registry of Motor Vehicles under a proposal filed by Sen. James Timilty (D-Walpole). The measure also requires offenders to annually provide proof of their current address to the Registry and to pose for a new license photo. Supporters say that this would ensure closer supervision and monitoring of these offenders.

MUST HAVE PHOTO ID TO VOTE - Sen. Scott Brown (R-Wrentham) filed a proposal requiring voters to show a photo identification at their polling places in order to be allowed to vote.

Selectmen urged to reconsider vote

To the Editor:

Monday night, despite requests to review all options, Selectmen Dormitzer, Vanderweil and Koed voted to place a conservation restriction on town land adjacent to the Cook Estate. While this decision pales in comparison to the lost opportunity to develop senior housing on these properties, it is nonetheless significant.

In August, 2003 Mulhern and Associates prepared an independent appraisal for the town of both the Cook property and the adjacent town land. At the time the market value of the Cook estate was over $4 million ($4,010,000); the town land tied to the Cook estate as a subdivision over $1.3 million ($1,325,000); and the town land standing alone, $595,000. That potential revenue is now lost to the taxpayers forever.

At least two developers with an interest in senior/affordable housing contacted selectmen before the meeting. Those options should have been explored. It was in the best interests of the town to explore those options, not to bend to political pressure.

I urge the Selectmen to reconsider their vote for several reasons:

They were uniformed as to the true value and development potential of that parcel as it appears that they had not reviewed the appraisal.

There remains an unmet need for senior housing and land is scarce.

Threats to the water supply must be genuine and substantiated by evidence of added nitrogen loading. Solutions should track the data and if development restriction is required, fair-market value should be paid by the Water Commission.

We need to build what needs to be built and save what needs to be saved and not give away hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars.

A million dollar mistake

To the Editor:

A valuable piece of town owned real estate was given a $0 value by the Selectmen last Monday evening. By a three-to-two vote, eight acres of land behind the Cook Estate was designated by the Selectmen as conservation land, even though an appraisal had determined its value to be in excess of $600,000.

Coupled with the $400,000 already spent on the ill-fated Cook Estate, the Town is out $1 million.

Why was there a rush to restrict this land?

When the Town authorized the Selectmen to restrict the land based upon petitions from abutters, the Cook Estate was going to be affordable senior housing and the Town was to receive its investment back. So, giving up land seemed like a good compromise with the abutters. Now the land is not going to senior affordable housing and the Town is out $400,000.

For a Town that has little precious buildable land, monetary pressures, and no affordable housing built in years, the decision to restrict this Town-owned land is befuddling.

True, it abuts a watershed, but of the eight acres, five would be restricted by stringent state and local setbacks. Within the three remaining buildable acres something could be built or at least some value could be realized that would not have affected the watershed.

Suggestions? How about some affordable housing for town employees? Or a few units of Senior affordable housing? As a member of Habitat for Humanity we would love to have the parcel donated for a couple of homes. The new developer of the Cook Estate might pay something to increase their unit count, reduce setbacks or even pay a nominal amount to restrict affordable housing built on the site. Commit five of the eight acres to conservation and derive some value from the balance. There's value there, let's get smart and find it.

To restrict this land under the new set of circumstances is irresponsible. It appears that the some of the Selectmen have not even read the appraisal.

It is the fiduciary responsibility of the Selectmen to revisit this decision. At the very least they need to take the time to understand what the value of the land is and then make an informed decision. It may be that the best scenario is to restrict its use for conservation. But this decision to restrict the land without the benefit of an understanding of its value is careless at best.

'Heroes in our midst'

To the Editor:

I write to express my appreciation to the Cohasset Fire Department and Police Department for their superb handling of the fire downtown last week. I left the building that houses the Windsor Tea Shop and the other shops in that building to see flames shooting out of the second story of a building nearby. The winds were quite strong and the flames were frightening in their intensity. I feared especially for all the apartments on the second stories of those downtown businesses and all the people housed there. The fire was a very difficult one to contain and we could still see it from our home on the common for quite some time.

As I drove around the detour to get home, I thought of the bravery of those firefighters, who are willing to risk their lives for us in such a situation. Earlier in the week, there had been fear of an electrical wiring problem in our area. Our home was checked, several hours were spent correcting what could have been a dangerous problem. Our firemen and women are heroes in our midst and I just wished to salute them and to thank them for that dedication.

CHS Athletics say 'thank you'

To the Editor:

Nowadays, it would be impossible to run a successful high school athletic program without the support of your local community. On behalf of the School Committee, administration, coaches, parents and most importantly the student-athletes, I would like to thank all of the organizations that have made financial commitments and donations to support our athletic program this year.

On Feb. 10, at the MIAA Division 3 South Sectional Individual Tournament, the CHS Wrestling Team will debut its brand-new mat purchased with a $10,000 donation from the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. This new, lightweight mat will also be used by the cheerleading squad for the halftime performances at basketball games.

We would like to thank Pilgrim Bank for donating $1000 towards the reconditioning and painting of the Alumni Field scoreboard this past fall. Pilgrim Bank purchased the scoreboard for the school when Alumni Field was built.

We also would like to thank the following Booster Clubs for going above and beyond the usual this year:

- Gridiron Club (Football)
- Soccer Boosters Club
- Field Hockey Boosters Club
- Golf Boosters Club
- Cheerleading Boosters Club
- Basketball Boosters Club
- Ice Hockey Boosters Club
- Swimming Boosters Club
- Wrestling Boosters Club
- Skiing Club
- Diamond Club (Baseball and Softball)
- Lacrosse Boosters Club
- Track and Field Boosters Club
- Tennis Boosters Club

These clubs have funded additional coaching positions, pool and ice time, transportation expenses, provided financial assistance with junior varsity programs, volunteered their time at tournaments and concession stands, funded banquets and awards for our student-athletes, etc.... The efforts of these parents and supporters will enable our student-athletes at Cohasset to continue to be one of the top performing athletic programs in the state.

To everyone in the community from the businesses to the individual families who give their resources and time to assist our student — athletes, thank you for all you do. We hope that we can continue to be a program that the entire Cohasset community can be proud of.

Athletic Director

Stormwater comments sought

To the Editor:

Every surface water body in Cohasset is contaminated from stormwater runoff, which also is a major cause of flooding in town. The Stormwater Committee has been examining this issue since it was appointed in August and is working on a Stormwater Bylaw to propose at the March 31 Annual Town Meeting.

The Stormwater Committee is having a public hearing at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 13 in the basement meeting room at Town Hall. We urge anyone interested in this important issue to review the draft Stormwater Bylaw at www.cohassetwater.org and to come to the hearing. Please also email any comments or questions to us at stormwater02025@comcast.net.

that one of the girls was out on the floating dock and could not get back in. The incident occurred at about 4:30 p.m., Wednesday (Jan. 31).

Chief Hussey said an officer went to the location and the girls were fine.

Larceny report

Police are investigating a contractor who accepted partial payment for roofing work and then did not perform.

Chief Hussey said the investigation came to Cohasset by way of Carver where, Hussey thought, the contractor had his business.

A Cohasset resident had hired this individual and signed a contract; the resident paid one-third ($4,000) of the estimated cost.

"The check was cashed but the contractor never came back to the work," Hussey said. He said the contractor kept making excuses.

Cohasset Detective Garrett Hunt is investigating and gathering all the facts. "It is possible this contractor could go to court for larceny if this is not resolved," Hussey said.

Well-being check

Police forcibly entered the home of an elderly resident on Beechwood Street last Thursday(Feb. 1) to see if the gentleman was OK. A relative of the resident had contacted police to ask for a welfare check. He said the telephone service had been cut off. Police checked with the Council on Elder Affairs and Meals on Wheels to see if anyone know of the resident's whereabouts.

"We had contact with a relative (the caller was a cousin) and there was no confirmation that he had left town, so we thought it best to enter the premises," Chief Hussey said. Police did make a forced entry and no one was found. Later that day, police received information that the elderly resident had been brought to a nursing home. "We spoke with a stepdaughter who confirmed that he had," Hussey said.

Hussey urged elderly residents to let relatives know if they are leaving town or to contact the Council on Elder Affairs.

"We will do a forced entry if we cannot confirm if someone is away," he said.

Hussey said police would make restitution with the property owner for damage to the doors.

Uninsured MV

The owner of an uninsured motor vehicle is being summonsed to court for allowing his car to be driven uninsured and with a revoked registration. Police made the traffic stop last Thursday (Feb. 1) at about 7:53 p.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway after observing that the 1993 Dodge Intrepid had a headlight out. The officer ran a check on the registration that came back revoked due to no insurance.

The owner of the vehicle was a passenger in the car, Chief Hussey said.

AAA called

AAA called Cohasset police asking for an officer to assist an elderly woman with a flat tire. AAA, which was on its way to help the woman, told police she sounded very nervous and asked if they would go down there. The incident occurred at about 6:18 p.m., Saturday (Feb. 3) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A).

"We took a ride down there and made sure she was fine," Chief Hussey said.

Historical Society to begin spring lecture series

The Cohasset Historical Society will begin its Spring Lecture Series Wednesday, Feb. 21, beginning at 7:30 p.m., at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street, Cohasset, with a program titled, "Greetings From Two Centuries."

John Billington, a passenger on the Mayflower and resident of Plimoth Plantation, will represent the 17th Century. John will relate the hardships of the voyage on the Mayflower and the realities of life in the new land. John will then introduce his 21st century persona, Ray Byrne, who will talk about his own background in both acting and business and what lead him to his role at Plimoth Plantation. Ray will also share the behind the scenes of life at the plantation and what it took to prepare for his place in the village.

John Billington, a passenger on the Mayflower and resident of Plimoth Plantation, will represent the 17th Century.

Plimoth Plantation provides visitors with a living museum and Ray Byrne, also known as John Billington, will provide participants with an inside-out view of this colonial world. All are invited to attend; there is no charge and light refreshments will be served.

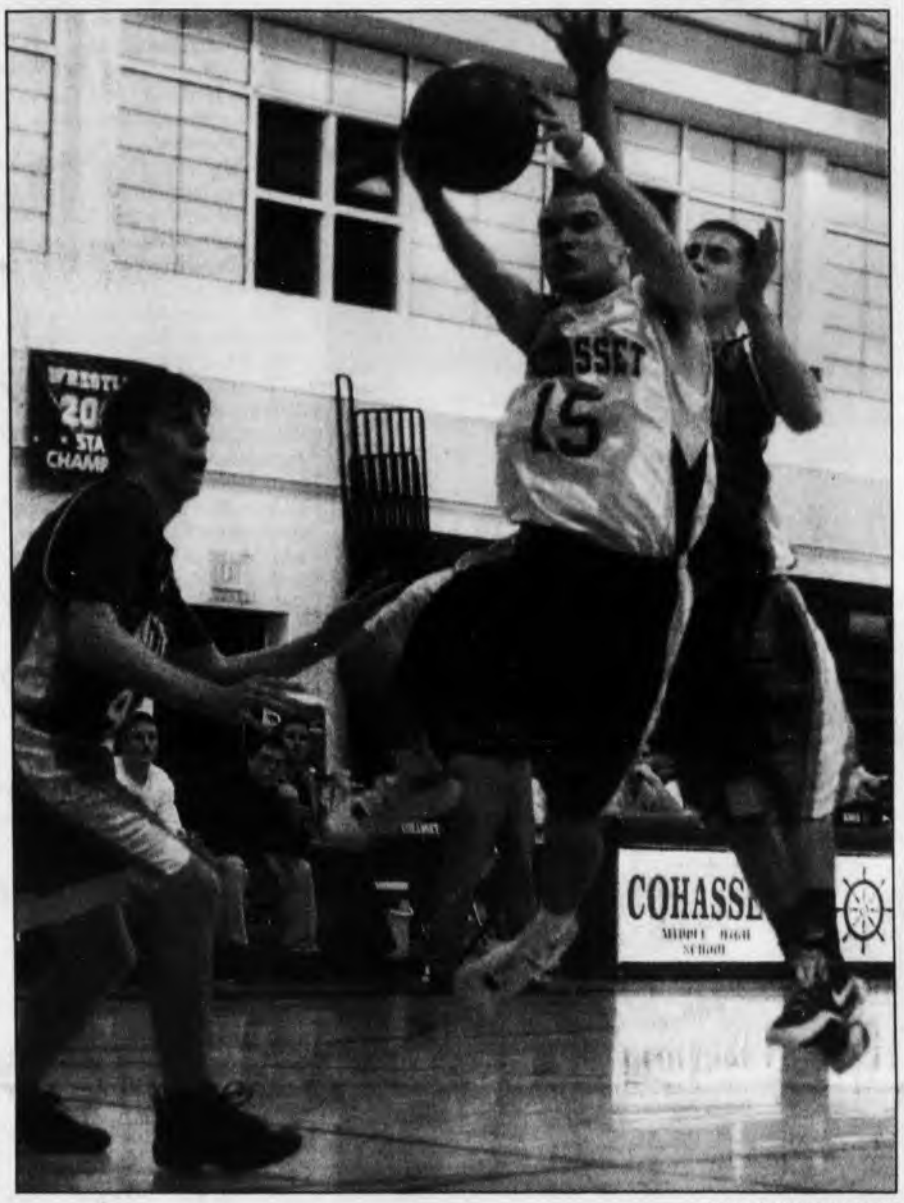
Positive week for the Skippers

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

As the Cohasset High boys basketball team was looking like the teams of the past couple of years for the past few months, they turned it on this past week winning two in a row and then dropping another close one.

Although they lost to archrival Hull on Tuesday, 55-44, prior to that the Skippers won two in a row, scoring over 70 points both games, including their season high total of 77 last Friday against Harwich.

Cohasset recently won its first South Shore League game two years against East Bridgewater, but had failed to get a league win in front of their own fans. That all changed as the Skippers ran all over Harwich for a 77-61 win.



The game started fast paced and remained that way for most of the game, as both teams were scoring on almost every possession. The key for Cohasset in this game was its press, which forced poor shots from Harwich and gave Cohasset more chances to score.

With about eight minutes left in the first half Cohasset began to pull away, with junior co-captain Pat McCarthy doing most of the scoring. From there, the Skippers never looked back as they went into the locker room up 19 points. Against a team that had just beaten Hull, Cohasset looked like a completely different group that was having fun and doing all the right things.

McCarthy had 15 points in the first half and would finish with that as well. Fellow co-captain and senior Justin Alexander put up nine in the first half, finishing with 15 points also.

Unlike the rest of the games

Sci-Coh swimmers come up a little short against Duxbury

By Alyssa Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

Heading into last Tuesday's meet against Duxbury the Scituate-Cohasset swim teams knew they needed to bring their A-game to keep pace with the also undefeated Dragons in the Patriot League standings. Both teams gave it their all, but in the end Duxbury handed the Sci-Cohs (5-1) their first loss of the season. The girls fell nine points shy of their competitors as they lost, 96-87, while the boys finished 12 points behind the competition as they lost, 99-87.

With only 14 boys and no male divers, the Scituate-Cohasset squad fought an uphill battle from the very beginning against a very large Duxbury contingent.

Juniors Brian McGuiness and Johnny Drybanski both swam state qualifying times in their respective events. McGuiness scored a first place finish with a state final qualifying time of 1:52.34 in the 200-yard freestyle. Drybanski swam impressively in the 200-yard individual medley with a state qualifying time of 2:11.44. Drybanski also earned a state sectional qualifying time (1:01.00) in the 100-yard butterfly event. Freshman John McGuiness improved his personal best time in the 500-yard freestyle by seven seconds as he finished with a time of 6:02.00.

The girls swam a tough meet as well, falling just short of victory against the Dragons.

Individually, freshman Mimi Mahoney swam an excellent 100-yard backstroke with a state sectional qualifying time of 1:10.93. Mahoney also contributed to a win along with teammates Torey Hart, Caitlin Mahoney and Megan Little in the 200-yard medley relay with a state sectional qualifying time of 2:03.94.

Torey Hart broke her old team record in the 100-yard breaststroke event with a state sectional qualifying time of 1:17.19. Cohasset's Betsy Crawford won first place in the diving competition.

"We swam a great meet and we worked as hard as we could," head coach Jon Fortin said. "The way we practice, we deserve to be the league champions."

The Sci-Coh swimmers will have a chance to face Duxbury again at the Patriot League championships Saturday, Feb. 10, at Middleboro High School. The meet is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m.

Grapplers ready for postseason

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

From the time its athletes first hit the mat in the preseason, the Cohasset High wrestling team is gearing up for the team and individual postseasons.

Tournament time is now, as CHS is hosting Saturday's Div. 3 South sectional individual tournament. The action begins at 10 a.m., with final rounds beginning at 6 p.m. The top four wrestlers in each weight class advance to next weekend's Div. 3 state tournament at Wayland High School.

And either Tuesday or Wednesday, the Skippers will start what they hope is a long run in the Div. 3 team dual meet tournament. Seedings and matchups were not available as of press time Thursday, but Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney said he expects a competitive tournament.

"It's wide open this year," he said. "I think all of the teams can beat any of the other teams. There is no clear favorite."

The Skippers will enter the tournament with a 15-12 dual meet record, thanks to a sweep of last Saturday's tri-meet with Silver Lake (a 60-12 win for Cohasset) and Nauset (60-21). Ten wrestlers won two matches for the team: seniors Ryan McLellan (125), Gannon Dorion (152), Tim Toomey (160) and Nick Cambi (189); sophomores Rudy Helbock (103), Steven Gratta (119), David Toomey (130) and Mike Froio (145); and freshmen Jack Murphy (112) and Nick Lieberman (215).

"The kids have been wrestling really well lately," Sweeney said. "To this point, I'm pleased with the effort of the team. This is a fairly young team that has improved a lot. Hopefully, we'll see some of the culmination of that this weekend."

Lady Skippers on the verge

Need 2 wins in final 4 games to qualify for state tournament

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It took a couple months, but Cohasset girls basketball coach John Levangie believes his team is starting to get it.

The Skippers scored perhaps their biggest win of the year last Friday in Harwich, always a difficult place to play, with a 41-40 victory over the Rough Riders.

Strong defense and some clutch plays made the difference for the girls in blue. Senior Haley Haracz and sophomore Sammi Lehr (game-high 16 points) both made big free throws in the closing minutes, and freshman Meredith Kelley (11 points) made a critical baseline jumper.

Levangie also praised the play of his guards, who led an effort that saw the Skippers commit just 11 turnovers. Compare that to the 34 they had in the first game against Harwich, and the coach has reason for optimism looking forward.

"I thought the younger kids came of age in that game," Levangie said. "The practice before that game, I saw something different from them, and then the next day they turn around and beat a good Nantucket team."

In that game last Saturday, a 51-42 win over the Whalers, senior forward Lacey Richardson scored 19 points, while junior Kayla Farren finished with 11. Levangie also praised the rebounding effort by the Haracz and the Lehr sisters, Sammi and Tori. That's Cohasset High School seniors Jeff Brown and Christina Pinkus will both continue their athletic careers at Div. 1 schools next year. Brown will play lacrosse at the University of Denver, while Pinkus will play softball at Wagner College in New York City.

Top of the class

CHS seniors Jeff Brown, Christina Pinkus to play Div. 1 college athletics

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It's not often you hear about a town as small as Cohasset producing a Division 1 college athlete.

But two in one class?

As unlikely as it seems, it's happening. CHS seniors Jeff Brown and Christina Pinkus will both continue pursuing their athletic endeavors at the highest level next year. Brown will play lacrosse at the University of Denver, while Pinkus will roam the softball diamond at Wagner College in New York City.

Pinkus, who was also being recruited by Hofstra University, Hartford and Rutgers, among others, said she was interested in going to school in the NYC area and that Wagner, located just outside Manhattan, is "the perfect place" for her.

"I was flattered by all the interest I was getting from different schools," Pinkus said Tuesday. "I've been working so hard the last few years; the outcome was great."

Pinkus, a lefthander, is one of the South Shore League's best pitchers, but it is her bat that ultimately attracted the most attention from college coaches. She hit over .400 as a junior last spring for the Skippers, and carried that into prestigious showcase tournaments across the country with her club team, Rhode Island Thunder Gold.

Wagner softball coach Glen Payne liked what he saw from Pinkus, who will play first base for the Seahwaks.

"Our staff just loved the way Christina hits every pitch with power," said Payne on Wagner's athletics web site. "Throughout the recruiting process she would continually hit home runs every time we saw her. I'd expect for her to compete for time in the middle of the line-up right away."

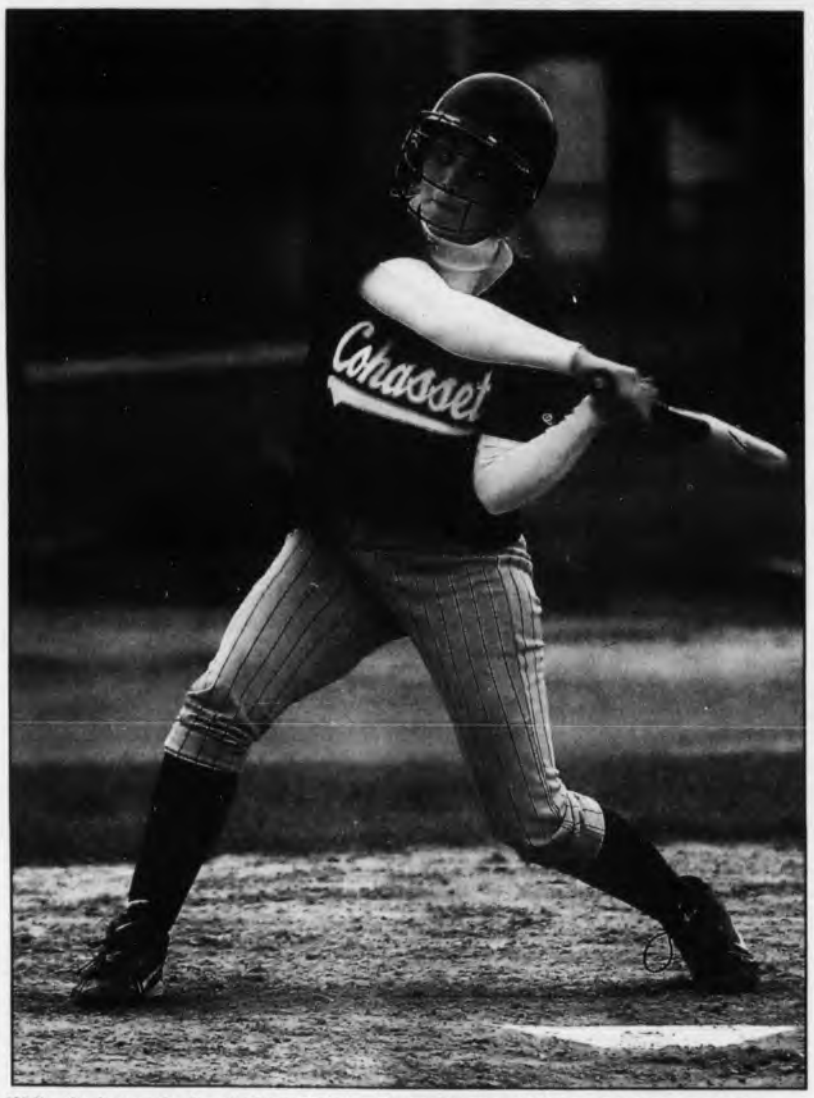
Pinkus' success comes as little surprise to her high school coach, Deb Bostwick. A former softball standout herself at Keene State, Bostwick knows what it takes to play at the next level.

"Christina has an incredible bat. You can tell she is a natural ballplayer," Bostwick said. "She's also a gamer. She's not afraid to get dirty, and the more games to play, the merrier. If she could play 10 innings a game, she would."

Brown, meanwhile, was the defensive lynchpin of last year's Div. 3 state champion Cohasset lacrosse team. He will be going from one successful program to another, as the Pioneers made the NCAA tournament last season and are preseason favorites in the Great Western Lacrosse League.

Also heavily recruited by Brown University and Wesleyan, Brown said the growing lacrosse culture in the Denver area was a big draw for him.

"I've heard a lot about how lacrosse is getting really big out there," said Brown, who is considering majoring in business with an eye toward UD's hotel management program. "That was certainly a big factor in my decision."



Brown is one of two defensemen in the Pioneers' recruiting class, and Denver men's lacrosse coach Jamie Munro said he is looking forward to the Skippers senior joining his program.

"Jeff Brown is a very rangy, athletic, left-handed defenseman who will fit perfectly into our style of defense and transition," Munro said on Denver's athletics web site.

Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran said Brown brings the right blend of athleticism, smarts and competitive spirit to play Div. 1 college lacrosse.

"What stands out to me about Jeff is he understands the time and space of the game very well," Curran said. "He understands the space of the game and how to use the corners and sidelines to get on a guy's hands and force him to his weakness.

"On top of being a very good athlete to start with, he really is a competitive kid that doesn't accept second place very well."

While also known for her pitching, Christina Pinkus hit over .400 for the Skippers softball team last season, and was recruited to play first base for Wagner College.

CHS Athletic Director Ron Ford said what Brown and Pinkus have achieved shows that student-athletes can indeed be recruited even if they play for a small public high school.

"We've been competing at a high level athletically, and on top of that, our kids are competing outside of high school to make themselves better," Ford said. "What Jeff and Christina have accomplished is a testament to how both of them work hard at their game."

Positive week for the Skippers

FROM SKIPPERS, PAGE 17

Cohasset has played this year, when they came out of the locker room for the second half they continued to play at the same high level. From there, the Skippers rolled to get their second league win of the year, and first at home. Junior Dave Snowdale continued his role as a prominent role player that the team can depend on, as he put up nine points.

Even though both Alexander and McCarthy put up 15 points, they were not the high scorers. This night was all sophomore sensation Danny Martin, who scored a team high 19 points, had well over 10 rebounds, and had 10 blocks for the night to complete a rare triple-double.

Probably the best news from the game was the fact that Cohasset finally got three scorers in double digits, something head coach Dorian Bryant had been looking for all season.

"If we can get those three scorers every night, we can play with anyone," Bryant said.

The streak continued for the Skippers and the scoring didn't stop as they won their second game in a row the following night against Nantucket, with a final score of 70-61. Both teams came out firing but Cohasset scored just a little more often, jumping out to a quick 18-9 lead.

As McCarthy was forced to continuously come out of the game due to early foul trouble, it appeared that Cohasset was going to give up its lead. On the contrary, the Skippers were able to maintain a steady lead, leading by 10 at halftime. Four players contributed to all but two of Cohasset's points: Alexander (11), sophomore Marcus Charles (10), Martin (eight) and McCarthy (seven).

As the second half started, things looked to be the same as Cohasset was able to keep a good lead. But with about eight minutes left in the game, Nantucket pulled to within four. Three minutes later, the once large lead was down to only a single point, and shortly after that Nantucket went ahead by one with just about five minutes left to play.

After the teams traded a few defensive stops, Cohasset was finally able to regain the lead with an Alexander basket. Following that was a 10-0 scoring run by the Skippers to effectively finish off Nantucket. Once again Martin was the high man with 19 points, his third straight game with that total. Charles finished right behind with 18 points, Alexander with 15 for the second straight night, and McCarthy with 13 points.

Again, the team was able to get a third and even a fourth scorer in double digits for the night. Afterwards, Coach Bryant said that he was "extremely happy with the way this team is playing right now; we're starting to grow up." It was the team's first back-to-back wins all year.

Unfortunately for the Skippers, winning a third game in a row was not in their future. The team lost to a tough Hull team, 55-44. As both teams battled it out back-and-forth, neither team was truly able to pull ahead or gain a steady lead. With Cohasset down four with a minute left in the first half, Charles was able to hit a three-pointer while getting fouled; he made the free throw which tied the game up for Cohasset.

The deadlock didn't last long, as the Pirates were able to pull ahead at the end of the half, and led by five going into the locker room. McCarthy put up only two points in the half and struggled the entire night to get off quality shots. He finished with 11 points despite the Pirates playing him a tight man-to-man.

Cohasset was never really able to overcome this and the fact that Alexander fouled out of the game with seven minutes to go. It was just not the Skippers' night, as their shots were just not falling in and they were on the wrong side of some questionable calls. Martin (10 points, five blocks) and Charles (11 points) both played well, as Cohasset's future continues to look up.

Following the game, Bryant said, "We played hard; there were just too many mistakes. We settled for jumpers and were not aggressive enough. It's a tough loss because it's against our rival."

Cohasset looks to start another winning streak as they play at Norwell tonight (Feb. 9) and at Nantucket Saturday. The boys then host Mashpee Tuesday and Holbrook Thursday.

nothing new for Sammi Lehr and Haracz, who are averaging 10 and seven rebounds per game, respectively.

Even in Tuesday's 38-32 loss to Hull, Levangie saw encouraging signs. In the teams' Jan. 12 meeting, the Skippers allowed 58 points to the Pirates. The coach said the 20-point improvement on defense is indicative of how much his team has grown in the last month.

Lehr led Cohasset with 10 points, followed by Farren's seven and six each from Kelley and Carly Salerno.

The Skippers are now 8-8 with four games to play, meaning they need to win two more to guarantee a .500 record and a berth in the Div. 4 state tournament. The girls travel to Norwell tonight (6 p.m. start) for a contest with the league's second-place team, and then face a tough turnaround when they board the ferry to take on Nantucket Saturday morning at 11:30.

Cohasset then travels to Mashpee Tuesday night and finish the regular season next Thursday at home against Holbrook.

CHS skaters "sent a message"

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

HINGHAM - The Norwell and Cohasset hockey teams came into Wednesday night's contest at Pilgrim Ice Arena with different objectives.

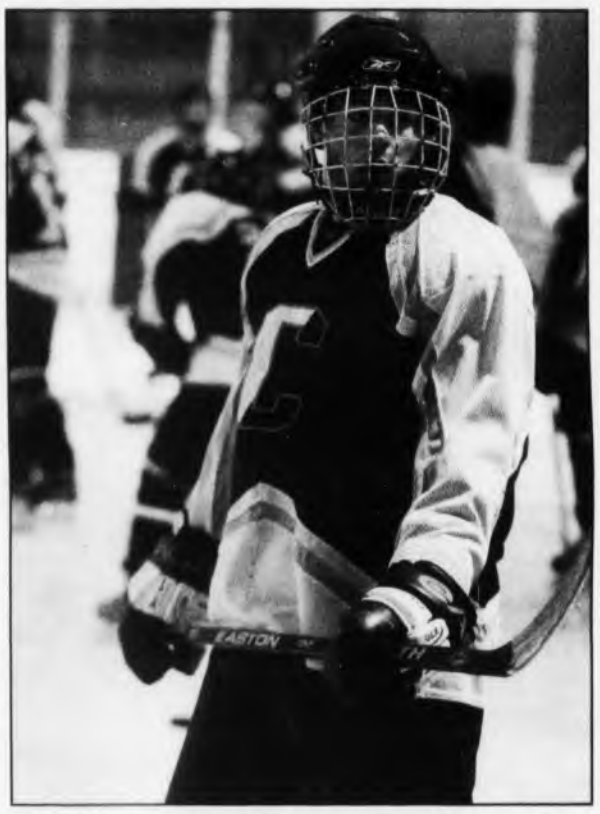
The Clippers were looking to continue their recent improvement after a string of sluggish performances a few weeks ago, while the Skippers were hoping to show they were better than the 6-1 loss to Norwell back on Jan. 13.

Mission accomplished for the Clippers (13-1-1, 11-0 South Shore League), who scored early and often in an 11-1 rout of Cohasset.

"We're starting to play better. We're starting to put some good hockey together," said Norwell head coach Paul Hurley after the game. "I'm encouraged."

Hurley's counterpart, Bob Walsh, was obviously singing a different tune after seeing his team out-shot, 37-24, and facing deficits of 3-0 and 8-1 in the first and second intermissions.

"Norwell definitely sent us a message," Walsh said. "If we expect to make the tournament and then accomplish anything in the tournament, we need to do a lot of things better than we did the last two games (Norwell and Saturday's loss to Abington-East Bridgewater)."



Norwell sophomore Christos Koutrobis opened the scoring just 1:17 into the game, finishing a nice pass from junior Cody Cavicchi, who had wheeled around the Cohasset net and found an open Koutrobis waiting in the slot. Senior Justin Snell scored less than two minutes later on a nice feed from behind the net by junior Danny Dempsey. At the 7:47 mark, Koutrobis and Cavicchi hooked up again, this time with Cavicchi scoring to make it 3-0.

That's how it would stand until the second period, during which the Clippers scored five more unanswered goals. In order, Dempsey, Koutrobis, junior Colin O'Shaughnessy, senior PJ Senatore and sophomore Garrett Duffy all scored for the Clippers. Freshman Patrick Johnston and senior Chris McClendon both picked up assists during the run.

Cohasset got a consolation goal with 47.6 seconds remaining in the second, as sophomore Andrew Smith fired a slapshot wide, but collected the carom off the boards and put the rebound past Norwell senior goalie John Collins. Collins was otherwise perfect in net, making 23 saves.

Snell added to his tally just 41 seconds into the third by poking in a rebound from a Dempsey shot, and Cavicchi finished with a hat trick by converting a pair of breakaway goals late in the proceedings.

The Skippers are now 7-7-2, and need three points in their last three games to qualify for the tournament. They will hope to get two of those points Wednesday night (8:10 face-off) at Bridgewater Ice Arena against Carver-Sacred Heart, a team Cohasset defeated 5-0 back on Jan. 24.

Senior defenseman and captain Conor Holway and his teammates need three points from their last three games to make the Div. 3 state tournament. The Skippers travel to Bridgewater Ice Arena Wednesday night to take on Carver-Sacred Heart.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

5th grade Travel B wins two in a row

Cohasset's fifth grade Travel B team posted its fourth victory Saturday night in front of a standing room-only late night crowd at the Weymouth Air Base against a ball-hawking Halifax team that gave a good fight all night.

The scoring was sparse midway through the first half due to an even exchange of turnovers between the clubs before Jack Leffel broke the scoreless tie with a beautiful fade-away to put Cohasset ahead. Leffel had a stellar first half to lead the team in scoring with two points and two assists along with four rebounds to set the tone for the game.

Mark Rattenbury delivered an inspired performance that included draining a sweet six-footer to compliment his dominating play down low with five rebounds and a steal to cap a very productive night. One of Cohasset's other big boys, Clark Indek, was battle-ready on the boards, picking up rebounds on both ends of the court to maintain key possessions during the game.

Zach Coggins continued his ball looting prowess with a team-leading five steals including a timely breakaway that turned into a three-point attempt to put the team up 10-4 with 4:52 left in the half.

But Halifax never gave up. The Red Tide continued to draw multiple fouls to give their kids a chance to keep it close – and they did. With six seconds left in the half, Halifax picked up a loose ball to set up a two-foot jumper that dropped in at the buzzer to make it a one possession game down 10-8.

The second half play continued to generate multiple turnovers, but Cohasset managed to stay ahead with improved ball control. Jack Stanganelli maintained his great all-around performance in the second half with multiple offensive and defensive rebounds to match his physical play on both sides of the ball, including a trip to the line as compensation for a good drive to the hoop.

Ryan McKeon didn't disappoint with another aggressive display of offense and defense to tally four points, two steals and a rebound. McKeon's tenacity and toughness makes every opponent respect his presence. Jake Osmanski drained two in the second half to keep the team ahead with a steady game at forward. Eric Weinstein posted four rebounds and a steal to keep the ball away from Halifax as they fought to keep the game close.

But the cool hand of Doug Fitzgerald kept Halifax at bay with four points off two beautiful jump shots in each half to match his great defensive effort with multiple rebounds to disrupt Halifax's comeback. The game was still in reach for Halifax until Coggins' final ambush with 6:30 left in the contest. A timely steal left Coggins with a four-foot jumper that was tipped by a Halifax defender and plucked mid-air by Timmy Cavanaro for a lay-up to maintain Cohasset's lead.

Cavanaro added another two points with 4:30 left with a nice eight-foot rainbow to put Cohasset ahead by 10 points. Cavanaro had another bang-up night on the boards with a team-leading seven rebounds. In the end, Cohasset prevailed 20-12.

This team continues to put good coaching to work every week. Jim Fitzgerald and Joe Stanganelli prepare the boys well to compete in each game, which is reflected in the quality of the team's overall effort. Expect this week's rubber match with a red hot Scituate club, fresh off a dramatic comeback win against Hanover, to be a treat.

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The Grade 5A boys took on second place Hanover this past Saturday. The boys wound up on the short end of a 28-14 score, but they gave the Hanover boys everything they could handle and were in position to take control of the game until well into the second half.

This game was not high on style points, but if you like tough, physical basketball, this was the game to watch.

Early on, Hanover tried to work the ball inside to its talented frontcourt. Cohasset's big men were up to the challenge, as Joe Buckley, Mark Brown and Conner Green all used their physical presence to push their big men further out and to contest shots. Although Hanover was able to rebound a bit on the offensive end, Cohasset was able to clean the glass.

Hanover was able to force the Cohasset offense somewhat into rushed shots. However, the boys were getting shots they wanted, but they just didn't drop. This was a key, as a 6-4 deficit gradually grew to 11-4, which ultimately was tough to overcome.

Offensively, Cohasset showed some good ball movement. Hanover's active defense closed off passing lanes, but Brendan O'Connell, Mark McKenna and Matthew MacCormack continued to show their growing ability to find the open man and throw crisp, clean passes. Steven Maher was active defensively and on the boards. Maher also found an opening to hit a short jump shot and to get to the free throw line.

Liam Burke again was a spark off the bench, as he played both small forward and guard, and he hit a beautiful rainbow jumper. Chris Haggerty found the opening to hit his nice baseline jump shot, and Rocco Laugelle, as usual, disrupted the Hanover offense as he jumped into passing lanes in the open floor.

Green was simply ferocious at both ends of the floor as he battled for loose balls and rebounded with abandon. His emotional play was contagious. Finally, Dakota Achin was active in the transition game in the open floor, and he continued to dive for every loose ball.

Whitman at Cohasset HS - Patriot League

The grade 7 boys submitted one of their most gutsy and entertaining performances this past Sunday against Whitman. They were on the short end of a 41-27 score, but they gave second place Whitman all they could handle.

The coaches showed a new

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

OVERNIGHT CAMP, DAY CAMP, TRIP & TRAVEL CAMP, GENERAL CAMP OR SPECIALTY CAMP? WHAT CAMP IS THE BEST FOR YOUR CHILD?

New England is home to some of the oldest and most respected summer camps in the world. Our reputation is unsurpassed for providing a secure environment where children can learn independence and leadership skills while still kicking back and having a great time. Camps in this region offer everything from general activity programs to creative and performing arts, land and water sports, horseback riding, environmental education, computer skills, wilderness canoeing, mountain climbing and white water rafting. Whether it's an independently owned and operated camp, one with religious affiliations or one sponsored by a nonprofit agency, there is a vast array of camp options from which to choose. Positive camp experiences begin with the right match between a child's needs and interests and a camp's philosophy, program and other offerings.

Let's take a look at the choices:

Overnight Camp – Overnight or Resident Camps are generally for children ages 7-to-17. Children stay for one-to-eight weeks and sleep in bunks, cabins, tents or hostels. We recommend that parents make sure that their child has had the experience of sleeping away from home before enrolling them in an overnight camp. Arrange for a few "sleepovers" with friends so your child gets used to being away from you and from the home overnight.

Day Camp – Day camps generally serve children ages 3-to-15. As the name implies, children stay at the camp during the day and return home at night. This is a great option for younger kids and for children who just aren't comfortable being away from home for an extended period of time.

General Camp – General Day and Overnight camps offer a range of activities. Many offer the opportunity to try a variety of new activities. Focusing on one or two special activities of interest is often an option at general camp.

Specialty Camp – Specialty Camps and Specialty Programs at Day or Overnight Camps allow the camper to focus on one specific area of interest such as horseback riding, arts and crafts, theatre, computers, sports or adventure. Some specialty camps serve a specific clientele, such as children with special needs.

Trip & Travel – Trip & Travel programs are either independent or camp-based. They often involve adventure and wilderness with the trip as the focus of the experience. A lot of factors come into play when choosing the type of camp for your child. Does he or she have dietary, physical, social or emotional needs to be considered? What is your child's level of maturity? Would he or she benefit from being away from you for an entire summer or would just a couple of weeks make more sense? Whatever your answers are to these questions, there is a camp in the region that will fit the bill.

Scituate-Cohasset youth football and cheerleading

On Tuesday, Feb. 13, the Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleader Organization will be holding its annual Board of Director elections at the Scituate High School library at 7 p.m. The public is welcome to attend. For more information, please call (781)556-0215.

Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming spring baseball and softball season from now through Feb. 15. Parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than Feb. 15.

Registration forms are available on the website, CYBSA.net, or at Town Hall. Registrations that are received or postmarked after Feb. 15 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced, and there is no guarantee that late registered players will be accommodated, as uniform orders and other season plans will be made on Feb. 15. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

The registration is for boys aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of April 30, 2007. Softball registration is for girls aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of Dec. 31, 2006. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Junior League baseball and softball programs will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the Major League baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the Farm league instructional baseball (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65.

Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please also be advised that effective the 2008 season, 12-year olds boys/girls must play at least one year in the American League to be an automatic selection for the Major League Baseball division. (This does not pertain to softball).

Also note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the Farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about player eligibility.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)383-1897.

look, as they substituted the boys as full squads on the floor. Cohasset held an early lead, and both teams were able to take brief control through the early part of the first half.

Whitman's big, strong, athletic front line did not have its way with Cohasset's front court. Jay Salerno, Robbie Mahoney, Kyrel Jaundoo and Chris Murphy were not intimidated, and they bodied up on Whitman. Whitman consistently threw the ball down low to their big men, and the every shot was contested. Mahoney pushed their big men off the basket, forcing shots from further out. Murphy was a force in the paint on defense, and he worked to drive the lane on the offensive end. Jaundoo was also very active, using his athleticism to contest shots.

The first half closed with Whitman maintaining a seven-point lead. The guard play of Jamie Faber - who used his unique blend of size and quickness to take his match-up down low on the offensive end – and Christian Allard kept Cohasset close, as they showed some patience and ball movement. Chris Carpenter was also very active on defense, using his quick hands to tip passes, slap balls away, and cause turnovers.

In the second half, Whitman tried to pull away, but the Cohasset boys were not intimidated and continued to play a physical brand of ball. Salerno hit two baseline jumpers, and the quickness of Patrick MacCormack, Pat Kearney and Chris Lunde led to steals and baskets by Kearney, MacCormack, and Jaundoo. Allard was ferocious, as he disrupted the flow of the Whitman offense and led the transition game.

Pan-Mass Challenge

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge opened Jan. 16 through the PMC Web site, pmc.org. Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5. The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route. Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more.

For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

DESTINATIONS

Paradise found, in Phuket

Text by Paula O'Brien, Photos by Matthew O'Brien

Phuket, Thailand's largest island, is an idyllic site for the country's premier international beach resort. The island's people, picturesque location and myriad water activities make this a true paradise.

Much of the charm of Phuket is that the ocean-facing west coast is lined with a series of bays where white sand beaches span between two rocky points. This makes for a series of relatively intimate places rather than one big stretch of sand lined with high-rise hotels and overflowing with beach-goers.

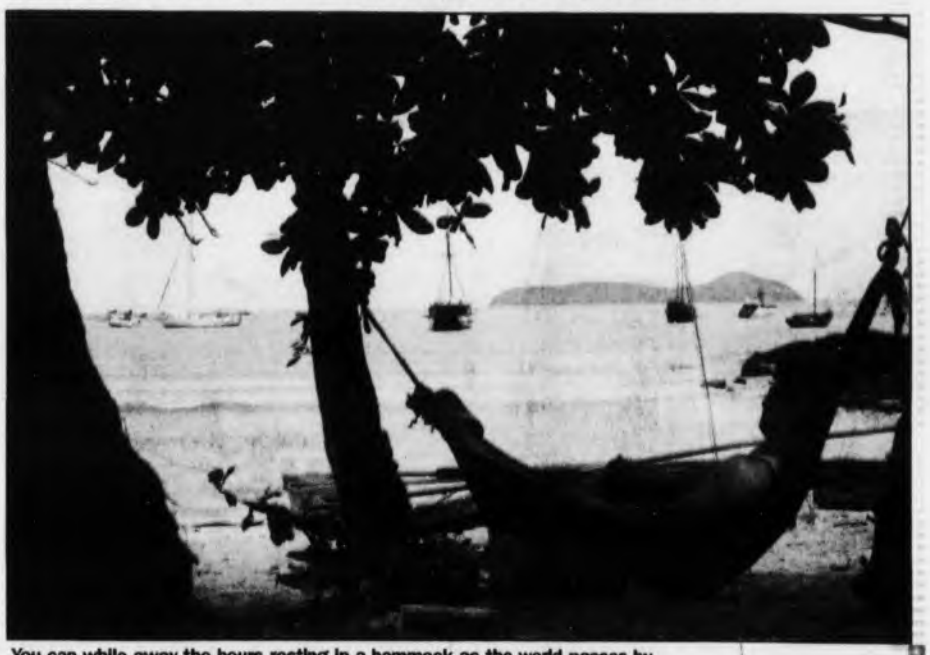
Tourists have many options when visiting Phuket. The island features an extensive variety of sun and surf activities so there's something for just about everyone. You can also just take in the beauty and splendor of the tropical location. Since it is quite a distance from Boston, you should plan ample time to unwind once you get there. And getting there is no quick trip. A typical Boston flight brings you to New York City, from there you board a plane for the 17-hour flight to Bangkok, and then it's another one-hour flight to Phuket.

You can venture out canoeing - one of the countless surf and sun activities.

A spectacular sunset in Phuket, where every night the sunsets incorporate a rainbow of colors.

But don't let the distance intimidate you. It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

But don't let the distance intimidate you. It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience.



Phuket has become an international destination and with that designation comes overdevelopment and more people. But there is still plenty of nature and local color to be discovered. It has been over the last 30 years or so, that the island has gained widespread international recognition — its white sand beaches and tropical natural beauty making it a haven for tourists and those seeking a long holiday.

As for cuisine, Phuket has developed its own distinct flavors and unique dishes. Perhaps the most famous of these is Kanom Jin. This noodle and fish curry dish is usually eaten at breakfast and is often compared to spaghetti. It comes with a side dish of fresh vegetables and boiled eggs that diners can then blend with the curry to suit their own tastes. Other Phuket favorites include Lo Bah (fried sausage and tofu in a spicy sweet and sour sauce) Oh Tao (oysters deep fried with flour, eggs and taro root) and Tao Sor or Kanom Bia, which is Phuket's own variation on the spring roll.

Phuket experienced its share of loss following the Dec. 26, 2004 tsunami which had an impact on a large area of the Indian Ocean. The tsunami affected different beaches to varying degrees. Many businesses in Patong were essentially destroyed, but re-building began almost immediately. Many establishments reopened within three or four months. Life is pretty much back to normal on the island.

You can while away the hours resting in a hammock as the world passes by.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this…

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you…you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES…

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS…

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING…BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

Donate school supplies for Iraqi kids

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

We're living a digital era, the friendly letter is now a thing of antiquity, and social interaction has been replaced by AIM and blackberries, iPods and cell phones. In a world with massively multiplayer online Role Playing Games, and personal computers, the world is literally at our fingertips. Are all these impersonal activities weakening our social skills? Probably. The real question is: are we flirting with de-evolution? Time will tell.

The next time you're about to ditch your friends (if you have any) and be a troglodyte, set up Tivo or DVR. Halo and World of Warcraft are still going to be there when you get home. Put down the potato chips, clean yourself up and get out there — life is a MMORPG. While the graphics are extremely realistic in life, there are no save points; act accordingly.

The NHS is still collecting school supplies for Operation Iraqi Children! Please, donate new supplies — they aren't looking for pencils with teeth marks! Please donate before Feb. 16th, donation boxes are set up in all of Cohasset's schools.

Have your finger on the pulse of the community? Even if you don't, I'll clue you in. Nalgene water bottles are in. If you want to kill two birds with one stone, get one of these fashionable (and resilient) bottles from The Cohasset Arts Magazine! For the paltry sum of $10, you can stay hip and donate to a worthy cause. Contact Ms. Nina Berkowitz at nberkowitz@cohassetk12.org for information.

SENIORS! Ms. Elinore Barrett will be creating a DVD with pictures of the entire class from K-12, so please find group photos to turn in! Photos can be submitted electronically to EKB424@aol.com or put in an envelope with your name on it and turned into Callie Barrett. The deadline is April 1st.

The next Post Prom meeting is scheduled for Monday March 5th at 6 p.m. at the Paul Pratt library. Senior parent volunteers are needed, and appreciated!

- Monday after school Project SAFEGUARD met.
- Tuesday after school the ADL Peer Leadership training took place in the library.
- After school Tuesday the Middle School faculty met.
- Tuesday night was High School Curriculum Night in the Auditorium.
- Wednesday report cards were sent home.
- After school Wednesday the NEASC follow up meeting was held.
- The School Council met Wednesday after school.
- Wednesday night the Chatterton Committee met in the library.
- Thursday morning the PSO President's Council met.
- This morning the Diversity Committee met.

Hopefully it will warm up, because if it continues to be this cold, most of us will be staying indoors for the majority of the weekend. Kudos to those who work outside, you're tougher than us wimps. See you next week.

CEF funds projects at town's schools

By Catherine O'Callaghan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Safari Montage Video on Demand system now allows all teachers access to broadcast videos from an extensive library of over 2000 video titles for grades K-12.

The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) announced the funding of two projects benefiting the Cohasset schools. The CEF presented the Cohasset schools with a check for $7,000 to purchase two Promethean whiteboards. Both the Cohasset Middle High School and Deer Hill School will have one of these interactive whiteboards, which will be available to all the classes at these schools. The CEF also provided funding of $7,000 for a Safari Video Montage on Demand system for all the Cohasset schools. Due to the advancement of this technology, teachers will now be able to download videos from an extensive library to use in a wide range of subject matters.

The Promethean whiteboards will allow teachers, at Deer Hill and the Middle High schools, to present dynamic lessons increasing student motivation and learning. Students can manipulate information directly on the large projection screen by using an electronic pen to drag images, write or draw, highlight information and activate links to cause actions or sounds which can be seen and heard by everyone in the class.

The whiteboard lessons include tools such as graph paper for mathematics applications, maps for geography applications, direct links to the internet, and video clips to enhance science and history applications. Schools are finding these interactive whiteboards allow students greater opportunities for participation, collaboration, and presentation of their work to classmates in creative ways.

Mary McGoldrick, Chair of the CEF Grant Committee, in recommending the approval of the grant proposal for these whiteboards, found that both teachers and students using the interactive whiteboard would be able to achieve much greater interaction with teaching material and each other.

"The learning process is enhanced as students become more engaged in the lesson, which in turn helps improve understanding and knowledge retention," McGoldrick says.

"If the boards prove to be effective, we hope that additional boards can be funded by the regular school budget" adds Chris Oddliefson, President of the CEF.

The schools also requested funds for a Safari Video Montage on Demand System from the CEF. Teachers in grades K - 12 relied on rented or previously purchased VHS tapes or DVDs to support their curriculum. There were many problems and disadvantages to this due to the limited availability of the requested tapes, the number of classes requesting to use the tapes were far greater than the tapes that were available and many times the tapes were not updated. Technology designers attempted to address this problem with on-line streaming video. The problem Cohasset faced with this system was that streaming video consumed most of the LAN bandwidth — one teacher using the technology could reduce the LAN bandwidth by almost 90 percent.

The Safari Montage Video on Demand system now allows all teachers access to broadcast videos from an extensive library of over 2000 video titles for grades K-12. These videos can now be accessed from our own server, located at the high school, and viewed simply by requesting it from the teacher's computer. The movies are sent from the teacher's computer and then projected onto a TV monitor in each classroom or in a lab by the LCD projector.

The Safari Montage Video on Demand System provides the ability to store, manage and access digital video from the Cohasset Schools; over 2000 high quality videos for grades K-12, the ability for students and teachers to create and disseminate their own videos; available resource of maps, photos, graphics, audio recordings and text files; and the ability to select multiple clips from various searched videos and play them at one time.

McGoldrick reports that the Cohasset Public Schools should see an increase in the use of video to enhance the curriculum.

The CEF is a non-profit local organization, which promotes academic initiatives and excellence in the Cohasset Public Schools. The CEF encourages and supports innovative projects and programs of an enduring value in teaching and learning that are consistent with Cohasset's system-wide goals. It also encourages leadership and creativity in teachers and administrators in the Cohasset schools.

"We understand that there is a pretty steep leaning curve and our hope is that some teachers find ways to enhance the educational experience of our children," Oddleifson says.

With community support, the CEF reached its fund raising goal for the end of January 2007 of $250,000. The CEF has an Endowment Fund, designated for the long-term health of the schools and a Project Fund, which funds projects such as the Osgood Computer Lab, the Promethian whiteboards, and the Safari Montage Video on Demand System. The CEF will be hosting a dinner and auction on Saturday, May 19th. If you would like to get involved or contribute to the CEF, please visit the website, www.cohasseteducation.org or contact Catherine O'Callaghan at cathocal@aol.com.

Cohasset teacher leads effort to raise CO2 awareness

David Ames, a ninth grade science teacher at Cohasset High School, has started a unique project that will allow students and community residents to see just how big the Earth's carbon dioxide problem is.

Working with students, Ames is building a 27-cubic-foot box made of PVC piping to represent the space taken up by one ton of carbon dioxide. The point of the construction effort is to highlight the enormity of the carbon dioxide problem, as the average human being gives off 15 times the carbon-dioxide represented by the cube. He is trying to impress upon the enormity of the carbon dioxide issue, seeing as the average human being gives off 15 of these cubes a year. A cube of that size would be longer than a football field, and about 40 stories tall.

The first leg of the project kicked off after school on Feb. 6, when several dedicated students showed up with calculators and pencils, ready to make a scale model of their future creation out of straws. Ames hopes to have this project finished by the time spring sports start in late March, and hopes to display it outside the school or on the football field for the remainder of the school year.

Pictured INSIDE the 4-1/2 foot x 4-1/2 foot, 4-1/2 foot scale model CO2 cube as the students have dubbed their 27-foot carbon dioxide representational cube are James Earle (seated in front) Thomson Jaffe, Megan Richardson and Cohasset High School science teacher David Ames. Made of straws the model is one-sixth the size of the future 27-square-foot cube the students and Mr. Ames will construct this spring. The finished cube will represent one-fifteenth (1/15) the amount of carbon dioxide the average human produces annually. A dramatic visualization of each individual's impact on global warming.

Extra credit for Valentine's Day!

The perfect Valentine's Day gift idea that will last long after the 14th: a donation to the CEF is a wonderful way to honor a specific teacher or school employee at Valentine's Day or anytime. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents, and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Your child's teacher or other special recipient will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with your personalized Valentine's message. The amount of the gift will not be disclosed.

Raffael's has a touch of spring fever

Hull restaurant announces upcoming dinner theater schedule

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

This week's temperatures may tell the cold, hard story that winter is still very much in season, but the calendar says spring is only weeks away. With warmer weather in mind, Quincy's JM Productions recently announced its Spring 2007 Dinner Theatre season at Raffael's Restaurant in Hull, which will begin St. Patrick's Day weekend, March 16-17, with the traditional Irish sounds of The Exiles.

A trio of performers — Bob Drouin on vocals and also bouzouki, fiddle, banjo, whistle, and flute; Jeff Feingold on bodhran and vocals; and Jay Gilbert on guitar, banjo, and backing vocals — The Exiles play everything from traditional Irish instrumental dance music and their own compositions to high-energy jigs and reels.

"As JM Productions begins our 26th season, we are pleased to offer talent from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York City," said JM founder and producing director John F. McDonald Jr. "We're delighted to be presenting our first shows of the new season during March which is Cabaret Month. Our St. Patrick's Day shows connect two styles of music – Irish and cabaret. The Exiles have played in Ireland and are regularly featured in many Boston venues. They will have us all singing the traditional Irish songs as well as some original songs by this talented trio. They play so many instruments that even the non-Irish will be impressed by these Boston originals."

The cast of 'Guys by Dolls'

The Exiles

On April 20, Raffael's will once again welcome the musical revue "Guys by Dolls: Sinatra to 'N Sync," featuring five female vocalists presenting some of the best-known songs of male crooners, country singers, rock and rollers and even the boy bands. Local favorite Sheila Fahey of Neponset is joined on stage by her daughter Jennifer Fahey, also of Neponset, her niece Patty Lee of Braintree, and her friends Kathy Teevans Fitzpatrick of Milton and Braintree's Mary Ellen Anson, who lend their voices as back-up singers.

The elder Fahey has been a fixture on the South Shore community theater scene for more than two decades, most notably in JM Productions stagings of "Mame" and "Hello, Dolly!" and the company's original holiday musical, "What Christmas Means To Me," in which Fahey delivered a near-legendary 20-minute comedic monologue in 15 consecutive annual productions.

On April 21, Fahey and her "Guys by Dolls" cast mates will be back on-stage at Raffael's in their acclaimed revue "Connie, Brenda, Patsy & Me" a musical homage to female vocalists Connie Francis, Patsy Cline and Brenda Lee. The greatest hits of these legendary ladies make for a memorable song list, complemented by Fahey's addition of the "Me" component, which allows the local songstress to present the music of other artists who have influenced her personal life and her career as a singer.

Both "Guys by Dolls" and "Connie, Patsy, Brenda and Me" are under the musical direction of Milton's Mark Donahue.

"These are two of our most popular shows and have sold out four times over the last five years. Our regulars have asked to see the shows again so we've decided to present both in one weekend," explained McDonald, who has been an entertainment presenter on the South Shore since 1981.

On May 3 and 4, JM Productions will have patrons remembering where they were in the 1960s when The Turntables take to the stage in Hull for a musical journey back some 40 years to a time before iPods when listening to music on the go meant a transistor radio. The Turntables have been together since 2001. They celebrate the '60s with the terrific music, period costumes and a sing-a-long designed to encourage everyone to join in a nostalgic walk down memory lane. Originally formed for a private performance to raise money for Hull Community Theatre, this Raffael's date marks a rare public appearance by a group that has its own loyal South Shore following.

The Turntables

New York cabaret artist Dane Vannatter rounds out the spring season at Raffael's with his tribute to Tony Bennett on June 15. Vannatter's special guest for the evening will be legendary Artie Shaw Orchestra leader Dick Johnson on reeds.

"Our final show of the spring is hot enough to be the natural prelude to summer. We have been trying to book the very busy and talented Dane Vanatter for many years and we're thrilled he will finally join us in Hull. His voice and singing style will not only send your heart soaring but to hear this man sing the Tony Bennett songbook will make you wish you wish you brought all your friends. Dane Vanatter's voice, Tony Bennett's songs and the beauty of Nantasket beach in June combine to make this a one-night-only event not to be missed," according to McDonald.

Movie review

More 'Release' than a 'Catch'

Catch and Release (C)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In the romantic comedy "Catch and Release" — or "No Wedding and a Funeral" — viewers are required to sit through too many long, mirthless stretches. To take a cue from the film's symbolism, it's like fishing without any bites.

Jennifer Garner, who has charm to burn and bone structure to die for, is Gray Wheeler, a Boulder, Colo., resident about to marry Grady, the man of her dreams, until Grady, an outdoorsman, is killed in a freak accident at his own bachelor party.

Now, if that strikes you as a contrived setup, you haven't seen anything yet.

At the reception following Grady's funeral, where, to paraphrase Shakespeare, "the marriage trappings did coldly furnish forth the burial rites," Grady's best friend, Fritz (handsome, if bland Timothy Olyphant, "Deadwood"), gets lucky with a cute caterer in the same bathroom where the inconsolable Gray has hidden herself behind the shower curtain.

Wham. Bam. Thank you, "Mr. Yummy." Mr. Yummy?

Before you can say, this is "meet cute" to the 10th power, Gray and Fritz are bickering, bantering and finding consolation in one another's arms. Grady's clueless, clownish former roommates Sam (Kevin Smith, mimicking a foraging panda bear) and Dennis (Sam Jaeger in a slight role) try to provide comic relief with little or no success.

Wild playboy Fritz (Timothy Olyphant) tries to cheer up Gray (Jennifer Garner).

We soon learn the late Grady wasn't such a "catch" after all. He had a wacky massage-therapist mistress, in the form of Juliette Lewis, and a love-child (Joshua Friesen).

Written and directed by Susannah Grant ("28 Days," "In Her Shoes"), "Catch and Release" is belabored and much too in love with the fishing metaphor of its title. Every few minutes, the action cues a dippy form of soft pop by such bands as Foo Fighters and the Lemonheads.

The film is also reminiscent of a number of past Julia Roberts movies, all of which depend heavily upon casting and chemistry. Smith tries to bring a hint of "Clerks"-style humor to the action. Meanwhile, Dennis gets involved with a girl named — are you ready? — Persephone. The great Irish actress Fiona Shaw (Harry Potter's Aunt Petunia) is mostly wasted as Grady's bitter mother, although she and Garner seem ready to cut each other to pieces with their cheekbones.

Garner and Olyphant have little screen chemistry, and the film features a flagrant and elaborate Celestial Seasonings tie-in. Two weeks ago, this would have starred Kate Hudson.

In one of the film's more memorable lines, Los Angeleno Fritz observes that Boulder resembles a Patagonia Disneyland.

But would you pay $10 to hear it?

Rated PG-13. "Catch and Release" contains profanity and sexual situations.

The Best and The Brightest

We at Community Newspaper Company know there are many bright, talented and caring young people in our communities and, this year, in partnership with Jordan Hospital, we are sponsoring "The Best & The Brightest," a program developed to celebrate their accomplishments.

Do you know an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who should be honored for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field? Look for the nomination form on Page 32 in this issue. Nomination forms will run for several weeks.

A selection committee, comprising local educators, businessmen and community members, will read each nomination form and choose the area's best and brightest teens and young adults.

This spring, your newspaper will include "The Best & The Brightest," a special section devoted to sharing as many of the stories and photographs of those nominated as possible.

We look forward to receiving your nominations by March 30 and hope you'll share in our excitement to recognize these outstanding individuals.

'Selflessness, humility and integrity'

Roger Whitley is Citizen of the Year

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Roger Whitley does not currently sit on any town boards or committees. But that fact does not mean he is not keenly interested in the town and what is going on.

His eyes sparkle when he talks about the budgetary process and the pride he takes in the new town library.

Both are vastly different but nevertheless are still very close to his heart.

The retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved."

That involvement has not stopped at Town Hall or at the library. He is active at First Parish Church, once led the Rusty Skippers (town band) as its drum major, and joined the Peace Corps with his wife, Kitty, after the kids were

Owners to find new home for Labs

Reach decision following Tuesday's dog hearing

By Mary Ford
MFORD A CNC.COM

Vicious dogs or loving family pets?

That's the question that Town Manager Bill Griffin was going to have to wrestle with following Tuesday's dog hearing during which two conflicting views of Dudley, a yellow Labrador retriever and his sister, Lily, a black lab, were presented.

Dog hearings are not unlike court proceedings; witnesses are sworn in and testimony is taken.

However, as it turns out – the matter is now moot. The dogs' owners, Jeffrey and Laura Ritz of 50 Red Gate Lane, have decided to find their dogs new homes. In a telephone interview Wednesday, Jeffrey said they planned to take the dogs to a shelter in the central part of the state that had agreed to accept them.

For the Ritzes it is the end of a bitter chapter in their new neighborhood. The couple and their five children moved to Red Gate Lane from Pond Street last fall. They've had the dogs for two years and said they did not have a problem at their prior home that had more acreage.

What set the stage for Tuesday's hearing was a series of dog bites on other dogs that occurred while people were walking their dogs in Wheelwright Park that backs up to homes along Red Gate Lane. A local babysitter was also bitten as well as a UPS driver.

The Ritzes, who claim walkers were not following the town bylaws by keeping their dogs under their control at all times, acknowledge that their Labradors have bitten several other dogs that had wandered onto their property.

"We are trying to do the right thing," Jeffrey said Wednesday. "We could not face our kids following Tuesday's hearing so Laura and I went out and made the decision to find the dogs new homes.

"We just did not think we had any option based on public opinion."

Although Griffin tried to keep both sides civil at Tuesday's hearing, emotions did surface from both the neighbors and several people whose dogs were allegedly attacked by the labs, and from the Ritz family, whose dogs were restrained by an electric fence.

"This has caused a huge rift in our neighborhood. We are not bad people and we want to do the right thing."
— Jeffrey Ritz, 50 Red Gate Lane

Jeffrey Ritz described the two-year-old labs as being fantastic with his children, the youngest of whom is only two. He said they were great family dogs, a characterization he said has been supported by canine professionals.

"We believe they are good dogs that are good with people and good with kids," he said at the hearing.

But several witnesses described the dogs as being unnecessarily aggressive and vicious. And a handful of neighbors complained their neighborhood had changed since the dogs moved in. At times Griffin had to ask for order as some members of the audience reacted to Ritz's testimony.

At the end of the hour-long hearing Griffin took the matter under advisement. He had planned to call another hearing to hear testimony from another witness, who did not file his complaint about the dogs in time for Tuesday's proceedings due to personal circumstances.

The first reported incident involving the Ritz's dogs and a dog-walker dates back to October. There have been several incidents since then, including two involving people: a babysitter who testified Tuesday and a UPS driver, who did not attend the hearing.

Melissa Clark described walking her small 20-pound Shitz Tu in the park at about 9:30 a.m., Dec. 30. She described Lily, the black lab, as shaking her dog

Not his cup of tea

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In what officials are describing as an accident, a Scituate police officer got a cup containing a bleach-like solution instead of the tea he had ordered from Dunkin' Donuts at Leo's Exxon last Friday evening (Feb. 9).

Scituate Police Chief Brian Stewart said the incident occurred about 5:30 p.m. when Officer Mark Hamacher went to Dunkin' Donuts for a cup of tea.

"He bought it and brought it back (to the station) and apparently he went to drink a small mouthful and discovered there seemed to be bleach in there," Stewart said.

Stewart said police investigated and there was no intent involved. "He swal-

Police cruiser involved in accident

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

One of Cohasset's "front-line" cruisers is out-of-commission pending repairs following an accident last Friday evening (Feb. 9) involving the cruiser and a 2006 Ford passenger vehicle on Route 3A near the future site of the Cohasset train station.

Chief James Hussey said Officer Paul Wilson had heard a report from dispatch about an erratic driver who was traveling northbound on Route 3A from Scituate heading into Cohasset. The vehicle was reported to be speeding and passing other cars.

Wilson was in the area of Hull Street near the Hingham line when he headed up 3A. He decided to make a left near the station site where he could position himself to observe the northbound vehicle. However, when Wilson turned there were barriers preventing him from pulling into the area; therefore, the rear part of the cruiser was sticking out onto Route 3A, Hussey explained. Hussey said Wilson had waited for a break in the traffic before making the left but did not anticipate not being able to pull off the road.

A northbound vehicle hit the rear quarter panel of the cruiser. The incident is under investigation, Hussey said.

Wilson was taken to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released. He was out of work for a few days, returning Tuesday (Feb. 13). The operator of the other car was taken to the hospital for evaluation. Both vehicles were towed.

The Cohasset cruiser sustained damage to the passenger side, rear quarter panel. Hussey said it has yet not been determined if there was damage to the chassis or undercarriage. The police department has six marked cars, including five cruisers and one SUV. The cruiser involved in the accident was one of the newer vehicles.

"We are fortunate that no one was seriously hurt," Hussey said.

Gasoline spill

At 10:21 p.m., Tuesday (Feb. 6), North Main Street was shut down for a period of time due to a gas spill at Robbins Garage.

Apparently an employee went inside to turn the pumps on and had not placed the nozzle properly in the fill pipe in his vehicle.

A police officer on patrol saw the fluid on the ground and stopped to check if it was gasoline, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

About 50 gallons were spilled onto the ground.

Silvia said once the fire department arrives, it first mitigates any fire danger, and then tries to eliminate any environmental damage by using booms and Speedy Dry to keep the gasoline from reaching any catch basins. The fire department also notifies the Department of Environmental Protection that takes over the scene and is in charge of cleaning up any hazardous waste.

Phones down

Rick Colon, regional director for external affairs with Verizon, said a manhole in the vicinity of 109 N. Main St. flooded Wednesday evening. The water forced its way down through a conduit into a controlled environmental vault that houses a lot of electronic equipment used to provide dial-tone service to homes and, in this case, the police and fire departments.

"Once the water hit, those electronics shorted out all the equipment in the vault causing a loss of service in the area," Colon said. He said Verizon dispatched repair crews to the site to analyze the problem, pump water and stabilize the vault. "We then attempted to dry the equipment out, but quickly learned we were going to have to replace the power system," he said.

Colon said in order to restore service, Verizon brought in backup power equipment by midnight and had all customers back up by 1:30 a.m.

Chief James Hussey said police and fire lost their business lines, but the 911 system did not go down.

Fuel tank rupture

At about 7:15 a.m., Friday (Feb. 9), a call came in from a home on South Main Street about a strong oil smell. Further investigation revealed the oil tank ruptured due to overfilling, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said. He said 75 gallons leaked in the basement of the house and more on the ground outside the house. He said the fire department first mitigates any fire danger by shutting down the power, then tries to prevent environmental damage. The state DEP was also notified and was still cleaning up this week.

Oil burner

A caller reported all the smoke detectors in the residence on Adams Road were going off at 2:40 a.m., Sunday (Feb. 11). Fire Chief Silvia said the oil burner was overtaxed due to the cold and the insulation had started to break down, creating some smoke. He said part of the house is under construction so the burner was running so long it became overheated. He said there was some smoke in the house. The burner was shut down and it is up to the homeowner to contact a repair service.

Minor MVA

At about 3:30 p.m. Wed. (Feb. 7) a caller reported she had been in a motor vehicle accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). Chief Hussey said a southbound 2001 Volkswagen, whose occupants were from out of state, pulled over to the right-hand side of the road across from Stop & Shop to check directions. When the VW pulled out and started to do a wide, left turn the operator did not see a southbound 2006 Chevy pickup and the cars collided. The front right of pickup hit the left rear of the VW. There were no citations and no injuries, Chief Hussey said. "But the person who pulled out (driving the VW) would be at fault for insurance purposes," he said.

Tagging

"Tagging" which is a form of graffiti in which the vandal leaves his or her unique "signature" is not a common occurrence in Cohasset. But some has surfaced on the jersey barriers by the railroad tracks on Smith Place last week.

Police Chief Hussey said it was likely the same individual who "tagged" an area under the Rocky Lane bridge recently.

The incidents are under investigation.

Well-being check

Police checked up on a female resident after a co-worker called when she did not show up for work and was worried about her welfare. "The woman was home and contacted her workplace," Police Chief James Hussey said.

The incident occurred Tuesday (Feb.6) at about 2:08 p.m.

Hussey said people should not hesitate to contact police if they are concerned about the welfare of a friend, coworker or relative.

He said these issues usually involve the elderly. He explained police would do "their due diligence" by contacting neighbors and other places the resident might have contact with, such as the Council on Elder Affairs. As a last resort, police would make a forced entry to a home.

OUI arrest

Scituate arrested an individual who was driving erratically and charged the person with operating under the influence of alcohol.

At 6:30 p.m., Saturday (Feb. 10), a Cohasset caller reported the erratic driver who was heading down Pond Street toward 3A. Cohasset notified Scituate the car was heading toward that town. Scituate police stopped the vehicle on First Parish Road.

Cohasset Mariner wins three awards

The New England Press Association has recognized the Cohasset Mariner with a first place award and two, second place awards in its annual Better Newspaper Contest.

The Cohasset Mariner placed first in its circulation class for having the best local election coverage, according to judges for 2006 New England Better Newspaper Competition.

Judges praised the Mariner's coverage of last spring's override.

"Cohasset Mariner team of editor Mary Ford and reporter Samantha Brown combine for a powerful one-two reporting/writing punch to lead the Mariner to first place for local election coverage," the Judges said. "The Mariner's knowledge of local school and political issues was obvious by Ford's and Brown's detailed and matter of fact reporting.

"The quality and readability factor of their writing was superb. The Mariner's readers were the winners in these races."

The Cohasset Mariner's "Witches of Eastwick" 20th anniversary supplement earned a second-place award.

"Nothing like Hollywood celebrity coverage to attract local attention — even this outsider was hooked," the Judges said. "The writers did a nice job of tying the filming into the local scene with lots of names and faces."

And for the second year in a row, the Cohasset Mariner won an award for its editorial/oped pages that feature Jim Hamilton's cartoons, local editorials, letters, columns and commentaries.

Editor Mary Ford said winning three awards is a true honor.

"Being recognized for our local election coverage and editorial-oped pages is extremely gratifying," Ford said. "And to have our 'Witches of Eastwick' special section also picked as a winner was the frosting on the cake!"

Contest winners were announced to newspaper publishers, editors, staff and guests at the awards banquet last Saturday at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel. New England newspapers submitted upwards of 6,000 entries to the 2006 contest, one of the largest regional competitions in the nation. Entries were judged by the American Press Institute, Reston, Va.

Numerous awards were received by CNC/South newspapers for photography, reporting, editorial pages, election coverage, special sections and more.

"It was an outstanding showing and demonstrated the hard work and commitment of our dedicated journalists," said Mark Skala, editor in chief for CNC/South. "We are fortunate to have engaged communities which makes our jobs that much more rewarding."

Founded in 1950, the New England Press Association, a professional newspaper trade association of more than 525 weekly and daily newspapers, promotes growth and excellence in New England newspapers through technology, networking, education and recognition among its members.

Owners to find new home for Labs

"like a rag doll" after her dog had run over to the Ritz's property when it heard the other dogs.

"I got a stick and yelled and screamed and it finally let go," Clark said. She said her dog had several puncture wounds to the neck and head and was traumatized for weeks.

She explained she walks in the woods often and does not know the property boundaries.

Phil Hayward testified that he and his girlfriend, Sally Ayers, were walking their dogs when they took off through the woods. The next thing they heard was a huge ruckus. They raced through the woods and saw Dudley, the yellow lab, jumping up and down and their dog crawling back "seriously mauled." "Our dog was just going to play and he grabbed our dog," Hayward said. They rushed the dog to the veterinarian.

Kathleen Leavitt, who was baby sitting for neighbors of the Ritz family, detailed going into the Ritz's property to retrieve one of the children she was caring for when Dudley jumped on her and bit her arm three times, after which she sought medical attention.

Linda Bornstein, who walks her two black labs frequently in Wheelwright Park, described coming out of the woods when her dogs ran over after seeing the other dogs. The next thing she heard was horrible screaming. She said one of her dogs was severely injured with lacerations and puncture wounds. "It happened quickly and the dog was bleeding profusely," she said.

Megan Donovan, a neighbor, said she was concerned about the children in the neighborhood. In the immediate vicinity there are 12 children, ages 10 and under and six children, three and under, she said.

"There is always the chance an electric fence can fail," she said. "There have been so many incidents. I am uncomfortable with the situation and am concerned for our kids."

David Marks of 1 Red Gate Lane, who states he has lived there 11 years, said the whole neighborhood has changed because of the dogs. "It's time to split them up," he said about the labs. "They don't belong here — it's a public park and we all want to walk there."

But Jeffrey Ritz urged Griffin to consider the fact that since the incidents his dogs have been evaluated by a professional dog trainer who will help the dogs learn to socialize with other dogs. He explained the electric fence that be may have inadvertently installed partially on town property has been moved back from the lot line. Jeffrey Ritz said Dudley did not attack the babysitter but grabbed her arm and when she screamed grabbed it harder. "If a 95-pound dog has a vicious disposition, it would have taken her down," he explained.

Ritz said his dogs had always stayed within the boundaries of the electric fence. "This has caused a huge rift in our neighborhood," he said. "We are not bad people and we want to do the right thing."

He said he would employ a dog trainer for obedience training and to help the dogs learn to socialize with other dogs. The family is also currently keeping the dogs inside 23 hours out of 24, he said.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said he had received two more complaints about the dogs since the hearing was scheduled. He said while the hearing process is pending, when outside, the Ritzes would have to keep their dogs restrained at all times at the end of a leash or restrained by a device attached to the house.

Griffin told the Ritzes he must determine the facts of the case and present them to the Board of Selectmen that under state law, can issue an order regarding the dogs.

Laura Ritz said yesterday due to outbursts and heckling in the hearing room, the point that she and Jeff had tried to make — that they been concerned and had been trying to address the issue of their dogs after the first incident — was lost on the those in attendance.

Jeffrey Ritz said Wednesday that although installing a regular fence might have solved the problem, he felt after Tuesday's hearing the general consensus would be that some people would never be satisfied. He was also concerned about the possibility of a lawsuit should another incident occur.

"We are showing our good faith in doing the right thing," he said. Ritz said his children were sad when they heard the news. His seven-year-old went into a corner and started drawing goodbye and miss-you cards for the dogs.

"Our American dream of having pets has been falling apart the past two months," he said.

Scituate police officer finds bleach-like liquid in his tea

lowed a little and checked with the poison control people who were not concerned about it," he said.

There were two people working at Dunkin' Donuts at the time. Police went back to investigate to ensure there was no intent. "For sure this was an accident," Stewart said.

Cohasset police James Hussey said Scituate police reviewed videotapes and were able to confirm it was an accident.

"My understanding is workers were cleaning up coffee pots and one pot had cleaning liquid inside. It was placed in a location near where hot boiling water would be," Hussey said. "The officer came in to order a tea and the wrong pot was used."

Tara Tradd, Health Inspector/Food Safety Manager with the Cohasset Health Department, said this type of an incident is a critical violation of the Food Code Section 15 (Protection from Chemicals 7-201.11 Separation – Storage); also chemicals should never be in the food contact surface area without proper supervision and use, and when it is in use it should not be left unattended.

"The officer came in to order a tea and the wrong pot was used."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Tradd said there appeared to be a system breakdown with this incident.

"I hope to see as a result of this unfortunate incident and it will be a recommendation from me that they will re-train staff and go over the particular protocols that they have in place to protect both the consumer and employee from danger," she said.

Tradd said store manager Matt Bothello told her he had terminated the employee involved and that he would be reviewing the chemical handling policy with all employees at both stores. Bothello is also manager of the Dunkin' Donuts by the former Acapulco's restaurant. Both stores have the same owner.

"I will be requesting that they retrain staff and provide training in all appropriate languages necessary," Tradd said.

BRIEFLY

OT down at police department

Selectmen gave Police Chief James Hussey high marks this week for getting the overtime at the department under control.

"You have done a great job on the overtime, you really tackled that," said Selectman Rob Spofford.

Hussey, who said the department is fully staffed, said he has been fortunate to be able to bring new officers on board that have already been trained, therefore reducing the need for overtime while an officer is at the academy for six months.

Hussey's appearance before Selectmen on Monday was part of the fiscal 2008 budget process.

Town Manager Bill Griffin is recommending a $50,000 increase in the police budget over fiscal year 2007 for a total of $1.828 million. The new fiscal year starts July 1.

Included in that figure is $210,000 for overtime. In fiscal years 2005 and 2006, the police department spent $336,786 and $355,274 in overtime, respectively.

The Cohasset Police Department has 18 officers, including the chief.

Fire department praised

Selectmen voted Feb. 5 to express their congratulations and appreciation to Fire Chief Robert Silvia and the entire fire department for their outstanding work to battle and put out the raging fire in Cohasset Village on Jan. 30.

In a letter to Silvia, Town Manager Bill Griffin stated, "Through the highly professional and brave actions of our firefighting staff and mutual aid assistance, you were able to contain this fire to the immediate building and avoid what could have been a disastrous fire for the entire village.

"Thankfully, this entire effort was also undertaken without injury to any personnel, again a testimonial to the professionalism and training of our staff," Griffin wrote.

Local history is available on DVD

The Cohasset Planning Board Office has recently reproduced a 1953 film produced by Dan Cotton and Claus Gellotte to present at the 1954 town meeting to encourage acceptance of adopting zoning in Cohasset. With narration by Cotton and filming by Gellotte, the pair set out on a road tour to film the sights and landscape of 1953 Cohasset. Also filmed was Route 53, at that time called Route 3, from Queen Anne's Corner in Norwell to Hanover as a contrasting warning that, without zoning, Route 3A in Cohasset could soon "look like this."

Memorable sights of 1953 Cohasset include Cohasset Common, Jerusalem Road, the Causeway, Stony Beach, Sandy Beach, Cunningham Bridge before it was rebuilt, the Olde Salt House, John Smith Memorial Landing, the "Oakes" Estate, the Old Beechwood Ballpark and Fire Station, the Wheelwright Dairy Farm and Farmstead, Lily Pond, and the Old Nichols House built in the 1700's. The first Zoning Bylaw was adopted one year later.

This 11-minute color film is now available in DVD format for $40. Anyone interested in purchasing a copy should contact Jo-Ann in the Planning Board Office at the Town Hall, 781-383-3517.

Department sets the bar high

School goals presented to selectmen

By Samantha Brown
STAFF WRITER

The Cohasset school department has charted a course for the future. With a firm set of goals in place, School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz came before the Board of Selectmen Feb. 5 to fill members in on their plan to move the district ahead.

The School Committee has set the two goals of becoming one of the top 10 public schools in the state and one of the top 100 public schools in the nation. To help track its progress, the committee has come up with a set of quantitative measures for success. Slanetz said the goals are the result of Strategic Planning exercises, which have set a five-year plan in motion for the district.

First it would like to see more aptitude tests implemented. Currently in grades three through ten, 35 percent of students are taking the tests. By next year, the goal is to have 100 percent of students taking the tests, which will enable the district to better track achievement. "We want every child, of whatever level or aptitude, achieving," he said.

Without enough test data having been collected, the district does not currently have the baseline data to determine how much and how quickly students are achieving. Next year, Slanetz said through the testing being implemented this school year, the district hopes to have baseline data for 75 percent of its students.

Budget restrictions have affected staffing and this year, many students were scheduled for study hall for the second half of the year before state funding was allocated that allowed some retiring positions to be filled. With block scheduling, students are able to move through courses more rapidly and without enough teachers, the students are running out of classes to take.

The first goal is to have 100 percent of students scheduled and that goal has been met. Slanetz said the School Committee would like to see a 25 percent increase in course offerings by next year with a 50 percent increase within the next five years.

In addition, the committee would like to see an increase in the amount of students taking honors courses. Currently the school has roughly 25 percent of its students enrolled in honors courses, and it would like to see 50 percent by next year. The goal is to also have more students participating in advanced placement classes, and in turn see increased scores on AP tests. Currently roughly 20 percent of students are taking AP courses, 89 percent of which are achieving scores in the 3 to 5 range (5 is a perfect score). Slanetz said the committee would like to see greater than 25 percent of students taking the tests and greater than 90 percent of those taking the tests scoring in the 3 to 5 range.

Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford asked whether the School Committee has pegged any dollar amounts on what it would take to achieve the goals, as there are many that relate to increased staffing. Slanetz said in some instances, offering more courses will simply require shifting of staff members who are already working at the school. He said when interviewing new hires, the department is going to be looking for people who have multiple skill sets and could perhaps teach the main classes as well as electives.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil asked whether Cohasset could hire a part-time teacher and share it with another district, which might also be looking to offer a class that might not have huge participation numbers, such as a foreign language or specialty elective. Slanetz said while that would be a possibility, taking a language position for example, students would need to begin with a basic class and work their way up to fluency and that would eventually require more than a part time person for the various levels.

The next goal is measuring achievement through standardized tests. "I think they're here to stay," said Slanetz, adding with the MCAS tests, in some areas, such as math and English at the 10th-grade level, Cohasset performs "quite well." In other areas such as elementary math and science, "We have room to grow."

Slanetz said the district would also like to reduce the percent of students who are applying to private schools. Next year, the district would like to see less than 20 percent of eighth grade students leave the district for private schools. The three-year goal is to have less than 15 percent and by five years, bring that number down to less than 8 percent. 'We're not saying we're ever going to do away with it. Some families have a private school tradition," he said, but added the committee would like more students to feel the education in Cohasset is comparable to a private school education and decide to finish out their high school years in town.

Upping SAT scores is also a goal for the future and where average scores are currently in the 540 to 550 range, within the next five years they would like to see scores in the 650-670 range. The School Committee would also like to see an increase in the percent of students receiving the National Merit Scholarship, which is correlated to the PSAT. The cost for administering the test has been added into the budget and will allow the test to be administered by a teacher during the school week rather than on a weekend, which will hopefully encourage more student participation.

When it comes to sports, Cohasset can compete with much larger schools in terms of participation. However, when it comes to other extra-curricular activities, such as debating teams, model UN competitions or math league, Cohasset's numbers are nowhere near its larger school counterparts. "In terms of academic extra curricular activities we have less than half, or maybe one-third participating," said Slanetz. There are currently 11 extra-curricular teams and the School Committee would like to see that number increase to 15 by next year, and greater than 25 in the next three to five years.

Another way to measure the district's success is taking a look at the acceptances to college and receipt of scholarships. Cohasset sends roughly 94 percent of its seniors on to postsecondary education and Slanetz said the committee would like to see 98 percent attending within the next five years. In addition, it would like to see an increase in the number of students attending highly competitive colleges and Ivy League schools.

The Board of Selectmen said it appreciated the presentation and liked seeing a firm set of goals in place, which will help prioritize budgeting going forward.

What did the $200,000 Chapter 70 funds do?

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz told Selectmen Jan. 5 having an additional $200,000 in Chapter 70 state funding this year helped immensely in its plans to move the district forward toward excellence. When the funds came in from the state, the town agreed to turn it over to the schools, which it is earmarked for.

"When we have additional funds, we can produce results," Slanetz said, and listed the various goals the school department has been able to achieve with the money.

- One middle school music teacher who will add two sections of chorus and a grade 11 and 12 American musical theater elective.
- One high school math teacher who will add two grade 10 math sections and a grade 11 and 12 computer science elective.
- One high school English teacher who will split the grade 11 AP/honors course into two classes, add an SAT prep course, add a grade 11 and 12 English literature elective, and add a grade 11 and 12 public speaking elective.
- Additional time for existing faculty to teach a grade 11 and 12 environmental science elective.

These additions will help the school department make progress on its goals by: allowing all students to be scheduled, adding AP courses, broadening curriculum for seniors, lower class size, add performing and musical arts extracurricular components, and improve standardized test scores, thereby increasing college acceptances and scholarships.

"I think this is a very exciting time for us," Slanetz said.

Town, trust eye 40-acre purchase

Public hearing is Feb. 26

By Samantha Brown
STAFF WRITER

The Board of Selectmen has roughly 100 days to decide whether it would like to purchase 40 acres of land between South Main Street and Route 3A. The Cohasset Land Foundation has entered into a purchase and sale agreement with property owner Osborne Ingram, but the town has the right of first refusal.

Members of the Foundation Dick Avery, Jack Keniley and Wayne Sawchuk came before the board Feb. 5 to explain their vision for the land. They reminded the board members of the Foundation made a presentation to the board in October of 2005. At that time, the explained the property has a 10-year forest management plan, certified by the state forester, which will protect the land from development, commencing in fiscal 2006, which began July 1, 2005. As a result, the town has the option to match a bona fide offer to purchase the land.

The Cohasset Land Foundation is a public/private partnership founded to assist the town in identifying, acquiring and appropriately developing parcels of land of "special interest" in a manner consistent with the goals outlined in the 2003 Cohasset Master Plan (which is still considered a draft). The objective of the partnership is to serve as a catalyst to save what needs to be saved and develop what needs to be developed by creatively matching funding and development interests with the needs of the town and its various constituents, including its landowners, Selectmen, the Conservation Commission, Community Preservation Committee, Open Space Committee, Senior Housing Committee, Housing Partnership and the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

Avery said in working with Ingram, the Foundation has been trying to come up with both a fair market price for the landowner, while preserving as much of the land as possible. "We want to sell off as little as possible just to cover our costs," he said.

Avery said perc tests have been conducted on the site and there have been three valid results. As a result, the Foundation would like to sell six of the 40 acres and build three single-family homes on two acres each. Some of the other land would be set aside for town purposes such as an athletic field or cemetery. Another 5 acres would be set aside and named for Ingram's father.

The objective of the partnership is to serve as a catalyst to save what needs to be saved and develop what needs to be developed by creatively matching funding and development interests with the needs of the town and its various constituents.

Keniley said the Foundation would purchase the land for $1.25 million and it has accumulated $50,000 in fees already, so selling three parcels will provide the funds to cover the costs incurred. "We want to recoup the full price and we will," he said.

Selectman Fred Koed said he wasn't sure the town should get back into the business of developing property. The town tried to work out a deal to develop affordable housing on the Cook Estate property and ended up losing money and the project never came to fruition.

Sawchuk said the Foundation is well rounded in terms of its expertise and is equipped to handle the project. He said in the end, the town would still keep a good amount of conservation land, and would have three new homes on multiple acre lots. "We're thrilled so much can come out of this property," he said.

Before the Board of Selectmen makes a final decision, it will hold a public hearing on the matter. In order to meet advertising deadlines, the hearing will be held Feb. 26, which will also give the board time to add an article to the Annual Town Meeting Warrant, scheduled for March 31, if it decides it would like to purchase the land. The Warrant goes to the printer March 9.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

VACATION WISHES

Ok Cohasset, I guess winter is not completely a nothing although Wednesdays Valentine's Day storm was certainly a messy one and not filled with snow as some of us had hoped. I hope that everyone stayed safe and warm. I also want to wish everyone a great February Vacation whether you are traveling or staying here in town.

BIG THANK YOU!

As we all know, this week's storm was a mess to say the least! I know that the town workers, fire and police and people around town who work very hard to keep the roads as safe as possible are many times receiving complaints but I just received two emails from residents who wanted to say thank you! I think that is a good idea as I know they all work hard at what they do, especially during a storm.

Thank you to all people who helped to keep the town as safe as possible and who took care of issues and people in our town during Wednesdays Valentine's Day storm.

The month-long Read-a-thon was kicked off on Feb. 12 at the Joseph Osgood School and the Deer Hill School with a special guest speaker: David McGillivray, author of the "The Last Pick," shown here talking to Deer Hill students.

'Dream Big Reading Marathon' kicks off

The Cohasset PSO's third annua Read-a-thon, the Drean Big Reading Maraton, has officially begun Last year this event raisedover $20,000 to benefit the Joeph Osgood, Deer Hill and Middle Schools. Partidpating students from the tree schools will set a readiig goal for the month-long event, gather pledges from family and friends and start logging their minutes spen reading. Money raised will support and maintain schol enrichment and curricuum programs.

Ths year's read-a-thon will run in tandem with the One Boo One Cohasset initiative. The goal of One Book One Colasset, sponsored by the Pau Pratt Memorial Library, is to foster a love of reading and a sense of community for all ages. The town-wide book selection, "The Last Pick" by David J. McGillivray and Linda Glass Fechter, includes messages of goal setting, aiming high and never limiting what is possible. The theme of "striving for your own personal best" is what ties this year's Read-a-thon to the One Book One Cohasset program.

The goal of One Book One Cohasset, sponsored by the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, is to foster a love of reading and a sense of community for all ages.

Companion books to "The Last Pick," "The End of the Beginning: Being the Adventures of a Small Snail (and an Even Smaller Ant)," by Avi and Tricia Tusa at the Deer Hill School and "The Little Engine That Could." by Watty Piper at the Osgood School illustrate similar themes.

The month long Read-a-thon was kicked off on Feb. 12 at the Joseph Osgood School and the Deer Hill Schools with a special guest speaker. David McGillivray, author of the "The Last Pick," spoke to the students about how important it is to focus on your strengths, set goals for yourself, plan carefully, and work hard to achieve what you have set out to do.

McGillivray, who is also the Race Director of the BAA Boston Marathon, captivated students with his stories of his childhood challenges, what he learned from them and of his 80-day run across the United States at the age of 23 in support of the Jimmy Fund and the Dana Farber Cancer Institute. It was a motivating start to the Read-a-thon and will hopefully inspire students to "Dream Big" as they set their reading goals and begin the 26-day Reading Marathon.

David H. Parker

At the corner of Beechwood and King streets, there is a memorial dedicated to David H. Parker. A lifelong resident of the town, he, like so many others who were sent off to fight in World War II, paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom.

Sixty-two years ago this month, Parker's young life came to an end at the age of 20. He had grown up in Cohasset and lived with his parents and two older brothers at 339 Beechwood Street. He is remembered as being a quiet boy of a somewhat short stature, standing about 5-foot 7-inches tall.

"Pete," as his friends and classmates knew Parker, enjoyed golfing. Childhood friend Lawrence Ainslie remembers how he and Parker would play at the Cohasset Golf Club with Parker's father. To be sure their game was respectable, Parker built a practice putting green on the lawn of his family home.

In addition to golf, classmate Tom Hernan remembers playing with Parker on the high school baseball team.

Parker graduated from Cohasset High School in 1943 and was called in the next draft. He served with the 311th Infantry Regiment, the first unit across the Rhine River in 1945.

On Feb. 1, 1945, as the 311th began the attack on Kesterich, Germany, Parker took command of his squad when their leader became a casualty. Soon after, a mortar dropped near Parker, killing him instantly. He was awarded the Bronze Star posthumously for his actions.

Parker's remains were returned to Cohasset and are buried at Woodside Cemetery. According to friends, Parker's mother was so devastated by the loss of her son that her hair turned completely white. Parker's nephew, Wesley Parker of Pacific Palisades, Ca., said roughly seven months after his uncle was killed, on Sept. 8, 1945 the family moved from their Beechwood Street home, where they had lived since 1915, to Santa Monica, Ca.

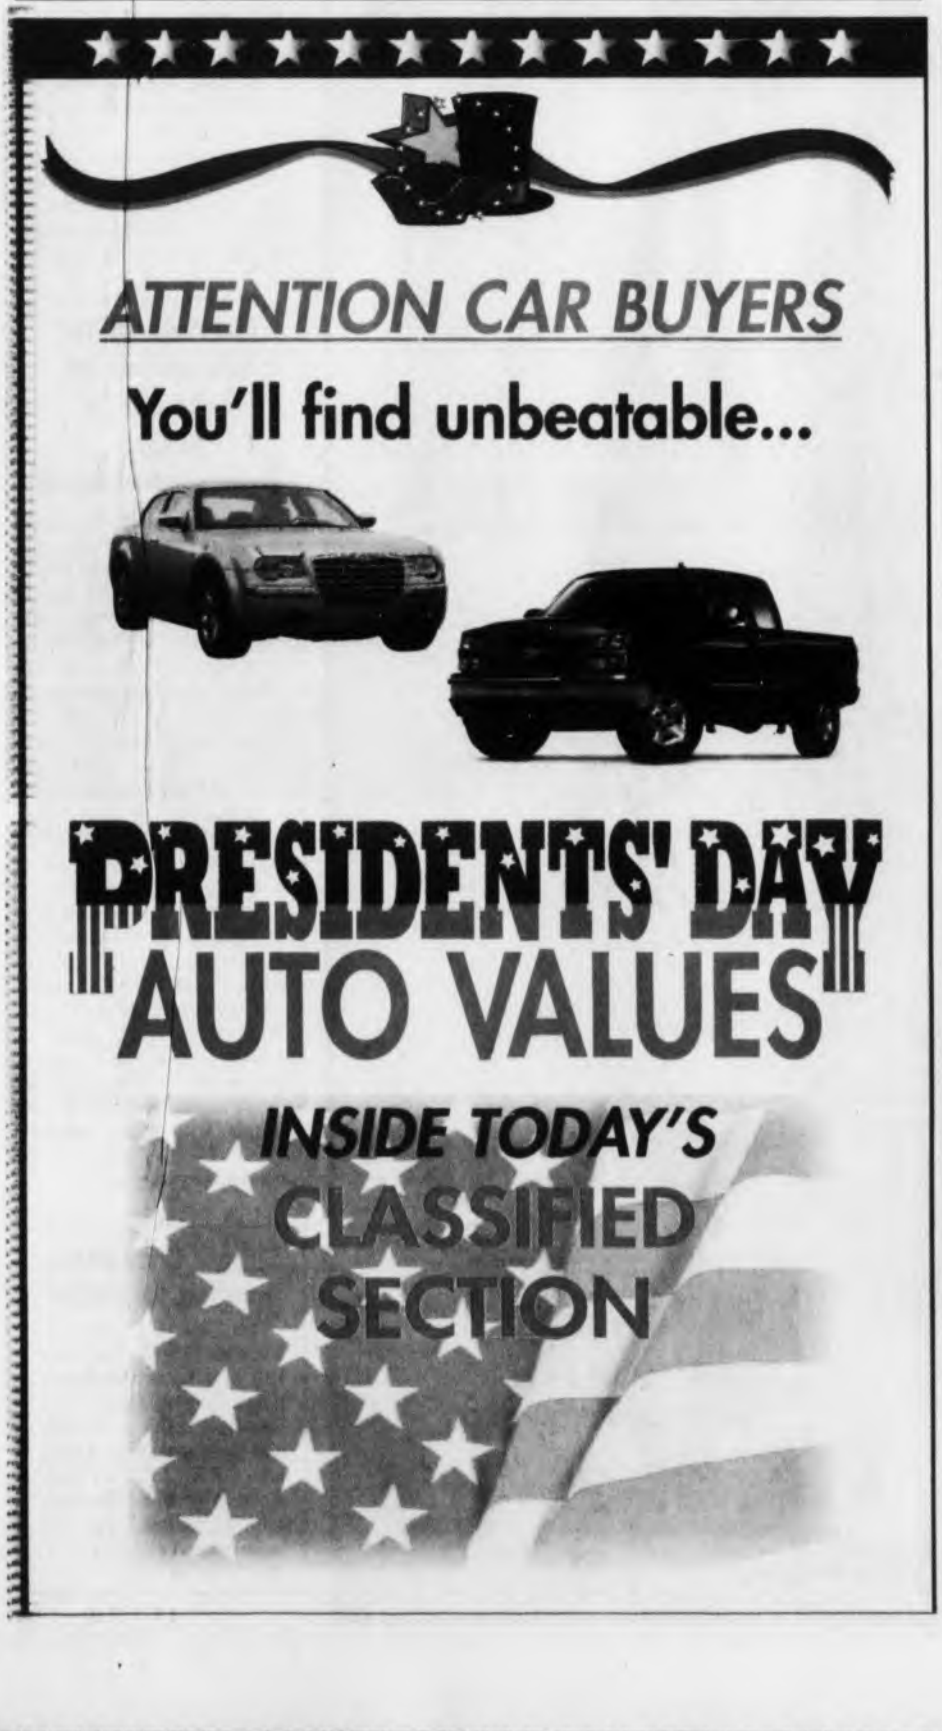
The memorial intersection, which now stands just up the street from his boyhood home, ensures the sacrifices made by Parker and his family will never be forgotten by the town of Cohasset.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on David H. Parker or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Fallen servicemen honored around town

David H. Parker is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset. The town lost seven other men during World War II, who have all been memorialized with squares, parks, and roads in town including:

- Allen A. Buffum: Square at Beechwood St. & So. Main Street
- Norman Todd: Road intersects with Beechwood St., and a memorial park is located at their intersection.
- Robert E. Jason: Road at the Common
- William B. Long: Road at the Common
- Howard R. Gleason: Road to Yacht Club from Margin St.
- Perry H. Johnson: Square at Beach St. & Atlantic Ave.
- Everett F. Studley: Square at Jerusalem Road and Hull Street



The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery, including Parker's mother, Rosalia.

Roughly 498 men and women from Cohasset served during World War II from 1941 until the war was declared over in December 1946. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women from the "Greatest Generation" by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor. A book of Cohasset servicemen's names was presented to the National Monuments Commission at the dedication of the WWII Memorial, on May 29, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

Cohasset kids helping Iraqi kids

National Honor Society collects school supplies

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

For the past three weeks, the National Honor Society at Cohasset High School has led an effort to collect school supplies for Operation Iraqi Children.

Spearheading the effort are Ryan Ingram and Caren Garber, who ensured that collection boxes were placed in all the town schools and that posters and flyers alerted students and their parents to the special collection drive.

The girls, who have both traveled to the Middle East, also went around to places like Stop & Shop to spread the word.

Ryan, who has visited Jordan through Seeds of Peace Beyond Borders, came up with the idea and decided the National Honor Society was just the organization to carry it out.

"I approached Caren and we both worked very hard together," she said. Caren spent five weeks in Israel through the National Federation of Temple Youth.

Ryan pointed out Operation Iraqi Freedom, is endorsed by First Lady Laura Bush.

"It seemed like a simple idea to put kids and school supplies together," Ryan said.

"It seemed like a simple idea to put kids and school supplies together."
— Ryan Ingram, CHS senior

Specific school supplies were requested such as blunt scissors, pencils, and pocket folders. The items are all assembled into plastic, two-gallon freezer bags – so each child gets a complete kit.

The supplies are sent to the OIF warehouse in Kansas City and from there are sent to the Iraq and Afganistan for distribution by US troops.

Plans are to ship the supplies collected by the National Honor Society after next week's school vacation.

Donations to help offset the shipping cost would be gratefully accepted, Caren said. Checks should be sent to the National Honor Society at Cohasset High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Ryan said the experience has been positive for everyone.

"It is a simple way for kids to help kids," she said. "That is what we are most excited about."

About 'Operation Iraqi Children'

The need —American soldiers passing through Iraqi villages were horrified at the squalor of Iraqi schools, which had been severely neglected under the dictatorship of Saddam Hussein. Corralled in sweltering one-room buildings without air conditioning, fans, windows, solid floors, or even toilets, Iraqi students lack even the rudimentary supplies that American children take for granted. Libraries and books are almost nonexistent. Without these basic tools of education, Iraqi children face an uphill struggle to learn.

The answer — Inspired by their conversations with Operation Iraqi Freedom soldiers as well as actor Gary Sinise's tour of the region in 2003, Sinise and author Laura Hillenbrand founded Operation Iraqi Children, a grassroots program to provide concerned Americans with a means to reach out to Iraqi kids and help support American soldiers' efforts to assist the Iraqi people.

Through the School Supply Kit Program, American children, church groups, and other organizations can help Iraqis by gathering school supplies in local drives, assembling them in kits according to our instructions, then sending them to the OIC Warehouse in Kansas City, Mo. for transport to Iraq, where soldiers will take them to Iraqi villages.

Building school supply kits — The most efficient and effective way to help Iraqi children is to create School Supply Kits that will be distributed to each student. Each Kit contains basic, badly needed items. Assembling standardized Kits ensures that each child receives the same number of the most needed items, facilitates custom's clearance, and relieves volunteers and soldiers of the time-consuming and labor-intensive process of sorting and allocating random donated items. Visit: www.operationiraqichildren.org for more information about the kits.

Kits include a pair of blunt-end scissors; one 12-inch ruler with metric markings; 12 new pencils with erasers; one small pencil sharpener; one large eraser; one box of colored pencils (crayons melt in the Iraqi summer heat!); one package of notebook paper; one composition book; three folders with inside pockets; and one zippered pencil bag. Pack only the listed supplies in a backpack or in a 2-gallon sized zipper seal plastic bag.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2007 observances.

The effort, which Selectmen have unanimously endorsed, should result in upwards of 200 American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island fices Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone.

The flags sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healing-field.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

The School Committee had a meeting scheduled for Feb. 7 at 7 p.m., but due to a lack of a quorum, it was cancelled. The committee will meet again Wednesday, Feb. 28 in the community meeting room at the high school, located near the superintendent's office.

Roger Whitley reflects on serving in the Peace Corps with his wife in Fiji. Kitty and Roger Whitley also volunteered with Habitat for Humanity in Guatemala. (Pictured in the background is a typical scene found in Fiji).

"I have been amazed at his humanitarian accomplishments, his gracious demeanor, and his generosity not only to our tiny little community but to the world at large."
— Jane Kyricos, 84 Summer St.

grown and off on their own.

Whitley's generosity of his time and energy over the years on myriad committees and on countless projects and activities, led to his selection as this year's Citizen of the Year.

Jane Kyricos of Summer Street put it best in her nomination of Whitley.

"In the past 20-plus years I have known Roger Whitley, I have been amazed at his humanitarian accomplishments, his gracious demeanor, and his generosity not only to our tiny little community but to the world at large," she wrote.

The Citizen of the Year selection committee consisting of Susan Jaffe of 10 Wood Way, Mal McCunney of 685 Jerusalem Road, and Patience Towle of 61 Highland Ave., joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 12 nominations submitted by 22 individuals. The Citizen of the Year is an annual award started by the Cohasset Mariner in 1993.

Joan Kovach, 59 Ripley Road, described Whitley in her nomination as a "quiet, unassuming man with a heart as big as the planet and a commitment to the planet as well.

"We will never know how much his skill as an architect and timeless dedication influenced our beautiful library, or what legacy he left in the South Pacific as a Peace Corps volunteer," she wrote.

Cohasset can count itself lucky that Whitley moved to town in 1956. One of the main reasons he chose Cohasset was the commuter rail service at the time because he and his wife both commuted.

The Greenbush line may have been abandoned in 1959, but Whitley's commitment to his adopted hometown and the world at large only grew.

Whitley's first wife died of cancer at 41. A few years later, Whitley, a single parent with two young children, met his current wife Kitty, who was teaching at Deer Hill.

"My older daughter was in the classroom and I dated the teacher," the grandfather of two recalls with a smile. Within a year they were married and that was 38 years ago.

In the mid-70s, Whitley resigned his partnership at an architectural firm in Boston and became a self-employed architect with a home office at his house on Cedar Street.

Ten year later, he and Kitty, packed up the house, rented it out and were on their way to the Fiji Islands where they spent two years from 1984-1986,

It was Kitty, who had served in the Peace Corps in Malaysia, who suggested Whitley try the Peace Corps when he expressed frustration over news reports. "I asked, 'what can a person do?' and Kitty said, 'Why don't you join the Peace Corps'," he says.

"I spent my 60th birthday in the Peace Corps, it was a great experience," Whitley recalls.

He says he built a wood stove for his house and then showed a few villagers how to make one. Apparently they taught others. "When I left there were four or five stoves in the village – and now we've heard everyone has a stove."

Over the past 20 years, Whitley, who is now 80, became a volunteer extraordinaire, serving on the Design Review Board, a committee that has not been tapped in recent years. If Whitley had his druthers he would ensure the Design Review Board got involved again — always in an advisory capacity — in helping ensure projects fit the neighborhood.

What followed his stint on the Design Review Board, was service on the Advisory Committee where he enjoyed analyzing departmental budgets – even though initially, he "had to be pushed into" agreeing to join the committee. "I knew nothing about finance but I could listen and make judgments," he says.

After that he ran for Library Trustee and helped see the library project through to fruition. "It was a good project, I am really pleased with the way it turned out," he says.

His only disappointment over the years was seeing the effort to establish a central sewer plant where the Little League Fields are now located dashed at a Town Meeting in the early 1980s. He had served on the committee to find a site for the plant. At the time, the federal government would have picked up 90 percent of the cost of the plant.

The rest, to coin a phrase, is history. The town has been embroiled in sewer issues ever since. Whitley said at the time, some feared sewering the town would open the door to development. He points out, however, development has come along anyway.

Whitley is also active in First Parish Church and he and Kitty helped with a Habitat for Humanity project in Guatemala.

Whitley said when he learned he had been selected as Citizen of the Year, he was "stunned." His reaction is not surprising. He is described as "humble, kind, thoughtful and considerate."

George Kovach, 59 Ripley Road, said in his nomination of Whitley, "What distinguishes Roger is the selflessness, humility and integrity with which he conducts his participation in town affairs."

Many fine citizens were nominated for annual award

The Cohasset Mariner received 12 nominations from 22 individuals and families for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Susan Jaffe, 10 Wood Way; Mal McCunney, 685 Jerusalem Road; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; and editor Mary Ford pored over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected Roger Whitley of Wheelwright Farm for the annual award.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the other very deserving candidates including:

• Connie Afshar – a devoted and tireless volunteer for a variety of organizations, namely those for peace and diversity. She is always out there getting us to realize the need and showing us how we can try to help.

• Steve Bobo – a man of whose energy seems boundless. His contributions to Cohasset include his Health Notes weekly column and work with the Cohasset Historical Society, Board of Health, Lightkeepers, and Cohasset Student Center for Coastal Research.

• Merle Brown – for his consistent and dedicated involvement in his hometown over decades including the Conservation Commission, Board of Selectmen, Recycling Committee, Advisory Committee, Alternative Energy Committee, Boy Scouts and so much more.

• Ron Goodwin – for his generosity in supporting a range of Cohasset endeavors and town events. In fact, those who nominated him could not recall him ever turning down a request to help someone or some group.

• Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan – "The Greenbush Guys" for their no nonsense approach in dealing with the MBTA, always putting Cohasset's best interests to the forefront; for their hard work and informative "Making Tracks" weekly column.

• Roger Lincoln – for his decades of service to the Cohasset Fire Department, always with class and professionalism. "Honesty, courtesy and loyalty" best described the retired Fire Chief.

• Adrienne MacCarthy – for her years of volunteer service for the children and community including serving on the School Committee, School Building Committee, and on the PSO, as well as myriad other volunteer activities including Meals on Wheels .

• Veneta Roebuck – for her devotion to the town and its natural resources over many years, especially through her service on the Conservation Commission. She has provided good and steady advice and is arguably the best informed person having walked, hiked, paddled, canoed and sailed the town's land and waterways.

• Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts – for trying to make Cohasset a better place for all through her belief in democratic principles, her commitment to affordable housing, and service on town boards including the School Committee, and other good works.

• Hamilton Tewksbury – always friendly and kind as a van driver for the CEA, for his service on the Govt. Island Study Committee and other boards and helping to obtain the Fresnel lense for the Minot Light Replica.

• Jack Worley – for his 30 years of dedicated service as Recreation Director for the town and helping to grow the programs. He is always energetic, helpful and understanding.

All aboard for a late night train?

Tom Gruber, Greenbush liaison, provided Selectmen with a summary of the "Late Train Survey" he and fellow liaison, Mark Brennan, conducted recently. MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas has asked area towns to gauge the need for a late train that would leave South Station after 10 p.m.

As of Feb. 6, there were 108 replies to the survey: 73 in favor and 35 opposed to a later train, Gruber said. "We have explained to the residents that this poll was not intended to have statistical relevance. It was intended to be a straw poll in which residents would express their opinion, if they so desired.

Some respondents seemed interested in whether Selectmen would hold a public hearing on the issue.

Gruber noted those who responded that they were in favor of a later train were not abutters to the tracks; those who were abutters and a few others were adamantly opposed to a later train. He also said some of the "yes" votes may not reflect on the practicality of the actual process of getting from a venue such as a Celtics or Red Sox game to South Station at some time after 10 p.m. to catch the late train.

Some respondents seemed interested in whether Selectmen would hold a public hearing on the issue. "This might bear consideration," Gruber wrote.

In a related matter, Vincent G. Longo, COO and Executive Producer of the South Shore Music Circus, said the Music Circus, while not opposed to a late train, is concerned about the timing of the trains and the impact on residents and customers.

"With the commuter rail tracks crossing Sohier Street just beyond the Music Circus parking lot gates, I want to express my concerns regarding vehicle and pedestrian safety and convenience both before and after concerts," Longo wrote in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin. "Even with police details on site, the convergence of a train with patrons entering or leaving the venue, especially after dark, has the potential for a safety hazard."

Longo explained the trains between 7:30 and 8:05 p.m. or 10:20 and 10:55 p.m., would impact entrance and egress from the Music Circus parking lots, delay filling and emptying the lots, and back up traffic on Sohier Street and surrounding roadways.

"Wetlands are important for health, safety and quality of life in the coastal communities of Massachusetts."

— Environmental Affairs Secretary Ian Bowles

"Wetlands are important for health, safety and quality of life in the coastal communities of Massachusetts," said Bowles. "EOEA not only works to protect and conserve these resources, but also invests substantially in efforts to restore degraded habitats back to health."

The grant was awarded by the Office of Coastal Zone Management's Wetlands Restoration Program, which works with a large network of partners to help bring back the lost values and services of wetlands that have been damaged by historic development. Recipients will use the grant funding to restore and monitor wetlands that protect coastal areas from flooding, improve water quality and provide critical habitat for many species of fish and wildlife.

A 25 percent non-state match is required for all projects.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

'Heart as big as the planet'

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that Roger Whitley of Wheelwright Farm is the Citizen of the Year.

The town can count itself lucky that Roger, who was living in Boston back in the mid-1950s, decided to move to Cohasset — ironically, because it had commuter rail service at the time.

Over the past 50 years, Roger's quiet dedication, coupled with his talent and integrity, have won over nearly everyone he meets.

The grandfather of two has served on many committees, taken part in town activities, and has supported numerous charitable efforts.

Jane Kyricos of Summer Street put it best in her nomination.

"In the past 20-plus years I've known Roger Whitley I have been amazed at his humanitarian accomplishments, his gracious demeanor, and his generosity not only to our tiny little town but also to the world at large."

Roger was taken aback when he learned of the award, which will be formally presented at a reception in the spring.

"I was stunned," he says, adding he feels very honored to have been selected.

While nominations were open, 22 individuals or families took the time to propose a citizen or group for the annual award, detailing the nominee's contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

The selection committee consisting of Susan Jaffe, 10 Wood Way; Mal McCunney, 685 Jerusalem Road; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; and editor Mary Ford met at the Cohasset Mariner in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to review all the heartfelt letters of nomination. The decision to select Whitley was unanimous but not reached without considerable discussion about all the very deserving candidates

Joan Kovach of 59 Ripley Road described Roger in her nomination as a man "with a heart as big as the planet, and a commitment to the planet as well. We'll never know how much his skill as an architect and timeless dedication influenced our beautiful library, or what legacy he left on the South Pacific as a Peace Corps volunteer…"

George Kovach added, "what distinguishes Roger is the selflessness, humility and integrity with which he conducts his participation in town affairs."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Mary Ford

Thanks, Samantha

Samantha Brown, staff reporter for the Cohasset Mariner for the past 3-1/2 years, has relocated to Connecticut. Her last day was Friday (Feb. 9).

Here at the Mariner, we are going to miss her dearly, as will our readers. You will still see her name on some stories this week because – always conscientious – Samantha left some stories to tide us over.

We have hired a new reporter, Nancy White, who starts Feb. 26. We are sure you will embrace Nancy the same way you have Samantha.

The Cohasset Mariner staff reporter has a challenging job to help fill a paper that is lucky to have astute readers that care deeply about community affairs. It is an honor to serve you and we are proud that reporters like Samantha have helped make the paper one we can all be proud of.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Walk facing traffic

TO THE EDITOR:

A man was killed by an automobile in Scituate late last Sunday afternoon as he walked with his back to traffic. The driver said she never saw him. All authorities advise walking on the left facing the traffic, in part because a face is more visible than one's back, and in part because a pedestrian can see and jump aside if the oncoming vehicle is headed his or her way.

About 30 percent of Cohasset's pedestrians walk and jog with backs to traffic, blissfully ignoring the hazard from drivers under the influence, daydreaming, blinded by the sun or oncoming lights, talking on the cell phone, distracted by children or other passengers, etc.

Particularly dangerous is walking or jogging with back to traffic in dusk or darkness.

So do your family and your life insurance company a favor and walk facing the traffic.

Commission extends gratitude to sponsors

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Recreation Commissioners would like to extend their most sincere gratitude to the 2006 Playground program sponsors.

Responding to the Commissioner's letter of last April were 15 local business and civic organizations, who registered for one of three level sponsorships for the summer, seven-week daycamp-type program, for children ages 3-1/2 to 12 years.

Levels of sponsorship were $500, $200, or $100, which resulted in logo and listings of each business/organization on both the children's and staff's program T-shirts, as well as a notation in the summer brochure.

In their effort to become 100 percent financially self-supporting, while affording a continuation of top quality services, the Commissioners wish to thank and recognize the following local supporters; Pilgrim Bank; Stop & Shop; Goodwin Graphics; Cohasset Veterans of Foreign War, Post #4146; Kristine A Grazioso, DMD; Lahr and Barnes Insurance Agency; Rockland Trust; The South Shore Music Circus; Cohasset Collision Center, Inc.; George R. Mealy Post #118 American Legion; The Good Sport; Goodale Insurance Agency; J.J.'s Dairy Hut; The Junk Guy and MKR Building Solutions.

2007 sponsorship letters will be mailed out soon, are available at Town Hall, or by calling Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 for sponsor details.

Police association appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

To the residents and business owners of Cohasset:

Recently, the Cohasset Police Association conducted a fundraiser via bulk mailing. Due to your overwhelming generosity, we will be able to support numerous local causes and sponsorships this year. Already we have been able to donate to such worthwhile endeavors as the Deer Hill Band, Special Olympics, Toys for Tots, American Cancer Society and the Sons of the American Legion Flag Memorial.

On behalf of the men and women of the association, we thank you for your continued support, and encourage you to look for future events sponsored by us.

Sewer project won't increase town debt

TO THE EDITOR:

In my letter to the Editor published on Feb. 2, 2007, I took issue with a statement of the previous week in the Candidates Corner, which implied that the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue sewer project will increase the town's debt. I was challenged by two candidates currently seeking election to town office who claimed that the project would add to our town debt which could raise the town's borrowing rate and diminish the town's available credit. This is not so.

A trip to Town Hall reconfirmed that funding for construction of the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue Sewer District is not to come from a bond issue but from a low interest (2 percent) state loan to be paid for in its entirety by residents of the sewer district. My trip also confirmed that this loan is categorized as "outside the debt limit" and should neither raise the town's borrowing rate nor diminish the town's available credit. As knowledgeable candidates were not familiar with the nature of this funding, I believe others in town may also be unaware. I hope this letter clarifies the issue. The town's extraordinary debt is a serious problem for all of us. However, the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue sewer project should not add to this problem.

POLITICAL

Carlson talks about issues

At two recent receptions, selectman candidate Paul Carlson enlarged on his campaign theme, "maintaining and improving town services while keeping Cohasset affordable for all our friends and neighbors."

In each case, a lively exchange of views ensued on such timely topics as downtown zoning, stormwater management, emergency services, alternate energy solutions and long-term planning. Paul was delighted to hear residents' views.

Announcements of upcoming receptions will appear in the Mariner and on Paul's campaign website, CarlsonForSelectman.com.

The candidate wishes to thank the following town officials for making time to discuss their views with him: Selectman Ted Carr, planning board Chairman Al Moore and board member Peter Pratt. He also had an informative meeting with the Council on Elder Affairs.

Harbor wall repair to get under way

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

About another non-Greenbush project — This week a new construction project is starting in Cohasset. This will be the first phase of the Harbor Wall Repair Project. Before we talk about this, let's have a little background. It's been a while since Cohasset has done any work maintaining the seawalls that surround our harbor. For those of us who are landlubbers, evidence of this can be seen in the sidewalk that parallels the harbor wall along Border Street.

Numerous sinkhole and patches can be seen in the walkway. It has been patched so may times that it is a rather uneven walkway. From the waterside, boaters can see holes that have opened up in the wall that is causing instability in the wall at various places. The movement of the granite blocks and the loss of chinking have caused the fill behind the wall to wash out. As the material behind the wall is lost, the sidewalk surface disappears into small sinkholes. Without repairs to the wall itself, things will only get worse. Ultimately, the seawall will be subject to collapse, taking Border Street with it. Clearly, this would not be a good situation.

Three separate areas have been identified as needing repairs. These are: 1) Border Street from the Mill River Marina to the Atlantica parking lot, 2) Lawrence Wharf to Veterans Memorial, and, 3) The Cohasset Sailing Club. We mentioned before that the Town had appropriated $600K some time ago to repair phase 1), above. In the meantime, the Commonwealth offered a grant for harbor repairs that would match Town construction funds on a 50/50 basis. At the fall Town Meeting, you were gracious enough to allow the Town to expand the scope of the original $600K so that is could be used for all of three above areas rather than just the sea wall starting art the Mill River Marina.

Thus, with the matching grant from the State, we could have as much as $1 million available for harbor wall repair, rather than $600K for phase 1), only. (Note the reason the amount is not twice the original $600K is that the State will only match construction costs, not design costs.)

So, the first phase repair project is now getting underway. This will be a very tricky project and a bit inconvenient for us as residents. The contractor, T. Ford, will have to excavate on the Border Street side of the seawall to rebuild the wall, place special fabric that will let water through, but will retain soil, and backfill the excavation. In addition, the utility poles that are along side the road will need to be supported by the power company so that they don't fall down during the excavation at their base. What's the upshot? Border Street will become a single lane during construction. At this point, we are not sure that it can be opened back up to two-way traffic at night. We'll have to see what the contractor is able to do. This phase is projected to take about 7 weeks, depending on the weather. As we have said before, construction projects like this can't be done in stealth mode. The residents and anyone who uses Border Street will definitively be aware of the construction.

The contractor, T. Ford, will be using the area in front of the Sailing Club as a storage area for their construction equipment and material. The portion of the circular drive closest to the Sailing Club buildings will be kept open so that the Club can have access to the entrance to their buildings as well as to the pathway between the two buildings fronting the circle. Access to the walkway to the Town Dock and the Light Keepers will also be kept open.

What about the other two harbor wall areas, you ask? Thinks get a bit stickier here. The actual low bidder for Phase I was considerably higher than our engineering consultant estimated. So, Phase 1 will cost more than projected. Consequently, there is less money available for the other two phases. At this time, the Town Manager is working with the engineering consultant to see how the remaining dollars can be most effectively used. We may be able to do some of the work to stabilize one or both of the other two areas, but how much it is prudent to undertake, within our funding limits, is still under study.

Still more non-Greenbush info – Last week we gave you an update on the work we have been doing in preparation for completing the Forest Avenue sidewalk and paving the entire roadway. Very shortly the Town will be going out to bid for the removal of trees necessary for sidewalk construction. About 40 trees and their stumps will need to be removed to obtain the space for the sidewalk. As much as we dislike removing any trees, everyone seems to agree that the safety of our pedestrians as they walk along Forest Avenue is a greater need. We expect the tree removal contract to be let in March with work commencing in March also.

'Global warming is a moral issue'

COMMENTARY

ALLAN MACDONALD

Publisher, reporter and concerned parent, Steinman aims his book at the average American, whether red or blue, with the intent of encouraging us to be "green patriots."

This update on global warming has been rewritten three times in the last three weeks, reflecting the rate of development that has occurred on the subject. To clarify, where not too long ago only occasional articles appeared on global warming, now not a day goes by without at least one serious piece on global warming in the Boston Globe. Nor does the coverage appear to be fabricated by the media. People are presently profoundly concerned about their environment in a way that is unique.

About a month ago, after reading James Howard Kunstler's "The Long Emergency," a current and thorough but very unsettling exploration of what our lives could be like after the end of oil, (evidently coming within the next 15 years), I drafted an article focusing on human adaptability. Sustainable Cohasset had been viewing related videos such as "The Death of Suburbia," which disturbed me greatly, because I had never made the obvious connection between suburbia and its being built upon the assumption oil would always be available. We watched "Who Killed the Electric Car,?" about the EV-1, a highly successful and efficient vehicle recalled and eradicated by its maker, General Motors. (Yes, you might ask why.)

But then we saw "The Community," a documentary on another phenomenon that occurred fairly recently right under our noses about a country that had its oil supply cut off: Cuba, after its disassociation with the Soviet Union. And guess what — the Cubans survived. The average Cuban lost 20 pounds; so many bicycles were used, they had to import them in massive quantities from China; everyone learned the value of composting because there were no fertilizers and learned very quickly how to raise vegetables in the back yard — that is, if they wanted to eat. People had to pull together, and they adapted very well. (Would we, you wonder.)

The other day I picked up two new nonfiction books at the library, James Canton's "The Extreme Future," and James Martin's "The Meaning of the 21st Century: A Vital Blueprint for Ensuring Our Future." These authors are more hopeful than Kunstler, who holds no hope whatsoever for alternative energies. But the warning is clearly that we are going to have to think hard and be as inventive and adaptive as possible (sounds like Friedman's "The World is Flat").

A most interesting voice on the subject is David Steinman and his book "Safe Trip to Eden," subtitled "Ten Steps to Save Planet Earth from the Global Warming Meltdown," published just several months ago. Publisher, reporter and concerned parent, Steinman aims his book at the average American, whether red or blue, with the intent of encouraging us to be "green patriots." He peppers his book with detail after detail meticulously researched and substantiated. Steinman takes the position that we need to speak out with our wallets and to buy green (to offset the lack of governmental conscience). It's amazing to learn from the book how many companies have been poisoning us without regard and how many companies vigorously follow green policies — the lists are there in the book — it's just a matter of learning which is which.

Last Saturday's forum on global warming at the Paul Pratt Library, held under the auspices of the town Democratic Committee and smoothly moderated by Tom Callahan, was a noteworthy and encouraging event that manifested the profound concern presently pulling people together. The session was not a doomsday diatribe, nor meandering mouthings, but a rational though spontaneous progression of vital information. We were surprised to learn from a British citizen present that every youngster in England sees "An Inconvenient Truth" — an attempt to do the same in America was outlawed — and that gas in England is $6 per gallon. A concerned citizen had prepared numerous handouts from various sources. Another participant was sufficiently concerned to bring along cartons of compact fluorescent light bulbs that he had purchased for 75 cents each. (They went like hotcakes after we learned that switching our bulbs to CF's would save us 45 percent on our electric bills – 95 percent of incandescent energy going into heat for 5 percent worth of light.)

In another local civic arena recently, Gary Vanderweil did us all a service by scrutinizing electrical and heating efficiencies at the high school. Having spent nearly 30 years at the high school, I can assure you that lights there need not be on all day every day. And the interior walls are of noticeably lighter tones now, providing more reflective light. I found CHS students very interested in the environment, and from what I hear, they still are. David Ames, Jack Buckley and some other teachers are eco-leaders, and Mike Gill is working on the problem, but will it take the EPA investigating team's public censuring of our town's schools for not recycling properly in order to change things? MCAS tests are not the only important business to be taught.

One attendee at the forum Saturday, a retired school system science coordinator, aptly illustrated the analogy she used with students of a cake, pie or large cookie cut into unequal portions in order to convey the important message that resource use is a simple matter of fairness. Americans don't realize we use nearly a third of the world's energy. At the end of "An Inconvenient Truth," Al Gore says that global warming is a moral issue. Fairness and morality should rule the day and the future. It would be of immense help – dare I say it would make a world of difference – if our leaders were sensible leaders. But as they continue to fail to be so, the people must continue to rally.

Sustainable Cohasset next meets on Wednesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m., in the high school library. All are welcome.

Gated community?

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

I'm angry and upset by an incident reported in last week's Mariner. A man sitting in a car near Cohasset Common was reported to the police, who stopped and questioned him, and apparently made it clear to him he is unwelcome in Cohasset. I understand the resident may have felt fear. I understand the police did what they believe residents expect of them. I'm not criticizing or blaming them in any way.

However, as I read the report I couldn't help thinking, "The shaggy man could have been me." Some of my heroes are shaggy: Einstein, Jerry Garcia. What if I had been feeling low, depressed, lonely or upset, and just needed to get away for a while and sit calmly? What if the Common, with its timeless symbols of Earth, air, and water, with the UU Meetinghouse in the center, offered me the serenity and solace of open space?

However, as I read the report I couldn't help thinking, "The shaggy man could have been me."

I'm angry that my government is cultivating a culture of fear in Americans. Subtly and not-so-subtly implanting the fear of terrorists lurking around any corner, in any parked car. The more I live in this fear the more willing I am to be submissive and compliant to a government offering to protect me. I'll be willing to support and fund imperialistic oil wars. I'll gladly surrender my constitutional rights.

The government wants to ramp up my feelings of insecurity. But I accept insecurity is part of life. There are no guarantees. As e e cummings wrote, the only secure person is each and every slave.

Terrorism: acts committed to instill fear and terror in innocent non-combatants. Isn't that what this government is doing to Americans? Isn't the Mariner complicit in this fear-mongering by spreading fear under the guise of law and order?

Fear lies at the bottom of the emotional scale. With fear come the feelings of insecurity, powerlessness, and victimhood. I refuse to live a life filled with fear. The more thought and energy I focus on fear, the more fear I'll attract into my life.

What if it had been a bomb-wielding terrorist in the car, intent on destroying "evil Americans", and someone had approached him with insight and compassion, saying, "Are you OK? Would you to like to talk?" and he realized we Americans are a loving, welcoming people, not violent, aggressive enemies, and he said, "Yes, thank you."

HEALTH NOTES

Stormwater problems take center stage

Hearing held on proposed bylaw

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., the Cohasset Stormwater Committee held a public hearing to introduce it's new Stormwater Bylaw in preparation for the Town meeting in March. Eight members, appointed by the Selectmen in August 2006 representing the Conservation Commission, the Planning Board, the Conservation Commission, Board of Health, Water Commission, Health of the Harbor Committee and the Water Resource Protection Committee were present, as well as Lawry Reid, a member living in Hull, appointed as a citizen advisor on Straits Pond issues. In all, 36 people attended from practically every part of town, indicating that Cohasset's stormwater problems were not restricted to only a single area in town.

Since their first meeting last August the committee has been working on a Bylaw. Mark Bartlett of the Norfolk Ram Group, LLC, who was retained by the Committee to conduct an analysis of the stormwater problems in Cohasset and find grants to alleviate them, gave a slide presentation based on assessment reports from Federal, State and local organizations which have been studying the issue.

The presentation showed pictures of many of Cohasset's worst stormwater problems:

- Large scale flooding such as that from James Brook into the downtown, from Treats Pond and Jacobs Meadow.
- "Small scale" flooding, just as serious, where runoff from one house lot drains onto an adjoining lot. Currently there is no recourse from Town Hall for the homeowner, who is told that this is a "civil matter."

Every surface water body in Cohasset is contaminated by pollution from stormwater. Cohasset Harbor is contaminated with bacteria and other contaminants that drain in from the large Gulf River watershed, a health threat to boaters and swimmers and an economic burden for local lobstermen. Straits Pond is contaminated with nutrients and bacteria from drainage from upland residences. Little Harbor is contaminated with bacteria that have closed the shellfish beds for decades. While sewering the area will help, the stormwater contribution will still be there. Lily Pond, our drinking water supply, is contaminated by excessive nutrients which drain from the developed areas of the Peppermint Brook watershed. These nutrients increase water treatment costs and impair the quality of our public drinking water supply.

Because no existing town board, committee or official is responsible for dealing with stormwater; for years, these issues have not been addressed. For this reason and because the Federal Clean Water act requires Cohasset to adopt a bylaw and other provisions or face severe fines, the need for the Town to adopt a bylaw this March is crucial.

Many of the Town's oldest and most prominent citizens spoke about the issue. In general, any negative response was related to the establishment of yet another layer of bureaucratic control by another powerful commission. It was acknowledged that such issues were important; that the Stormwater Committee was sensitive to concerns, and a major purpose of the meeting was to obtain an insight as to how to use the current structure of Town government where possible.

For Example, two Planning Board members Stuart Ivimey and Peter Pratt indicated that they had some, but not all, jurisdiction over neighborhood flooding issues during the site review process, but were powerless because recharge of Stormwater was not addressed completely in their regulations. It was suggested that the committee prepare additions to Planning Board regulations updating their requirements for managing stormwater.

Wayne Sawchuk painted an ominous picture of the impact the railroad would have on stormwater, indicating that the railbed was in effect a conduit; a 'French Drain' which is already rapidly conducting stormwater to the lowest places along the rail line.

Elm Street residents reported that their houses are now inundated by stormwater at every rain event; a condition which has only occurred with the completion of the MBTA rail bed. Several people spoke to the havoc being caused in Jacobs Meadow by the malfunctioning tide gates and the continuing buildup of water in the Elm Street area with water flowing out of catchbasins with every high tide.

John McNabb, Chair of the Committee, indicated that they had recorded and would carefully consider the various recommendations and prepare a final version of the draft Bylaw containing provisions for addressing the questions and concerns voiced at the meeting.

After all, everyone's home is his castle. But there shouldn't be a moat in the front yard.

Steve Bobo is a longtime member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Economic Development Committee can stick around, selectmen say

By Samantha Brown
STAFF WRITER

"My personal view is, we have a great tradition in this town of respect for the legal powers among our elected boards."
Peter Pratt, Ripley Road

The Economic Development Committee is here to stay at least for now. While Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt came before the Board of Selectmen last week (Monday, Feb. 5) as a private citizen and asked that it revisit the charge of the committee, the board took no action on the suggestion and praised the group for its efforts thus far.

The EDC is charged with coming up with recommendations for the Board of Selectmen to help increase commercial tax revenue coming into the town. It was the driving force behind the Transit Oriented District article, which passed at the 2006 Annual Town Meeting and will allow for the development of mixed-use buildings on the five acres next to the Greenbush train station on Route 3A. Most recently, the EDC has been working on changing zoning for the Village to allow mixed-use buildings with retail on the bottom and residences on the top.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said in the board's opinion, the EDC has some "very fine people working on it" and it applauds the group's efforts. He said at this point, the board does not want to change the charter for the EDC.

Pratt asked to be placed on the Selectmen's agenda as a result of the EDC's recent filing of bylaw changes to be included on the spring Town Meeting Warrant. The articles were submitted as a revised version of articles presented to and defeated by the fall Special Town Meeting. They would allow for the development of a new village business district with residential units on the second floor of downtown buildings, which the EDC believes could both increase tax revenue to the town and help keep the downtown area viable.

The Planning Board opposed the articles and it and the EDC were invited to discuss the matter with the Board of Selectmen Jan.22. At times the conversation was very heated. The Planning Board feels strongly that because Town Meeting voted to hire a consultant to study the downtown area before making permanent zoning changes, that should be done first. Some members felt the EDC had "stepped on its toes" by bringing the articles forward, as zoning is under its purview.

By the end of the Jan. 22 meeting the Selectmen agreed with the Planning Board that now is not the time to bring the articles forward. However, Pratt thought it might also be time to sunset the EDC, which was appointed on a temporary basis to advise the Board of Selectmen, or alter its charge, which was taken up Monday.

"Bylaw writing was not part of its charge," said Pratt, adding the EDC is merely supposed to serve as an advocacy group making recommendations to elected boards. "My personal view is, we have a great tradition in this town of respect for the legal powers among our elected boards," he said.

"No one has attempted to change the Village bylaws in the last 50 years," he said, adding the "business balance" in the Village is one of the oldest political arguments in town. While Pratt said the EDC has been instrumental in helping figure things out, "Writing bylaws…that is where the hard work is done," and he feels a conversation with elected board members should have been had about it before it was submitted.

The Selectmen thanked Pratt for his time and Dormitzer said, "I don't think we want to debate tonight, but we've heard what you've had to say."

"I appreciate your time," said Pratt.

As members of the board made a motion to adjourn the meeting, Pratt left the meeting room. EDC member Chuck Hurd was in the audience and asked to make a brief comment on the matter before the close of the meeting.

"As a volunteer, we've worked long and hard and I personally think it's offensive that a public official would come up and try to take that away. I applaud the board for backing us and we look forward to pushing forward as there are a host of things we have ambitions to do," Hurd said.

PSO announces annual Tele-a-thon and auction

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Parent School Organization Tele-a-thon and On-Line Auction will take place Thursday, March 22, from 7 to 9 p.m., and will be broadcast live from the Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium on Comcast Cable channel 22.

While viewing the talent show, tax-deductible credit card pledges can be called in to be entered into the raffles. AnswerQuick will take phone calls and securely processing credit card pledges for the fourth year in a row. The call in number to pledge support to the Cohasset public schools is 800-505-5241. To send a check instead of a credit card, make it payable to the Cohasset PSO and have it postmarked by March 20, in order to have your name entered into the raffles. Mail your pledge to Cohasset PSO , P.O. Box 30, Cohasset , MA. 02025.

Remember the larger the amount pledged, the more chances there will be to win raffle prizes. For example, for a pledge of $100, your name will be eligible for the drawing of all the $100 raffle categories. If your name is not drawn for any of the $100 raffle prizes, then your name is entered into the $75 raffle categories and so forth.

If multiples of $100 are pledged, your name is eligible for being drawn multiple times. For example, a $300 pledge allows your name to be entered three times in the $100 raffle categories and so forth. The more you pledge, the more opportunities you have to win.

There's still time to donate an item or service for the raffle or auction prizes to receive the extra advertising recognition by becoming one of their proud sponsors.

Last year, several callers pledged $300 to $500 and it paid off; they actually won several spectacular items. This year, they will also feature a Grand Prize for the $100 raffle category, which will be Boston Harbor Hotel's Romance Getaway Package. This gift certificate for $780 consists of a breathtaking room overlooking Boston Harbor, a pair of robes customized with your initials, which will be on the bed waiting for you, along with champagne and strawberries. You can enjoy dinner for two in their nationally-acclaimed four-diamond restaurant Meritage which will include a special romance price-fixed dinner including tax and gratuity.

Donations will be listed in the silent on-line auction. The on-line auction will open for biding Friday, March 16, at 9 a.m., and close Friday, March 16. Remember to bookmark http://psotelethon.cmarket.com/cohassetpso and get ready to bid high and bid often to support all of the students in Cohasset's public schools. They hope to get a few over bids this year, so let's get the bell ringing, as they do on WGBH telethon.

There's still time to donate an item or service for the raffle or auction prizes to receive the extra advertising recognition by becoming one of their proud sponsors. Simply send an e-mail to psotelethondonations@yahoo.com. Just include name, address, phone, item or service that you would like donate, as well as a retail value of the donation. To sponsor, at the cost of $350, contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125.

If interested in performing for the telethon send e-mail to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com with the performers name, age and talent act. No phone calls; only e-mail entries will be considered.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior sessions in January. All roll calls are from debate on the set of rules that the House will follow during the 2007-2008 session. The House adopted the package proposed by Democratic Speaker Salvatore DiMasi and rejected all the new rules proposed by the GOP minority. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

ADOPT LOCAL AID RESOLUTIONS EARLIER (H 2007)

House 19-132, rejected a new rule requiring the House to annually adopt by March 15 resolutions stating the minimum amount of local aid that the House will give to cities and towns for that year. Supporters of the new rule said that cities and towns often do not know how much local aid they will receive until the Legislature approves the state budget in July. They noted that most communities assemble their local budgets in March and can better prepare if they know how much local aid they will receive. Opponents of the new rule said that the House Ways and Means Committee has not even crafted a budget proposal by March 15 and noted that the Legislature informs cities and towns as soon as possible but should not have its hands tied by some arbitrary date. They also noted that the deadline would be meaningless unless the Senate is also required to set a figure by March 15. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring the House to state by March 15 the amount of local aid that it will give to cities and towns for that year. A "No" vote is against the March 15 deadline).

HOME RULE PETITIONS (H 2007)

House 19-135, rejected a new rule that would require home rule petitions to be sent directly to the committee that will consider the matter rather than to the Steering, Policy and Scheduling Committee. Home rule petitions are proposed laws that have already been approved by a local city or town but also require legislative approval prior to taking effect. Supporters of the new rule said that these home rule bills are very important to cities and towns and should not be delayed. They noted that referring a measure to the Democratic leadership-controlled Steering, Policy and Scheduling Committee simply delays action and sometimes even kills the bill. Opponents of the new rule said that all proposed bills are important and that making an exception for home rule petitions would set a bad precedent. (A "Yes" vote is for the new rule sending home rule petitions directly to the committee that will consider them. A "No" vote is against the new rule).

ELIMINATE CONFLICTS BETWEEN HOUSE SESSIONS AND COMMITTEE HEARINGS (H 2007)

House 19-135, rejected a new rule aimed at reducing the scheduling conflicts between formal House sessions and committee hearings. Formal sessions are ones at which important legislation is often considered by the full House and sometimes includes roll call votes. Current rules prohibit committee hearings "insofar as practical" from being scheduled at the same time as formal sessions of the House. The new rule would prohibit committee hearings from being scheduled at the same time as formal sessions unless there is an emergency and the chair of the committee submits to the House a written description of the emergency. Supporters of the new rule said that the current rule is weak and vague. They argued that legislators should not have to choose between attending an important committee hearing and a key meeting of the full House. Opponents of the new rule said that that it would only apply to a few House committees and not to joint House-Senate committees. They noted that the new rule should be considered when the joint rules of the House and Senate are considered. (A "Yes" vote is for the new rule prohibiting committee hearings from being scheduled at the same time as formal sessions unless there is an emergency. A "No" vote is against the new rule).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

INTERNET HUNTING - A bill filed by Sen. Robert Creedon (D-Brockton) would ban "internet hunting" - the practice of using a mouse click on a home computer to kill, via the Internet, confined animals on a distant game ranch. Trophy mounts of the animal are often prepared and shipped to the customer. Twenty-five states have already outlawed this controversial practice.

FINANCIAL LITERACY IN HIGH SCHOOLS - Rep. Brian Dempsey (D-Haverhill) filed legislation requiring public high schools to offer a course on personal financial literacy including consumer financial education, personal finance and credit issues. The measure also requires that a student pass the course in order to graduate.

NO PAY FOR COLLECTING SIGNATURES - A measure sponsored by Rep. James Fagan (D-Taunton) would make it illegal to pay anyone to collect signatures for an initiative petition. These petitions are proposals by citizens for laws or constitutional amendments that would go on the ballot for voter consideration if the necessary number of signatures is gathered.

REPLACE PROPERTY TAX WITH LOCAL INCOME TAX - Private citizen Leonard H. Golder of Stow has filed legislation allowing any city or town to replace its residential real estate tax with a local income tax.

GOV'S $19 MILLION SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET - Gov. Deval Patrick filed the first budget of his new administration - a $19 million supplemental package that he says will be paid for by a combination of new revenue and spending reductions. Provisions include $4.1 million for Emergency Assistance for the Elderly, Disabled, and Children; $2.7 million for family shelters; $1.1 million to fund National Guard patrols at the Pilgrim Power Plant; $5.7 million to fund collective bargaining agreements and elimination of the entire $5 million earmark for Tourism Massachusetts. Patrick spokeswoman Cyndi Roy said, "We don't believe that Tourism Massachusetts was doing the job that it was set up to do." Another provision would expand the scope of a Big Dig audit program to include cost recovery and management. Currently the program is limited to construction and safety matters.

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Outstanding Debt by Use

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Each category includes debt at the end of the year in and outside of the debt limit.

This chart shows the amount of debt that Cohasset has outstanding by use: building, equipment, school, infrastructure, short term notes and other. It also compares it to the outstanding debt for the median of its Benchmark Peer Group. Communities generally use debt to finance large capital projects like road, school or sewer construction. By considering the use of the outstanding debt, one can get a sense for resource allocations decisions that Cohasset has made.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series that is run when space is available.

Cohasset Postmaster James Poilto, left, Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, and Ann Marie Goff, who coordinates sending care packages to local troops in Iraq and Afghanistan, get ready to send off a 53 lb. box to Lt. Col. Chris Mahoney, USMC. The collection is ongoing. Items may be dropped off at the American Legion Post or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

Four hefty boxes were weighed and processed last Thursday at the Cohasset Post Office. The shipment is now on its way to Iraq. Wolf Cub Scouts collected a lot of the items for the Valentine mailing.

Last Thursday, Postal Clerk Peter LindFors checks the paperwork as he pulls the cart holding the four Valentine boxes that contain a range of personal care items and other goods for deployed troops. The boxes were expected to arrive in a week to 10 days. Cohasset Wolf Cub Scouts, who are all second-graders, helped collect toiletries, reading material, candy and other goods for the soldiers and Marines.

Postal Clerk Bonnie Meaney gets ready to attach a customs' label to one of four Valentine boxes being sent to the troops last Thursday. At right is Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, who helps organize the collection. The next shipment is slated for this spring. Items may be dropped off at the American Legion Post or at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FINDING A CAMP THAT'S A GOOD FIT

By Bette S. Bussel - Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

This is the perfect time of the year for families to do a little homework that can result in the happiest summer memories a child will ever have! First make the most important decision of all and choose camp among the many summer options competing for your child's enrollment. Camp gives kids a world of good! No child should go without a camp experience. Your willingness to explore camp options now means that come summertime, your camper could be making friends, toasting marshmallows, learning new skills and benefiting from the unique benefits only camp experiences can offer.

Following our tried and true guidelines can help you to identify the right camp—one that's a match for a child's current needs and interests. The American Camp Association, New England recommends four basic steps to a successful camp experience for your child:

1. Consider and list CAMP expectations for your child and yourself.
2. Explore CAMP options that might meet your search criteria
3. Decide on a CAMP
4. Prepare for CAMP

In this article, we'll take a look a look a Step #1. Next week, watch for Step #2.

Consider and list CAMP expectations for your child and yourself.

The ideal camp experience for your camper includes what? YOU have to fill in the blanks here. Parents, guardians, and children themselves are the experts on what's needed to round out the school year; relatives, coaches and counselors often assist.

Consider the following questions and make lists:

- What are your leading camp search parameters? Which are "non-negotiable" and which are "preferences"?
- What type of camp are you looking for? Day? Overnight /Resident? Trip & Travel? General? Specialty?
- Which of your family's values should be reflected in the camp philosophy? How religious? How competitive? How diverse? How much camper choice?
- What activities/programs interest you and your child? What level of intensity are you looking for? Are you looking for opportunities to try new activities, to play, to advance current skills, to practice, to compete or to specialize?
- What kind of facilities will your camper enjoy? Consider electricity, bathrooms, dining and the like.
- What session length, from 8 weeks to a few days, is comfortable for you, your child and your family's summer schedule?
- Most common session lengths include full season (7-8 weeks), half season (3-4 weeks), two weeks and one week.
- Remaining flexible about session length can increase your camp options.
- What camp clientele do you want to consider? There are camps for boys only, girls only, coed, brother/sister, religious groups, underserved populations, children with special needs.
- What is your budget for camp tuition?
- Camp remains an affordable option for most ever one. Some camps offer financial assistance. Financial aid procedures vary from camp to camp, so be sure to read camp literature and Web sites carefully or to ask.

Boys hoops season nears the end

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

For the second week in a row, the Cohasset High boys basketball team played had games on back-to-back days and then a third game three nights later.

To start off, Cohasset faced Norwell in which they were absolutely dominated in losing 56-37. The next day the Skippers played Nantucket and won a thriller, 59-56. Finally, Cohasset hosted Mashpee Tuesday night and were on the short end once again, 66-50.

Against Norwell, Cohasset was unable to match the Norwell's firepower and got down early. Head coach Dorian Bryant said of the Clippers, "They are a very, very good team with lots of shooters." All their shooters helped them to jump out to an early lead and control the game.

For Cohasset, it was more of a warm-up for the game against Nantucket, as the starters came off the floor early, along with senior co-captain Justin Alexander fouling out early. Despite sitting most of the second half due to the large deficit, junior and fellow co-captain Pat McCarthy put up 14 points.

The very next day the Skippers were forced to make a long trip all the way out to Nantucket to face the Whalers. Bryant said he was worried about the team's legs prior to and during the game, but that he was pleased with the way they played. The game was a tight one throughout as neither team was ever able to truly pull ahead.

Junior Kyle Pinkus was a key factor in the win as he was asked to guard Nantucket's top player. Against him, Pinkus put on a defensive show, allowing just one point in the second half.

As the game rolled on, it became more and more heart-wrenching, as both teams looked as though they could win. With Cohasset trailing by a basket with 14 seconds left, McCarthy was able to once again bail his team out by nailing a three-pointer to put his Cohasset's Ryan McLellan (119) has a hold of Scituate's Eric Palmer in the quarterfinals of Saturday's Div. 3 South sectional. McLellan would go on to win the championship, as did teammate Nick Cambi at 189.

Cambi, McLellan win sectional titles; team advances to Div. 3 South semis

The match of the day came at 125, where Cohasset senior Ryan McLellan pinned his opponent in the third period of a tied bout.

It's mid-February and as sure as the temperature is cold, the Cohasset High wrestling team is heating up.

After eight Skippers advanced from last Saturday's Div. 3 South individual sectionals to compete at this weekend's Div. 3 state tournament, the team dispatched Carver on Tuesday to advance to the sectional semifinals of the team dual meet tournament, where they will travel to face top-seed Rockland Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Cohasset took a 44-34 win over the Crusaders Tuesday. The match of the day came at 125, where Cohasset senior Ryan McLellan pinned his opponent in the third period of a tied bout. McLellan had faced the same wrestler at the sectionals three days prior, and beat him by just a point.

"That was a big match (Tuesday) because Ryan was losing for parts of it," said Skippers coach Torin Sweeney. "He came back to tie it, and then he got the pin. It was a very good, competitive match."

Just before McLellan's win, Stephen Gratta, the team's lone representative from Hull, also won by pin. Following the 125 match was a major decision victory, worth four team points, from sophomore David Toomey at 130. Those three wins turned a 22-12 deficit to a 28-22 Skippers lead.

Carver tied it with a pin at 135, but senior Adam Smith got the lead right back for Cohasset with a four-point major victory at 140. Sophomore Mike Froio (145) and senior Gannon Dorion (152) both pinned their opponents, with Dorion's victory clinching the team win for Cohasset.

Seniors Nick Cambi (189) and Steve Hurlbut (215) both also earned six points for the Skippers via pins. Cambi's win ran his record for the season to 38-2.

Several of those wins came last Saturday in Cohasset, where Cambi won the sectional cham-

A bevy of stars for Sci-Coh swimmers

By virtue of finishing first or second in their respective events at last weekend's Patriot League championships in Middleboro, 11 Sci-Coh swimmers are on this year's Patriot League All-Star team.

That list includes seven boys and four girls. The boys are Brian McGuiness, John McGuiness, Jonny Drybanski, Rob Lilly, Colin Conway, Mike Wall and Brent Daly. For the girls, it's Allison Costa, Megan Little, Torey Hart and Mimi Mahoney.

As a team, the boys and girls both finished second behind Duxbury. The boys missed by just 60 team points, with 35 of those points coming from diving events in which the Sci-Cohs don't compete.

Next up, 15 athletes (eight boys and seven girls) will compete at this weekend's sectionals at MIT. The boys will compete on Saturday from 4:15 to 7 p.m., with the girls going at the same time on Sunday.

One more win

Tournament berth was on line for CHS girls last night against Holbrook

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

"That would be a nice accomplishment for a very young team. It would be good to get them that experience."
Cohasset head coach John Levangie

It hasn't always been pretty for the Cohasset High girls basketball team, but one more win last night (Feb. 15) would make it all worthwhile.

In a game played after the Mariner went to press, the Skippers hosted Holbrook, a team they beat 52-17 in their season opener Dec. 7. Cohasset entered the game with a 9-10 record, meaning a win would give the team the .500 record necessary for making the Div. 4 state tournament.

"That would be a nice accomplishment for a very young team," Cohasset head coach John Levangie said Wednesday. "It would be good to get them that experience."

The girls earned win number-9 Tuesday night in Mashpee with a 61-35 romp over the Falcons. Sam Lehr dominated inside for a game-high 23 points, while Lacey Richardson had 11 and Haley Haracz finished with 10.

Levangie said his team was sluggish throughout the first half, but received a big boost when Carly Salerno hit a big three-pointer just before the halftime buzzer to give the Skippers a six-point lead going into the break. That lead quickly got into double digits, at which point Cohasset's press kicked in and took Mashpee out of the game.

Levangie said Sarah Coggins and Meredith Kelley provided a lift off the bench for Cohasset, particularly during its second half run. The coach also praised the play of his guards, Salerno and Kayla Farren, for limiting turnovers and setting up the Skipper offense.

The Skippers had lost three straight coming into the game, the last two on a brutal back-to-back adventure with Norwell and Nantucket. After losing to Norwell Friday, the team had to get on the bus early Saturday morning to get to the ferry that would bring them to Nantucket. Levangie said his team played fairly well against the Whalers – a team Cohasset beat at home a week before – but just ran out of steam in the second half.

Much of that would be forgotten, though, with a win over Holbrook last night. The MIAA will announce the tournament pairings next Friday.

team up by one. Cohasset was then able to force a turnover and send Alexander to the line, where he made both of his shots with only a second left on the clock.

Both McCarthy and Alexander had outstanding games as McCarthy put up 18 points and Alexander had 15. Sophomore Danny Martin helped out as well, contributing eight points to the win for the Skippers.

In their second to last game of the season, Cohasset faced off against a very tough Mashpee team. In the first five minutes both teams went back-and-forth and Cohasset led by one. As the half rolled on Cohasset was able to stay in the game with good defense and rebounding, but was never able to take a significant lead due to poor offensive execution. With a large contribution from junior Kenny Muir, who put up four points and played strong defense, the Skippers were able to stay even with the Falcons.

That is, until the final two minutes of the first half. In these two minutes alone, Mashpee was able to drain two huge three-pointers and eventually lead by 10 at halftime. Although he finished with 16 points, those points came too little, too late for McCarthy and his team, as he only scored one basket in the first half. Alexander, on the other hand, had himself a great first half, scoring 11 points en route to another 15-point game.

Although it was a disappointing loss, Cohasset was looking forward to its final game last night (Feb. 15) at home against Holbrook, the team they beat in their season opener.
